Rotarians Hear Address By Mr. W. J. Brawders "Boys of today are very different from those of some years ago," Mr. W. J. Brawders, truant officer of the Charlottetown schools and agent of the Children's Aid Society, said yesterday when speaking before the Rotary Club. "Boys of today won't do much for themselves if they can get someone to do it for them," he claimed. He advocated supervised playgrounds for Charlottetown children. On visits to Halifax he saw "crowds of children enjoying themselves on swings, wading pools, swimming pools, hills slides, etc." In winter he saw the same playgrounds turned into skating rinks for the children. There was no reason, he said, why Charlottetown children could not enjoy the same advantages. Although camping was a fine past-time, it provided an outing for a small number of children for a short period. But playgrounds provided a longer period of pleasure for a greater number of children. Turning to juvenile delinquents, Mr. Brawders said four years ago there were 12 children in reformatories. At present there were only six. Eighty-five per cent of the children brought before the Juvenile Court never appeared again, he said. Of the remaining 15 per cent, very few were really bad but needed jobs or vocational schools—something to keep their minds occupied. He stressed the need of a technical or vocational school in Charlottetown for the benefit of boys who were roaming the streets, attended school irregularly and had lost all interest in school work. He noted that many had been "drifts" in school but were expert mechanics. Mr. Brawders had discovered a "racket" which had become prevalent with mothers of illegitimate children. Mothers would ask someone to take care of the infant on promise of a monthly payment for his keep, he said. The payments were made promptly for a few months after which the parent usually disappeared or for some reason could make no further payments, leaving the party taking care of the child to support it. Mr. Brawders was in the chair yesterday, and the guest was Nelson MacEwen, National Y. M. C. A. Boys' Work Secretary, of Toronto.

NO PROGRESS REPORTED IN NEGOTIATIONS PARIS, Oct. 31—(AP)—France's diplomatic campaign for a general European settlement with Germany and Italy brought its first concrete result today with the announcement Italy had appointed a new ambassador to Paris. The new envoy proposed by Italy was understood to be Raffaele Guariglia, vice-consul in Paris early in his career, and later an ambassador to Spain before the civil war broke out. A Foreign Ministry spokesman said the Italian Charge D'Affaires, Renato Prunas, called on Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet today and informed him Premier Mussolini had nominated an envoy to France, ending a long period of strained diplomatic relations. The Foreign Minister also talked with Andre Francois-Poncet, the new ambassador to Rome; Robert Conton, who is taking the place of Francois-Poncet in Berlin; Charles Corbin, Ambassador to London; the British Ambassador, Sir Eric Philips; and the German Ambassador, Count Johannes Von Welzel. Despite a full discussion of Franco-German relations it was reported no advance was reported in negotiations for a non-aggression pact. Bonnet's talk with Francois-Poncet was his first since the Ambassador had had his farewell talk with Hitler last week. That conversation marked the start of preliminary explorations for a Franco-German accord but the Ambassador telegraphed ahead a report which prompted officials to say that there would be some Italian reaching a conclusion. Italy's naming of an ambassador to Paris was in exchange for the French appointment of Francois-Poncet to Rome in recognition of Ethiopia as a part of the Italian Empire.

PERSONALS (Continued from page 1) In the third move, Malcolm MacDonald, secretary of state for colonies, was given the further post of Canadian secretary, a post he formerly held. The Prime Minister made no announcement on establishment of a ministry of supply, which many business and industrial influential newspapers have called for. It was reported he believed such an extreme defence measure might block his plans toward a general European settlement and a four-power understanding with Germany, Italy and France on arms restriction. He also was understood to be concerned over the consequences of such a move on normal industry and the export trade. Many observers believed the Prime Minister would open negotiations with Germany and France soon on an arms restriction plan aimed at the banning of bombing of civilians and use of poison gas. In order to do this, observers felt there would have to be quieted suspicions in the totalitarian states that Britain made the peace of Munich only to be able to attack them later. Four days of parliamentary debate beginning tomorrow are expected to reflect sharp criticism on the wisdom of what have been called "half measures" for rearmament. There also has been considerable dissatisfaction expressed by many Conservatives on the ground that the cabinet has shown little sign of the conciliatory spirit which Mr. Chamberlain espouses. In the House of Commons the Prime Minister is expected to outline his policies anew. He may formally announce his intention of putting into effect the Anglo-German friendship agreement before November ends on the basis of Premier Mussolini's withdrawal of 10,000 black-shirted troops from Spain. The agreement is expected to have shown the King of Italy as emperor of Ethiopia. Clement Attlee, leader of the Labor opposition, will open an attack on the government with an outline of what he regards as the consequences of the Munich pact. The Prime Minister's reply is expected to deal both with foreign and domestic policy. Either tomorrow or later in the week Mr. Chamberlain is expected to explain his opposition to the mobilization of industry and to clarify his stand on a national registration of the population. This would catalogue manpower as to capabilities in the event of an emergency. Before debate ends Friday with prorogation Labor will move a vote of censure for the government. The "admitted" unpreparedness to protect the civil population when the country was brought to the brink of war. OYSTER BEDS LITTLE DAMAGED WASHINGTON, Oct. 31—(AP)—Frank T. He showed that in some cases whole beds were shifted from one oysterman's grounds to another's. FOOT TROUBLES CORRECTED BY A FOOT SPECIALIST THE FIRST OBVIOUS sign of foot troubles is aching feet. Other complications follow, the most common being corns, calluses, warts, bunions and bursitis, cracked and cramped toes, painful heels, weak and swollen ankles. Continued neglect of correct treatment may eventually lead to "Flat Foot." Some of the disorders may seem wholehearted complaints, but it is the "pin-pricks" which "make life a burden." LIBERAL M. P. (Continued from page 1) would not show his receipts. "How do you make up your income tax returns if you don't keep books?" asked Col. Ralston. "Now, now, I won't allow that," said Mr. Justice Davis as he ruled against any probe into Mr. Plaxton's private business. Col. Drew asked if Mr. Plaxton had sent three cables from the office of Plaxton and Company to Major James E. Hann, President of the Inglis Company, in London between June 29 and June 30, 1937. Witness said he could not recall sending any cables but if they were sent the books of Plaxton and Company would show. Col. Drew asked if the cables were sent and the Commissioner remarked there was no proof as yet. Did Not Recall Visit Replying to Col. Drew's questions, Mr. Plaxton said he did not recall visiting Canada House in London when he was in London in November, 1936. That was when Hann went to London to seek information from the British War Office on the possibility of an arms agreement business. Counsel asked if Mr. Plaxton had not signed the visitor's book in Canada House at the same time as Hann and his two brothers, Gordon Plaxton, of Plaxton and Company, and C. P. Plaxton of the Justice Department. The witness said he did not remember but recalled C. P. Plaxton was in London at that time on a Privy Council appeal. "Will you deny that C. P. Plaxton took any message from any department in Ottawa to Canada House?" asked Col. Drew. "If he did I have no knowledge of it and I am sure he will be most anxious to come here and testify." Plaxton was questioned at length by Hon. J. L. Ralston, Government Counsel, who asked him about the night of March 17, 1938, when he dined with Major Hann, Major General L. R. Lafliche Deputy Minister of National Defence, and Col. R. J. Ordie, judge-advocate general in the department. That was the night the inter-departmental committee to control profits on armament contracts held its final meeting on the Ottawa contract. "It was aware Major Hann was in Ottawa," said Mr. Plaxton. "The house was then in session. I arranged to have dinner with him and as my wife was away I intended to take him to the parliamentary restaurant. I waited around until seven or eight o'clock and then I received a message saying he couldn't come. As I was going to dine alone I waited out the Parliament Buildings and at the gate bumped into the other three. Either General Lafliche or Col. Ordie kindly suggested I dine with them at the Ritz Club. I always like dining there because the food is good and I accepted." Held No Interviews The witness said he had no interviews with General Lafliche or any other officer of the department after March 17, regarding the Brown gun contract. He did not recall if he remained up until three A. M. March 18, when the committee meeting which approved the contract ended. He told Col. Ralston he had no loans or advances from Major Hann, no promises, no agreements, verbally or otherwise, directly or indirectly with the Inglis Company or anyone interested in the contract. He had no interest, directly or CABINET IS CONSIDERING 3-POINT PLAN Final Texts Of Decrees To Be Adopted After Further Meetings. PARIS, Oct. 31—(AP)—A three-point plan to reinforce France's financial, economic and social structure came before Premier Daladier's cabinet tonight. The Premier, possessor of decree powers over France since Oct. 5, decided to put them to use for the first time this afternoon in waiting for the week's senatorial elections and the Radical-Socialist party convention to clear the political atmosphere. A brief outline of the Premier's plan was drawn up for discussion by the Cabinet which met for 2-3-4 hours. The communiqué after the meeting said the session was devoted to a "complete and detailed" examination of the financial situation as presented by Paul Marchand, Finance Minister. The finance minister submitted measures for budgetary equilibrium but their nature was not disclosed immediately. Another cabinet meeting was to follow later in the week, before final texts of decrees are adopted. The problems to be met were these: Financially, a treasury deficit of 60,000,000,000 francs (approximately $1,500,000,000) looms for 1938. This figure exceeds the total of the ordinary budget itself for the year, which was balanced by receipts. Economically, there was an unfavorable trade balance of 12,000,000,000 francs ($335,160,000) for the first nine months of 1938. Socially, there was an unsettled condition growing out of recent strikes and from continuing industrial unrest. HELP UNDERGRADUATES OXFORD, England—(CP)—The University Gazette states that of 4,300 undergraduates at Oxford during 1937-8, 2,630 were in receipt of financial assistance.

Canada sent $3,530,300 worth of goods compared with the United Kingdom's $7,500,000 and imports of slightly less than $5,000,000 from the United States. RESIGNATION (Continued from page 1) Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop, Heinrich Himmler, head of all Germany's police forces, and others who urged Hitler to remain firm with reference to Czechoslovakia won the day and Germany gained more than even the most optimistic expected. General Beck, as a disciplined soldier, realized he had underestimated German will to conquest. He chose retirement as did Rundstedt, apparently for much the same reason. The army, however, is strong for both men. They were both given a promotion in rank on retirement, to Colonel-Generalships, which is next to a Field Marshal's rank. General Beck in addition was granted permission to wear the uniform of the fifth artillery regiment. Further evidence that Hitler was setting scores arising from the Czechoslovak crisis was seen in the fact that the only promotions announced along with Beck's and Rundstedt's were promotions and retirements in the air force. It was a matter of common knowledge that the air force, commanded by Field Marshal Goering, was fully behind Hitler's Czechoslovak plans. by an elephant with its trunk thrown to the ground and trampled to death at Crowland, near here.
