THE SEEING MIND

Some people go through life blind - is obvious makes its appeal. Moreover, unobservant people are generally bad judges of human nature. The small things which are so often an indication of character are not noticed. Thus the unobservant person is likely to be frequently deceived and disillusioned. From their earliest childhood boys and girls should be trained to see. It will prove invaluable to them in after life, and will make them altogether more alert and alive and interesting to themselves and others. Parents should see to it that both in the nursery and at school their children get a proper training in this respect.
