Ability To See Comfortably

The object of a modern eye service is to enable patients to see comfortably. That means seeing without strain on the eyes. And also the avoidance of many bodily results of eye strain. That thought deserves the consideration of all who are not certain of the condition of their eyes.

40th Wedding Anniversary

A very enjoyable social gathering took place Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Coffin, Cherry Hill, when upwards of 150 relatives and friends called at their home to honor them on the happy occasion of their 40th wedding anniversary.

During an evening of social intercourse and music the popular couple, who are indentified with all the activities of the community, were presented with an address of appreciation accompanied by a generous purse of money.

A dainty lunch was served by the ladies as the company recalled old times and old friends. Among those present was Mr. Urban Bambrick, Head of Hillsboro who had the honor of supplying the music at the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Coffin forty years ago and at this celebration was assisted by his son Ernest. Others helping out in the entertainment were Messrs. Lem and Roland Jay who were accompanied by Miss Webster of Cardigan on the Mandolin and needless to say the music was of the finest and a jolly dance ensued until a late hour.

Among the outside relatives attending were Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Coffin and son Lawrence and Mr. and Mrs. Everett Anderson of South Boston who motored here for the happy gathering.

The address read as follows:—

To Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Coffin, Cherry Hill, P. E. I.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Coffin:—On this the fortieth anniversary of your wedding day, your relatives and friends have assembled here to congatulate you on your journey thus far through life and to wish you many more years of happiness. In forty years there have been a great many changes, the old familiar faces are missing and have gone to their reward and a new generation has grown up to take their places. You have been blessed with a loyal family, most of whom reside in our own Province and who have the honor to be here on this happy occasion with the addition of all your grandchildren.

You have enjoyed a certain measure of prosperity as well as the disappointments that come to all in life and you can be thankful that your own immediate family circle is still unbroken and all in good health.

You have lived in this community all your life and have the love respect and esteem of all and we cannot let this occasion pass without showing to you in some tangible way our appreciation of your worth—so we ask you to accept this purse with the good wishes of all present.

The address was signed by all the guests present.

After the presentation, Rev. R. P. Murray of New Annan, N. S., and a former Minister of the congregation gave an appropriate address and aptly remarked that Mr. and Mrs. Coffin were always active in the things that were for the welfare of the community.

Mr. Coffin replied on behalf of himself and Mrs. Coffin very fittingly expressing his appreciation to those present for their thoughtfulness and acts of kindness. The company then sang For They Are Jolly Good Fellows and gave three cheers and a tiger and finished by bouncing Mr. and Mrs. Coffin.

Raspberry Marmalade

Raspberries make a nice marmalade alone, but the addition of one cup red currant juice to each two pounds of raspberries makes a delicious marmalade; boil for a half hour, mashing and stirring well (it is advisable to use a wooden spoon) add ¾ lbs. sugar to each lb. of fruit; and then cook 30 minutes longer.

Flies for Ethiopia

Former pilot in France's Lafayette Escadrille, Hal Du Berrier, above, has organized a similar unit of aviators to fly for Ethiopia, and two English, eight Americans and two French fliers are reported numbered in the group which has sailed from Paris for service. If war with Italy materializes, the adventures of these fliers of fortune are sure to furnish interesting news.

Peakes Hawks Win From Murray River

Slugging out a convincing 9-4 triumph over Murray River, the Peakes Hawks opened their defense of the Grant Cup in successful fashion Friday, as Souris advanced to the finals with a pair of hard-fought victories over Cardigan by scores of 5-2 and 5-4.

A feature of the Peakes win over Murray River was the power-house batting of the Peakes lineup, which collected 13 hits off Sam Lowe, Murray River hurler. Earle McDonald led the Hawk attack with two triples, a double, and a single, while his brother Jimmy smashed out a home run and a single. Dewar punched out three singles to lead the Rivermen at bat. Jimmy McDonald allowed 9 hits and struck out 18, while Lowe issued 6 passes and struck out 10. Peakes stole nine bases, while George Smith held the Murray River base runners in check, allowing only one steal.

Though Souris defeated Cardigan in two straight games, the series was extremely tight and both games were fought to the last inning. Cahill Cheverie led the Souris batting attack in the first game with three singles, while Sharkey smashed out a trio of hits for Cardigan. Souris decided the game in the fifth inning when they scored three runs on a pair of infield errors and two hits.

The second game, played at Cardigan, was a real thriller. Souris went into the eighth inning with a 5-1 lead, but Cardigan scored three runs when McNichol tripled, C. McDonald singled, Sharkey singled, and Cahill Cheverie threw H. McDonald's grounder wild. In the last half of the ninth, Cardigan loaded the bases with none out, but failed to score. Sharkey was the leading batter in the game, with a single and a double, while R. McNichol got a triple. Lavie led the Souris attack with three singles.

A TEMPERANCE ALPHABET

(Give each member a letter and let them repeat the line for which the letter stands for.)

A stands for Alcohol, deathlike its grip;
B for Beginner, who takes just a sip;
C for Companion who urges him on;
D for the Demon of drink that is born;
E for Endeavor he makes to resist;
F stands for Fiends who so loudly insist;
G for the Guilt he afterwards feels
H for the Horror that hangs at his heels;
I for Intention to drink not at all;
J stands for jeering that follows his fall;
K for the Knowledge that he is a slave;
L stands for Liquor his appetite craves;
M for convivial Meetings so gay;
N for No, that he tries hard to say;
O for the Orgies that then come to pass;
P is for Price that he drowns in his glass;
Q for the Quarrels that mighty abound;
R stands for Ruin that hovers around;
S stands for Sights that his vision bedims.
T for the Trembling that seizes his limbs;
U for the Usefulness sunk in the slums;
V for the Vagrant he quickly becomes;
W for Wanting of life that's soon done,
X for his Exit regretetd by none.
Y for the Youths who see weakness in crime;
Zealously turn from the tempter in time.

WHAT WORLD LEADERS ARE SAYING

There is a highly influential group in the Hub of the Empire who are voicing the unmistakable growing temperance sentiment in the Old Land. Lady Astor has expressed an old, old truth in the striking sentence: "Drink has demonstrated itself to be the enemy of mankind."

And English Statesmen are adding their lifelong observations on this subject. Lloyd George provides this testimony:

"If we are going to found the prosperity of the country—its commercial prosperity, its industrial prosperity—upon an impregnable basis, we must cleanse the foundations of the rot of alcohol."

Then Winston Churchill (ex-Chancellor of the Exchequer) adds:

"If you can succeed in reducing the enormous expenditure of our population on strong drink, every trade in the country will benefit."

The public is also informed that:

"The wine and spirit cupboard in the Sheriff's Room of Newcastle Town Hall, has been locked by the new Sheriff for a year. It is understood that he means to keep it locked."

Further:

"Cardiff's new Lord Mayor, Alderman Sanders, has banned liquor at all civic functions. 'People would think little of me,' he said, 'if at this stage I forgot my lifelong principles.'"

Do these leaders in many realms of state and thought know what they are saying? Public trust has given them places of responsibility—who will contend they are ignorant in this matter?

LIQUOR AND PROGRESS

By Dorothy E. Clarke, of the Commercial High School, Calgary, Alberta

If we are going to found the prosperity of the country, its commercial prosperity, its industrial prosperity, upon an impregnable basis, we must cleanse the foundations of the rot of alcohol. The prosperity of a country is directly dependent on its citizens—their perfect health, good character, and high efficiency. These are the three requisites for the success of the individual and therefore of the nation. All three may be destroyed simultaneously by one agent—alcohol.

Alcohol is a habit-forming drug, an acrid poison which insidiously eats away the very foundations of health. Indulgence by young people checks their normal growth and development. Indulgence by older people decreases their strength and shortens their span of life. Indulgence by any one reduces his resistance to disease, diminishes his power to combat an infection, and delays or prevents his recovery. In 1931 more people were killed by alcohol, than by typhoid, diphtheria, and influenza combined. Cardinal Mercier said in 1917 that "alcohol kills more men than war, and kills them all dishonorably." Insurance companies always set their premiums higher on non-abstainers' policies. Carefully compiled statistics show the risk on a moderate drinker to be eighteen per cent above normal, and on the steady moderate drinker eighty-six per cent above normal. Figures, if not words, prove that alcohol, the best preserver of dead bodies, is also the greatest destroyer of living ones.

Just as surely as alcohol enfeebles physical strength, it also ruins a man's self-respect and lowers his ideals. The very first glass of liquor starts to paralyze the critical faculty, so that an undistorted decision is impossible. Every successive drink further weakens self-control, so that regardless of everything—health, home, friends, position—the power to say "no" is quickly lost.

There are some who do not fall so low, but even the moderate drinker is paying in some way for his sensuous pleasure. In reality the surrender of one man makes many innocent people suffer, and that is the most criminal aspect of his case.

With his health and character thus blighted by alcohol, a non-abstainer cannot fill a worthy position in his community. Efficiency is the prime requisite of modern life. Alcohol destroys efficiency and therefore belongs to a slower moving age. With the invention of machinery, the need for absolute sobriety became imperative. An intoxicated man could doubtless use a flail a century ago; he cannot operate a combine to-day; what was possible in the days of the water-mill, is not possible in the age of the electric dynamo. Indeed any state of intoxication may render a man dangerous in a responsible position. One drink will destroy the nicety of co-ordination between brain, nerve and muscle, which is so necessary for accuracy. Many experiments have been made to compare the relative abilities of typists when they have taken a small quantity of alcohol, and when they are in normal condition. The results in every case are identical.

We have seen how alcohol destroys the physical health, the mental balance, the moral principles of the no-abstainer. Can a nation be composed of such weak, inefficient, individuals and yet be strong as a unit? That is absurd. The argument usually offered is this: that alcohol helps a nation by pouring revenue into her vaults. It is true that this revenue comprises a large percentage of the country's total income. But let us add that for every dollar received by the government on liquor sales, seven dollars is expended in maintaining penitentiaries, children's shelters, etc. A survey of such institutions has revealed that eighty-five per cent of the inmates are there as a direct result of liquor consumption. An apparent gain of seven dollars is really a loss of six dollars. In 1929 Ontario's liquor bill was seven and a half million dollars greater than the total of all the other items such as education and the upkeep of hospitals. Is this state economy? For every million dollars invested in the distilling industry, only thirty-eight persons are employed. The same capital invested in the clothing industry would employ 642 people.

Statistics prove that when judged only from the hard dollars and cents standpoint, alcohol and prosperity do not go hand in hand. In addition we must admit that the strictly material aspect of the liquor problem in the least costly. Should we make our brains serve as refuse containers into which to pour the scum of the earth's products? We would never think of pouring sand in the bearings of an engine. Then why handicap our bodies which are much more delicate and vulnerable than the most intricate piece of machinery? Scientific leaders of all industries realise that alcoholic indulgence is a menace to civilization. A nation can attain commercial and industrial prosperity in only one way—by overwhelming the forces of alcohol.

Old Clipping Shows Australian Woman Bore Quintuplets In 1878

Are the Dionne quintuplets the only five who lived sufficiently long to take the first tottering footsteps of childhood? The question arises as the result of a discovery in an old scrapbook kept by the late Alfred Hirst, traveller, soldier, policeman and collector of odd and curious things, who passed his last days at 3635 St. Famille street, Montreal.

The record, a clipping from the San Francisco Chronicle of nearly 60 years ago, treats of the birth of quintuplets to the wife of a South Australian farmer called Jacob Schuler, a German settler who with many compatriots farmed a tract of land about 30 miles from the town of Kapunda.

Mrs. Schuler is reputed to have been an enormous person, "standing six feet four in her stockings and turning the balance at exactly 244 pounds seven ounces." She had already given birth to at least five children, including two pairs of twins, "a fact deemed of so little importance in her remarkable efforts to ncrease the population of her adopted country," states the chronicler, "that no exact dates of the occurrences were made." However, the report continues:—

"Her crowning effort, and one that would, had she lived in America, at once given her the title of the champion child-producer, took place in October, 1878. She gave birth to three boys and two girls. It appears from published accounts that Mrs. Schuler was at work about the house preparing her husband's dinner, when she was compelled on account of indisposition to retire to her couch. Her mother called the husband from his work in the barn, and he, in turn, dispatched a boy employed about the place for a Mrs. Haines, who acted occasionally as a midwife.

"This woman lived about five miles away; and, though she knew what she was wanted for and hastened accordingly, she did not reach the residence of Schuler until two children had been born. There was ample need of her services, however, for three more little ones were added to the Schuler family. Every one present appears to have been greatly astonished, for though Mrs. Schuler already had made a reputation in this line, so great an event was altogether unexpected.

"The father of the five is said to have sat down stupidly and mechanically gazing from one infant to the other, simply muttered, 'Mein Gott! Mein Gott!' There were three boys and two girls, but no facts as to their weight and appearance immediately after birth are given. All of them are alive and are said to be very healthy."

The story goes on to relate that a sixpenny subscription was opened in the district for the infants, and it was suggested that it would equal, and probably exceed $10,000. A full account of the case was transmitted to the Secretary for the Colonies in London, at the time. A footnote concludes: "Michael Hegarty, the Australian Barnum, is said to have offered Mr. Schuler $250 a week and all expenses of himself, wife and five children to travel but the offer was declined."

Raspberry Jam

Wash the berries, put them over the fire and boil gently a half hour, keeping them constantly stirred. Allow ¾ lb. sugar to 1 lb. fruit, remove the berries from the fire, add the sugar, and then boil them again a half hour. Then put in sealers. If two parts raspberries and one part red currants are used, a very nice jam is the result. Also instead of the currants a little currant juice may be used.

The Murder At Hazelmoor

"No, sir, not a word."

"There was nothing unusual or different in any way in his manner?"

"No, sir, not that I could see."

"Ah! Now I understand, Evans, that you have lately got married."

"Yes, sir, Mrs. Belling's daughter at the Three Crowns. Matter of two months ago, sir."

"And Captain Trevelyan was not overpleased about it."

A very faint grin appeared for a moment on Evans' face.

"Cut up rough about it, he did, the Capting. My Rebecca is a fine girl, sir, and a very good cook. And I hope we might have been able to do for the Capting together, but he—he wouldn't hear of it. Said he wouldn't have women servants about his house. In fact, sir, things were rather at a deadlock when this South African lady came along and wanted to take Sittaford House for the winter. The Capting he rented this place, I came in to do for him every day ,and I don't mind telling you, sir, that I had been hoping that by the end of the winter the Capting would have come round to the idea; and that me and Rebecca would go back to Sittaford with him. Why, he would never even know she was in the house. She would keep to the kitchen, and she would manage so that he would never meet her on the stairs."

NEW HATS

The Venetian tricorne in black velvety-velour, having a pointed line dipping over the right eye, achieved by folding back the sides of the hat body, and trimmed with an upstanding swirl of glycerined ostrich, is worn with a black crepe long tunic dress with round white braided crepe collar. This hat, shaped deep at back, is fastened to the coiffure by two small pearl-headed hatpins, a feature which millinery authorities remark as a revival.

In black felt, the sausage-like rolled brim hat with head-conforming crown is observed, trimmed with evenly shirred grosgrain ribbon on the under side of the brim.

Raspberries Canned

Raspberries and currant juices make a very nice combination, allowing one cup currant juice and one cup sugar to each quart of raspberries; add the juice and sugar to the berries, bring to boil and put in sealers.

You may also can the raspberries and currants, using half and half fruit.
