PROF. Caesar Emmanuel St. Omer, of Charlottetown, who claims to be the champion colored bicycle rider of the Maritime Provinces, writes the Wanderers asking that a quarter or half mile race between himself and a Halifax colored rider be arranged from the Wanderers sports. H. C. McLeod's sloop yacht Gloria put in here, this afternoon from Toronto to go in slip for repairs having started leaking badly. She has been cruising about P. E. THE August Magazine Number of The Outlook, in addition to six or eight usually strong articles dealing with educational topics, contains another illustrated installment of Jacob A. Riis's "The Making of an American"; the continuation of "The Man from Glengary," by Ralph Connor, author of "Black Rock" and "The Sky Pilot"; a richly illustrated account of a visit to Sienkiewicz the Polish novelist, by Louis E. Van Norman; full-page portraits of the late John Fiske, Governor Taft of the Philippines, and others. ($3 a year. The Outlook Company, 257 Fourth Avenue, New York.)

The St. John Telegraph says.—Mr. Collingwood Schreiber, deputy minister of railways, returned from an official inspection of the Intercolonial. The business at Sydney was progressing and the future for Cape Breton was bright. On the Cape Breton line out of 96 miles, 84 were laid with heavy rails. The building of ferry landings at Mulgrave and Point Tupper on the Straits of Canso was going ahead satisfactorily. At St. Lawrence a new engine house was being constructed to accommodate 24 engines. The new engines on the route are doing good work. They draw from 800 to 1,000, while the train load of the old engines was from 180 to 300 tons. The through train service, Mr. Schreiber says, is giving great satisfaction, made up as it is of powerful engines and modern cars. The road throughout is in good condition and seems to be doing a good passenger business. This was also the case with the P. E. Island Railway.

OTTAWA, July 31.—It is said that the government is likely to protest against the utilization of imperial funds for the purpose of inducing emigrants from the British Isles to go to South Africa. The contention is that if government assistance was given the emigrants it would have a material effect upon the trend of settlement in Canada.

Following the testimony of which a brief abstract has been given, came that of David Hume, James Livingston, Peter Mathieson, Cephas Davy, John Lemon and Isadore Martin.

David Hume of Peters Road, did not vote at the election, but testified that he was treated on election day by Dr. Barnes and Arthur Brehaut, and he got a bottle of liquor from the latter.

James Livingston, Murray River, voted for Bruce, and had a drink from Cartney McLure on election day, and, also a flask from which witness treated three electors, John Bonnell, John McKenzie and George MacKenzie.

Peter Mathieson of Dover voted for Bruce and got a drink from Cartney McLure on election day.

Cephas Davy testified that he voted for Bruce; got liquor from John Lemon on election day at Lemon's house, and had some from William Lemon two days before. On cross-examination he said that this did not influence his vote.

John Lemon testified that he did not know any one he treated. There were parties at his house to dinner and likely he treated them. The bottle was on the table. He bought the liquor, also got some he did not pay for—got it at his brother's, in the cellar. There was more there. Drank with Alder Brehaut in Georgetown a week before election. He was canvassing for Bruce.

Isadore Martin testified that he had some liquor in the barn during the election. He got it at Georgetown depot, and gave for it an order which he got from a boy on the street. The boy lives at Montague Bridge. Had not seen him before nor since. The boy was about five years of age. The liquor was in a barrel. The boy said, "take this note and go to Georgetown station." He did not open the paper. It was the evening before the election. The Government was to pay him for going to Georgetown. He got $3.50 for it, which some man in Charlottetown paid him. He put the whiskey in the coach house. Mr. Brehaut gave him a few bottles and took the rest. A barrel as large as a flour barrel was full of bottles. He helped Brehaut put them in the sleigh, under the seat. Brehaut went towards the south. It was the night before the election, Brehaut asked him if that was the barrel he got in Georgetown? Witness was paid by post office order, Mr. Inman told him the name of person to send the bill to. He could not spell the party's name. He was paid three weeks ago.
