Warning

It has come to my notice that a number of fox breeders and speculators are selling foxes said to be of the original B. I. Raynor Stock. I take this opportunity of warning the public against any representations of this kind. I have control of the original B. I. Raynor strain of foxes. I claim they are pure P. E. Island stock; that I have never imported any stock and that all the foxes in each of the ranches established by me are of the original Island stock. Anyone claiming to have foxes of this strain should be required to give proof of their claims and I shall be pleased to substantiate or to refute, if necessary any such representations. Persons wishing to procure definite information on this subject are asked to correspond with me direct and I shall be pleased to reply with definite and incontrovertible proof. There are a few shares unsold in the Bridgetown N. S. Company which may be secured by applying direct to me. The ranch, like the Elmbury, is conducted under my own personal supervision and with exclusively guaranteed pure P. E. Island stock. B. I. RAYNOR Alberton

BAGPIPES ARE A LONDON CRAZE.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—There is a rush just now to learn to play the bagpipes. Moved by the example of the Prince of Wales, who has mastered it while at Oxford, a craze for learning to play Scotland's national musical instrument has sprung up, Americans being among the most eager students. "It takes the average person about six months to learn the pipes sufficiently well to play, say, a simple march on them." "The Barra Rocks of Arden" is generally one of the earliest tunes a pupil learns. Every tune must be memorized, of course. It is not at all necessary to know anything of music to learn the bagpipes. Several of my present pupils are army officers, and I have taught one woman. She is now making a lot of money as a piper on the music hall stage. Allen Doone, now making several hundreds of pounds a week as a piper in America, was also one of my pupils. I taught him to play what are called the "improved Scottish" bagpipes. "A pupil does not start off with the bagpipes. For the first month he learns to play the 'chanter,' a reed instrument. The 'chanter' is quieter and easier to handle than a full set of pipes, which weigh nine pounds. There are fourteen different parts in a set of bagpipes, and the wood used has to be seasoned, partly in oil, for about twelve months. Ebony, African black wood, and cactus wood are all employed in the making of bagpipes, the 'bag' is made of sheepskin." The Crown Prince of Montenegro is among the well-known persons for whom Mr. Strack has made bagpipes. Two hundred and twenty-five dollars is the price of the most expensive set of pipes he has made, these being made with ivory, silver, and gold. The ordinary retail prices range from $17.50 for a set of miniature or chamber pipes to $70 for a set of military pipes.
