STUDY IV. OCTOBER 22nd JEREMIAH JOBLING

Once upon a time there was a man called Jeremiah Jobling, but he was much nicer than that in reality. He was hard-working and not a bit extravagant, and by the time he was beginning to grow stout and bald he had quite a lot of money saved up in the bank.

"I can afford to set up in business for myself now," said he; "I think I shall keep a shop."

The news soon spread through the town, and in the six or seven days that followed he had several visitors in consequence.

"The first to come was Mr. Mineshaft. "I hear you mean to open a shop," said Mr. Mineshaft.

"That's so," said Mr. Mineshaft. "People must have fires to keep them warm and cook their food, so in selling coal you'll not only do yourself a service but make a living, you'll do your customers a service by providing them with something they need."

"That's a fact," said Mr. Jobling. "I've just started, and I'd like to feel that I was doing my duty by others as well as by myself, especially when times are so bad."

"And while times are bad there's another reason for selling coal and coke. Every $5,000 you spend buying them, and every $5,000 you give to five men and a boy, to put it neatly."

"Excellent!" exclaimed Mr. Jobling. "I think, as a conscientious man, I couldn't do better than decide to have a coal-yard."

But just at that moment in came Mr. Potandpans.

"I hear you mean to open a shop," said Mr. Potandpans.

"That's so," said Mr. Mineshaft. "People must have fires to keep them warm and cook their food, so in selling coal you'll not only do yourself a service but make a living, you'll do your customers a service by providing them with something they need."

"That's a fact," said Mr. Jobling. "I've just started, and I'd like to feel that I was doing my duty by others as well as by myself, especially when times are so bad."

POST GUIDES

October begins a new year for the first Prince Edward Island Post Guide Company. It's FOURTH year. We have a list of seventeen names, all in the Company for one or more years. The leaders have been trying to visit all their Guides this fall and have done well, considering the public admitted the resulting "Melbourne sale" was exceptional.

STUNG TO ACTION

MELBOURNE, Australia—(CP)—Criticized for "overstuffing" their window displays instead of leaving them "bare but beautiful" in the American manner, Melbourne shopkeepers started a campaign of identification and the public admitted the resulting "Melbourne sale" was exceptional.

HEADS FIGHTING CZECHS

PARIS—(CP)—The Czech Legion recently formed in France is to have General Faucher, the French soldier who helped organize the Czech army, on their staff. Faucher spent 15 years in Czechoslovakia.

What Does It Matter, by Margaret Baker.

STUDY IV. OCTOBER 22nd, 1939 A GOOD TIME WITHOUT ALCOHOL (Intermediate Senior) BY EDITH LANG.

Many of the problems concerning alcoholic beverages are hoary with age, but the young people of today have some of their very own, namely, the prevalence of social drinking, the temptations of the beverage rooms, and the pressure of the liquor traffic. Concerning social drinking, you may be up against it, any time. At parties you may be offered cocktails, beautiful to look at, served in sparkling glasses, on elegant trays, and by people whom you like and like—may be your own parents. They will say, "Oh, you can take that, there's nothing in that to hurt you. Learn to drink in moderation. It is all right as long as you know when to stop."
