SMILES

EASY TO PROMISE

Hubby: I want you to promise not to wear short skirts any longer.
Wife: Willingly. I'll promise not to wear them any longer than I'm wearing them now.

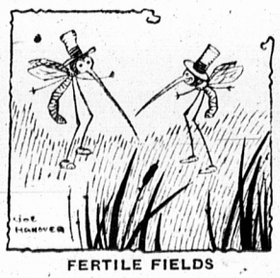
COMPLETING THE PICTURE

She: If I'm as pretty as a picture don't spoil the effect by handling, please.
He (tightening his hold): But you need framing, my dear.

AIN'T HE IGNORANT?

"That prima donna has a very large repertoire."
"Yeh! 'S funny how all them opry sniggers is fat like that."

He: What you need is a mashie.
She: I've plenty of mashes here without you.



FERTILE FIELDS

Mosquito: We'll have a fine time this summer, old man. The girls are rolling their stockings lower, and wearing their skirts higher than ever!

WOMAN COULD HARDLY WALK

Mrs. Horn Tells how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health

Hamilton, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and would not be without it now. I had a female trouble so badly I could hardly walk and I was all run-down and could hardly get around to do my housework. I would be in bed three or four days at a time. I was told by a friend to try your Vegetable Compound. I did, and by the time I took two bottles I was beginning to get around again. I took ten bottles in all, and now I am all right again and doing my own work. I have six grown-ups to work for, so I have plenty to do. I also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash, and I think it is good. But I owe my health to the Vegetable Compound, and I think if more of it was used women would be better off. I would not be without it if it cost much more."—Mrs. NELLIE HORN, 28 St. Matthews Avenue, Hamilton, Ontario.

Do you feel broken down, nervous and weak sometimes? Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is excellent to take at such a time. It always helps, and if taken regularly and persistently, will relieve this condition.

"The Revealing Romance of a Flapper's Adventures on Life's Highway"

"Can it be possible that 'Noble Nan' (as the lady is sometimes called) has been supplanted by a blonde interloper of unknown origin, who is said to be carrying on all the best traditions of the Ryeneck nid d'amour, to the satisfaction of the capitalist?

"If so we can only comment; Poor Nan! Lucky blonde interloper!"

Often Barbara had enjoyed the spicy tidbits served to readers of Town Tattles. They were funny when they were about other people. Now the breakfast tray, lying close to her side on the counterpane, suddenly disgusted her. She let the copy of Town Tattles fall and rubbed her hands with a gesture of washing.

She caught a glimpse of herself in the long glass against the wall. What she had seen had been unpleasant, more unpleasant than any of the multitude of passionate doubts which had assailed her during the weeks she had spent as Hardiman's untouched chattel in the house at Ryeneck; more unpleasant even than th evenomous squib she had just read.

But one thing she knew she had—courage, the daring to cross swords with herself. She might have wept, raged further. She did neither. She sat down cross-legged on the carpet to inspect her suspected self.

She thought:

"I'm vile myself. I'm in this room, this house, under false pretenses. How long would I stay here if Hardiman knew as certainly as I know that he'll nevere collect for what he's paid ten times over?"

Not long, she decided. In a fury of debasement she saw herself as actually loathsome.

"I'm worth nothing better than what he offers. Less than that! I'm trash. That's what I am. I can't get three square meals a day without cheating for them. If an accident of nature had not made me a girl, and a pretty one, I'd be lucky to be a street-sweep. I've lived eighteen years and all I can do that a street-sweep can't is speak a hundred words of French and manage an artichoke hollandaise."

Her mood was full of danger to herself. It was the mood which Hardiman was awaiting.

Rigid, she flung herself face down on the velvet carpet and wept.

Thus Hannah found her and gently lifted her up. The housekeeper made clumsy clucking sounds. Barbara struggled to regain her composure.

"There, there," soothed Hannah. "I know just how you feel."

"Yes," Barbara spoke dryly. "And what would you advise me to do?"

"There's only one thing for you to do. Mr. Hardiman—"

"Mr Hardiman!" She spoke the name bitterly.

"Is Mr. Hardiman married?" Hannah was silent. Who lived here before Mrs. Adams? Another? And another? How many altogether?"

"I can't give you any information I'm employed by Mr. Hardiman and—"

"And you advise me to—be a good girl, and—give in?"

"You might do worse," said the housekeeper.

From a distant corner of the house both of them heard the faint buzz of a phone.

"That's your phone," said Barbara. "It's Mr Hardiman calling."

"Yes, its Hardiman calling."

"Yes, it's Mr. Hardiman. The gaunt woman spoke grimly. "What shall I tell him?"

"Tell him—tell him that the colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady are not alway sisters under the skin."

"That doesn't make any sense," snapped Hannah. "Who's Judy O'Grady?" Barbara laghed. Her grouch was gone. "Is that your real name?"

The phone buzzed again. Hannah didn't wait for an answer. She was gone.

What a Price Glory?

J. B's. offices sprawled over an entire floor in the Colonies building in Broad street.

"Pike's Peak or bust!" Barbara's exclamation was squeezed from her by the comet-like start of the elevator up the white shaft.

With an unconsciously important air she approached the door which was discreetly lettered: "J. B. Hardiman & Co." She knew that this huge humming pile of brick typewriters, machinery and men was but a small part of the possessions of the covetous overlord who was negotiating for herself.

The offices were austerely magnificent.

The place was lush with evidence of wealth. The rugs were thick, the woodwork mahogany, the etchings on the walls masterpieces and undecipherable. From a corridor came the sound of a stock ticker. Messenger boys crossed the halls with yellow envelopes, batches of them, fistfuls.

"I'm Miss Brown," Barbara announced herself in her return. J. B's. orderly remained glacial.

"Oh, yes!" He was a polite automaton. "Mr. Hardiman expects you. Come with me please."

In his office J. B. was far away over a meadow of carpet. He rose to greet her fondly. She was a bit prideful when he talked into a telephone to say "I'm out to everybody for the rest of the afternoon"

"Your majesty," she began.

"No, no," he deprecated. "It I must have a title let it be Lord High Executioner."

"Have you lopped off somebody's head?"

He took hold of her arms and sat her down in a chair next his own. She made herself demure and meek. It would no doubt tickle the fancy of this master of men to play for a while a master of women too.

"I have clipped claws a bit," he qualified.

"A lion's?"

"Only a skunk's.

He did his best to summon the Hardiman eagle glance. Indeed, he succeeded. "Thats a way of saying I took someone off the payroll.

"A bit of manicuring?" she ventured.

"A bit o.f money-curing," he bellowed. His laugh was his own vociferous applause. "You sharpen my wits," he chuckled. "Manicure—money-cure. I must remember that."

"What great big offices you have——" She was about to finish, "Grandpa," but stopped in time.

"The better to——"

"To awe me with? When I got here I thought I'd find an office. I find a city of offices. If you ever want to get rid of me——"

"Never, never." He was hugely sentimental.

"But, if you did, you could leave me to find my way out of here alone. I'd get lost and die eventually before an empty water cooler of thirst and starvation."

"We shall dine presently." He was very literal.

"I didn't mean that as a hint," she protested. "Oh, J. B., I'm frightfully afraid of you."

"Why?"

"You're so—so—big, so powerful, so successful." Her look was round-eyed adulation.

"Thank you." He preened himself. "If I am it is because of one thing. One quality. The quality that stands between success and failure."

"Tell me," she implored.

"That quality," he said, "is the ability to make up my mind. If you want success in life you must learn first of all, to make up your mind. Be sure you are right, and then"——

"Go ahead?"

"Go ahead."

He regarded her, possessively, appraisingly.

"You look pale"

"Do I? Perhaps I'm hungry."

He rose to put on hat and coat. Barbara perked up. She would enjoy the stroll back over the route through the maze of offices by which she had come. In the effulgence of his power she would, for a moment, shine with reflected glory. What price glory?

J. B. disappointed her. He led her to a small door and they were abruptly in the general hall. He pressed a signal button and as if by magic an elevator door instantly opened. Down. The indicator registered the insistent demands of other floors below the 26th, but the operator heeded them not, for J. B. was passenger and the street floor first stop.

Sharkey sat erect at the wheel of the limousine, brazenly parked against a "No Parking" sign. The car slid along the grand canyon of Wall St. Other automobiles it honestly seemed, made way for her glistening chariot.

At the Broadway corner the traffic signal registered "Stop" until they eased into position for the turn. The officer touched his hat and switched it to "Go!"

"I suppose I'll have to, sighed Barbara to herself.

ROULEAU TO BE TRIED FOR MANSLAUGHTER

QUEBEC, May 27.—On four charges of manslaughter arising out of the drinking tragedy which occurred in Levis on May 5th when five citizens of that place succumbed to methylated spirits poisoning, Philippe Rouleau, of Levis, was committed for trial at the October sitting of the Court of King's Bench by His Honor Judge Lachance in the Court of Sessions today.

Rouleau was committed for trial in connection with the deaths of Pierre Gagnon, Gaudias Gagnon, Louis Bernier, and Francois Poliquin.

A fifth manslaughter charge arising out of the death of Arthur Poliquen also lies against the accused. Preliminary investigation in this latter case will continue before Judge Choquette in the Court of Sessions tomorrow.

Hartnett's Win At Portland

(Canadian Press)

The Portland Press, describing the recent victory of Joe Hartnett, popular Halifax boxer, over Gene Mars, of Milford, Mass. says::

"In Hartnett, Chick Hayes presented a boy who has one of the fastest right hand punches that has been seen for some time. Mars, forcing his way in, ran into this repeatedly, and only the wonderful stamina of the Milford boy saved him from permanent defeat in the early rounds. As it was, Harnett's right flamed forth in the second, and Mars landed three feet away on the ropes, rocking.

"Hartnett did little leading, being content with nailing Mars as he forced hs way forward. Time and again the right shot out and pinned a welt on Mars' chin or body, but the Bay Stater kept boring in and taking them. Hartnett led at last in the fifth, driving Mars across the ring, and pumping the right to his face twice. Mars manoeuvred off the ropes and backed Hartnett towards a corner, but his first blow landed foul and Hartnett, hurt, could not continue."

Premier's Motion Likely to Start Important Debate

(Canadian Press)

OTTAWA, Ont., May 28.—Premier King is bringing down a motion in the House which will recognize the principle that before ratification of a treaty is advised by the Canadian government such ratification must first receive the approval of the Canadian parliament.

The motion is likely to precipitate an important debate on the whole question of international relations. It has been the practice in the last few years for the Canadian Government to submit treaties to parliament before ratification but so far there has been no formal motion by the House expressing the view that such a course should be followed.

So far as information is available, Premier King's motion will carry the principle of formal parliamentary approval further than it has been carried in Great Britain or in any of the dominions.

She Had Suffered Since Childhood

Newfoundland Lady Found Relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. L. Best Had Suffered From the Age of Ten Years From Bladder Trouble.

Southern Harbour, Nfld., May 31. —(Special)—Once again Dodd's Kidney Pills have proved their inestimable value of suffering women. Mrs. L. Best of this place suffered with bladder trouble since she was a child. She writes: "I have had bladder trouble since I was ten years of age. I was treated by doctors until I was thirty and was only better for a short time. My husband told me how Dodd's Kidney Pills had relieved him so I bought five boxes. I am better now."

It is on account of the good work that Dodd's Kidney Pills do, that they occupy such a prominent place in the family medicine chest. So many of the ordinary every-day ills come from sick kidneys. Rheumatism, bladder and urinary troubles, backaches, diabetes and heart disease can be traced directly or indirectly to sick kidneys.

To be assured of real good health, keep the kidneys sound by using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

BATHS

SPLASH! Splash! Splash! Flutter! Splash!

A big, fat Robin was taking a bath in the bird-pan. Betty and Billie watched him throw water over his back and dip his head in. Every time he did this he looked up so surprised! His round, bright eyes looked first at Betty and then at Billie. Then he hopped upon the edge of the pan and let his tail feathers hang in the water.

"Let's be Robins tonight when we take our baths!" Billie said.

"Oh! Yes!" Betty laughed, "and then the Mama-bird will come and say 'What a lot of splashing, my Birdies!'"

Imperial Puppy Meal

This popular "Imperial" product is giving excellent results in our ranches this spring. The ranchers, using it, report splendid progress in growth of their young foxes and are ordering large quantities.

IMPERIAL PUPPY MEAL is first baked as a biscuit from our scientifically prepared and tested Puppy Food formula and then ground into a coarse meal by a special machine recently installed for this purpose. It is ready for feeding and only requires the addition of milk to form a properly balanced diet on which the young foxes thrive most successfully.

IMPERIAL PUPPY MEAL and IMPERIAL FOX BISCUITS contain the nutritional requirements of the young foxes and adults and their liberal use will ensure healthy, vigorous foxes.
