THE MORNING GUARDIAN

SATURDAY JULY 7, 1900.

A FARMER'S WIFE SPEAKS.

"A Farmer's Wife" desires THE GUARDIAN to say something on behalf of herself and her sisters, the wives of other farmers in this fair Island, "just to set some people thinking a little," as she puts it. We have concluded to let her speak for herself, and it may call forth some thoughts among those who read, just the same. Here is what she has to say:

"I am a married woman, have been married twenty years and have a husband and six children. We are not poor, in fact we are what country people call 'comfortably situated.' My husband is a good man in almost every sense of the word, industrious, kind and cheerful, a lover of his home. My children are intelligent and dutiful. We all have plenty to eat and wear and enjoy the respect of those about us. You may ask, what can a woman want more? I am certainly not worse off than many of my neighbors and acquaintances, and I try to be thankful.

"But I do want a rest. I have not had a genuine holiday in twenty years, unless it was a Sunday School picnic and then the work of preparation, the care of the little ones and the basket and table left me a little more tired on my return than I was before I went. I sometimes read in THE GUARDIAN about city people going off on two or three weeks holidays and I wonder what it must be like. The school teacher gets holidays. The preacher, too, I am glad to notice, gets an occasional rest. But when does the farmer's wife get a holiday? In the city I suppose people rest on the Sabbath. But with the farmer's wife there are just as many meals to cook, just as many dishes to wash, as many cows to milk, as many beds to make on Sundays as on week-days. There is less of other work. Fortunately the baking, washing, scrubbing, sweeping mending, quilting etc., are not permitted to intrude upon the Sabbath. But the children have to be got ready for church and Sunday school, and where is the rest? I sometimes think of it when in church we sing, 'Welcome sweet day of rest.'

"I like to work, was brought up to work, and I feel that I would be lost without something to do. I have no distaste for the work that falls to a farmer's wife; in fact I rather like it and it is the only work I can do. Fortunately I am mostly well and strong, but the work never ends! It goes on from four or five o'clock in the morning till ten at night and there seems to be always more than can be done. I don't think any servant works so hard as the farmer's wife. We work, eat and sleep. I used as a girl to enjoy the beautiful sunsets, the bright sky, the fleecy clouds, the pretty birds and flowers. I feel that I could still enjoy them if I had time to look at them but time I really have not. We work, eat and sleep. Bye and bye we will rest—over in the churchyard!

"Now don't think I'm melancholy. I am not, but I fear if I were sick, or had not the good strong constitution and a cheerful spirit that I might become so. I read once in THE GUARDIAN that the class which contributed most inmates to the lunatic asylums was young farmers' wives. I think I can understand why that is, and that it ought not and need not to be so. You see there is no promotion, no increase of salary, no hope of an easier and better job, such as men work for and hope to attain to—only more work and less rest as the family increases, more sweeping and mending, and all for love! I am glad to say this last great reward is not denied me but not all can say that.

"If all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, as the old proverb has it, how about Jack's mother? What I want THE GUARDIAN to do is to ask every farmer on this Island to take an early opportunity to surprise his wife with a holiday,—a real genuine holiday for a week at least, in which she shall have nothing to do but rest. And promise her the same next year at some time, say in June or July, when rest is really enjoyable. By a little forethought, it seems to me this might be done, and then perhaps we might also all along try and mingle a share of rest and recreation with our work. That would make farm life brighter. Perhaps it might help to keep our boys and girls on the farm. Only the other day my oldest son was saying to me, 'I will not be a farmer. I will never ask any woman to be my wife with the prospect of having to work the way my mother does, with never an hour's rest.' He has gone to the States."

According to a telegram in the Patriot of yesterday the Emperor of China has been "abolished." The Examiner has it that he has been "absolved." The Patriot also announces in its Ottawa despatch that "Hon. Mr. Mulock has introduced a bill reducing the rate of postage on newspapers " to eight cents per pound." Such a "reduction" would make the rate many times as great as it is at present.

The newspaper class in geography that has been drilled for six months on South African and Dutch names are suddenly called to study Boxers instead of Boers, the map of Asia instead of Africa and Chinese lingo instead of Dutch. Here are a few geographical terms translated into familiar language:

Shan means kopje.
Ling means nek and berg.
Kiang, ho, shui and ki, mean spruit.
Hu means vlei.
Cheng means burg or dorp.

There are 7 doctors in the Dominion Senate, 17 in the House of Commons, 6 in the Ontario Legislature, 5 in the Legislative Council and 7 in the Legislative Assembly of Quebec, 1 in the Legislative Council and 1 in the Assembly of Nova Scotia, 1 each in the Legislatures of British Columbia and the Northwest Territories, a total of 46. The late Legislatures of Manitoba and New Brunswick, and the present Legislature of P. E. Island have contained no members belonging to the medical profession.

Did it ever strike the reader that in this North American continent we are in the most progressive quarter of the world? We know how Canada is booming along. The United States is by no means a slow-going Republic. And there is Mexico, which without making any fuss about it has, within the past nine years, doubled its revenues, doubled its exports, doubled the number of its factories and multiplied its banking capital by three. As half the continent belongs to us Canadians it is satisfactory to know that the spirit of progress prevades the whole of North America from the isthmus to the pole.
