LORD MONTAGUE AGAIN IN TROUBLE

LONDON, Oct. 5.—Lord Edward Montague, young Briton who found his way into the public print frequently of late, today escaped having a homicide charge filed against him as a result of a fatal automobile accident in which he was involved.

Lord Montague's automobile last Sunday struck and fatally injured Miss Sarah Walker, 67. Today a coroner's jury handed down a verdict that the death was due to Lord Montague's negligence but that it did not amount to manslaughter. Police testified that the young man was driving "at a furious rate" and was driving against the wind.

Lord Montague recently started London society by setting out to join the French Foreign Legion, but upon reaching Paris he changed his mind and returned to England. Since then he has satisfied his lust for adventure by opening a hot dog stand at Maidenhead, fashionable Thames resort.

SERIOUS OUTLOOK FACES ... (C.P.-Havas)

(By Guardian's Special Wire) PARIS, Oct. 5.—Civil war, with foreign war as its inevitable consequence, now faces France should the dictatorship of the Premier, declared tonight in an address to the people of France.

He launched an appeal to the citizens to drop party politics and form a "common front of patriots" against the communist-socialist united front.

The real purpose of the united front is the destruction of all that had been gained by the great revolution, he averred.

The Premier opened with a discussion of his program for government reforms along constitutional lines. These, he said, are simple, clear and justified by the situation.

Victory Gave Canada First Thanksgiving

(By John C. Scott) (Canadian Press Staff Writer) Thanksgiving Day in Canada was not always an annual autumn festival or holiday.

At first it was held spasmodically at the whim of the governing power, while, in France, the earlier Thanksgiving Days proclaimed because of British victories in battle.

The principle of national thanksgiving was first recognized in Lower Canada. On Dec. 22, 1796, a proclamation was issued naming Jan. 10, 1799, as a day of thanksgiving because of "the signal victory of our enemy and the manifold inestimable blessings which our kingdom and provinces have received and daily continued to receive."

On Aug. 1, 1798, Lord Nelson had won his battle with the French at the Nile. Moreover, the American troops which invaded Canada following the Revolution had been driven back in defeat.

The first recorded proclamation in Upper Canada was dated May 15, 1816. It called for a day of thanksgiving June 18 for the ending of the war between Great Britain and France.

First Thanksgiving Day in the united provinces of Canada (Ontario and Quebec) was held Jan. 3, 1850, to express "gratitude for His mercies at the cessation of an epidemic." Then on June 4, 1856, thanksgiving was given for the restoration of peace with Russia.

As an annual event expressing "gratitude for an abundant harvest and other blessings," Thanksgiving Day was first held in Canada Thursday No. 6, 1879. Then, as today, the celebration date was not fixed, the day being decided by the Governor-General-in-Council and a proclamation issued generally about two months in advance of the date.

After the Great War, Thanksgiving was observed for some years in connection with Armistice Day, No. 11. The service men protested strenuously, asserting their desire for an exclusive Armistice Day. Their requests were met at the 1931 session of Parliament, when an Act was passed naming Nov. 11 as the annual Remembrance Day. Since then Thanksgiving Day has been held in October, usually on a Monday early in the month.

Thanksgiving Day as a stated appointment for expressing gratitude for material blessings first came to North America with the Pilgrim Fathers. Immediately after their first harvest of 1621 the early settlers of New England set apart a day for thanksgiving. National prominence was given to the festival in the United States by President Abraham Lincoln in 1863 when he proclaimed the fourth Thursday in November as Thanksgiving Day. This is still the established day in the United States.

Thanksgiving for harvest blessings is a custom the early Hebrews practiced in their feasts of Pentecost and Tabernacles. The latest

"One fish that has consistently been caught in England so that those made wise by experience never attempt to catch it, is the Scottish vendace. This is a salmonoid herring, fabled to have been introduced by Mary Queen of Scots, and is said to be found only in Dumfriesshire. In the Castle Loch at Yochoban—the ancient home of the Bruces.

CAIRN WILL MARK MAITLAND REGIME

(Canadian Press) NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, Ont., Oct. 5.—To commemorate Sir Peregrine Maitland's connection with the history of the Niagara Peninsula, while he served as Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada, a cairn and tablet will be dedicated Oct. 5 on the site of the former Lieutenant-Governor's residence on St. David's Hill. The cairn will also serve to mark an Indian observatory found on St. David's Hill.

Invitations have been sent to historical bodies by the Lundy's Lane Society to be present at the unveiling of the memorial by the society. It is expected the present Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, Hon. Dr. H. A. Bruce, will be present in his official capacity to dedicate the cairn and tablet.

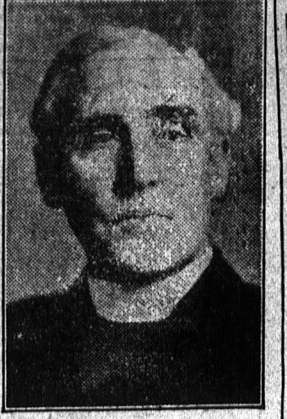

When Sir Peregrine Maitland in 1818 succeeded Sir John Graves Simcoe as lieutenant-governor of Upper Canada, the problems of peace, following the war of 1812-15, were still engaging the public mind.

The new governor was a handsome personage with an air of amiable melancholy. On the field of Waterloo he was in command of the first brigade of the first British division. He had a fine reputation and much experience as a soldier.

Coming to Upper Canada Sir Peregrine found considerable dissatisfaction over the soldiers' pensions and other matters following the period of hostilities. He was not always tactful in dealing with advocates of reforms. However the years 1818-1822, during which he served as lieutenant-governor, were for Upper Canada a time of material growth. New settlers came; towns increased in population and wealth; agricultural production showed remarkable growth and improvement in communication by canal and water was underway.

The union of the United States is predominantly economic, said Col. Polson. He illustrated the delay in the U. S. entry into the war as a sample of the difficulties confronting anyone who wishes to make the United States as an entity, and cites the difference between the two vast partners in North America.

"When the United States had at last declared war, President Wilson thus addressed his Atlantic Fleet: 'None of you have had any experience of modern warfare;

therefore the least of you knows as much as the highest. And I would like suggestions from any officer of the Navy, no matter how humble his rank, regarding the conduct of our war at sea. Three years before, in the early August of 1914, Canada had cabled to England, simply and efficiently, that she was with her 'to the last dollar and the last man.'

The Imperial dominions have inherited national sense, and the links of Empire have nurtured it, while the new lands have at the same time bestowed on them a new, strong freedom, he wrote.

"It is not the fate of Canada, with her slower, deeper growth to 'go up like the rocket and come down like the stick.' She has no negro problem, nor has one of her cities become a bye-word throughout the world. Toronto and Montreal cannot claim the fame (?) of Chicago or the political scandals of New York. Instead of these, Canada possesses in her Eastern Provinces a sturdy, rooted population of men to whom the ancient virtues of 'civitas' are not unknown. Her history has not been, like that of her neighbor, simply a long series of 'booms' and 'depressions,' with their resultant social instability, and her vast natural wealth has even yet been but partially explored.

"The ultimate fate of the United States has yet to be outlined, but that which is looser and less stable cannot absorb that which is rooted and has permanency and lacks not one whit of the former's material power. Were a reverse of such a situation suggested, it would be less surprising; and England's daughters may well inherit the Mother Country's capacity for surprise, last-minute, but enduring triumphs."

feast is held at the beginning of the Jewish year and has just been celebrated by Jews the world over. It is for the purpose of giving thanks for the gathering of the harvest in the Autumn.

The custom is recorded in the history of pagan Rome. Thanksgiving observance was continued in the Christian church.
