"Nurse's Secret" Story Of Mystery Killer, At "Capitol"

A ruthless murderer who threatens an entire household is the theme of the thrilling new Warner mystery film, "The Nurse's Secret" which opens today at the Capitol Theatre. There are three different opinions concerning the death of a wealthy matron's nephew. In order to obtain more information on the activities of the family, Toomey has his girl friend, played by Lee Patrick, secure a position as nurse to Juliet Mitchell, portrayed by Clara Blandick, head of the family. Miss Patrick soon discovers that the criminal is exceptionally clever in covering up his tracks and she is so absorbed in trying to thwart him that she becomes involved in the poisoning of her patient. Having the added incentive of clearing herself of suspicion, Miss Patrick and Toomey are determined to leave no stone unturned in their efforts to trap the killer. Every member of the household has a motive for the crime and so ingenious is the criminal that Toomey and Miss Patrick are forced to carry out a plan that is fraught with danger in order to ensnare the murderer. Their path is a hazardous one and makes one of the season's most exciting pictures.

THE BIGGEST LAUGH OF THE YEAR — "THE PHILADELPHIA STORY" AT THE PRINCE EDWARD TO-DAY

If you want to laugh long, loud and often, take a tip and don't fail to see Cary Grant, Katharine Hepburn and James Stewart in "The Philadelphia Story", the comedy of the year, which opens today at the Prince Edward Theatre. It presents a dazzling new Hepburn as a comedienne of the first water, with versatile Grant and Stewart as her gay companions in a picture that is resplendent with brighter than any of recent memory.

From the moment Grant pushes Miss Hepburn in the face and walks out to become her ex-husband, the film moves with fast paced, breezy action, punctuated at intervals with surprise laughs, because this is a picture that follows none of the familiar formulas.

The setting is a Philadelphia home of the socially elite, and Miss Hepburn plays a girl of high ideas and no tolerance for human frailties, particularly in a husband. That's why she gets rid of Grant. He has a few faults. When Miss Hepburn meets a second husband, she chooses a stalwart man of the people, played to the hilt by John Howard Grant, realizing that she is making a mistake, causes a sensation by returning for the wedding. He brings with him Stewart, a reporter for a keyhole magazine, and Ruth Hussey, Stewart's girl friend. They proceed to make Miss Hepburn's life miserable, but she fights back until her own foot slips and she sees the light. It would be giving away a novel and clever plot to reveal which boy gets the girl. There is no one tap performance. The stars are perfectly cast and uniformly excellent, as are the featured players. Roland Young gives his usual fine performance as Miss Hepburn's slightly daffy uncle. John Halliday and Mary Nash are fine as her parents and in the original weaver scenes the laughs as the younger sister, who hears, sees and says everything she shouldn't. Adapted from Philip Barry's New York stage hit in which Miss Hepburn starred for fifty-two weeks on Broadway, the picture was brilliantly directed by George Cukor, who has a rare touch for comedy tempo. It was produced by Joseph Mankiewicz.

Funeral which was largely attended took place on Sunday, May 4th, with services at the home and the United Church, Crapaud, of which the deceased was a member. Rev. Ward McLean, Tryon, conducted the services, both at the home and at the church. By special wish of the deceased the United Church choir sang Rock of Ages, Shall We Gather at the River and Abide With Me. There are left to cherish his memory three brothers, Charles, Edward and Claude all of Crapaud, and two sisters, Mrs. Russell MacDonald, Carleton Place; Mrs. Ernest Inman of Tryon. Pall bearers were Messrs. Albert Storey, Fred Fall, Frank MacDonald, Louis Sherren, Fred MacDonald and John Hickox. The remains were temporarily laid to rest in the family plot in Crapaud Cemetery.

over these details furnished by Sir Archibald Sinclair, left the whole question of Hess's strange "visit" to Britain still up in the air.

When Sir Archibald was asked by a member of the House when the people of Britain might expect an official statement as to what's behind the whole Hess affair, Sir Archibald replied:—

"That's not a question for me to answer." A Defiant fighter was "hot on the tail" of Hess's Messerschmitt following it in the darkness when it ran away No. 3 Nazi bailed out. Defiant fired on the Hess plane but it was recalled that bullet holes were found in the tail of Hess's wrecked Messerschmitt. Sir Archibald then told of the encounter between the Duke of Hamilton and the strange prisoner.
