"THE ABANA, in charge of Captain Lannigan set sail on Saturday for Picton. During the past week she was discharging coal at the Railway Wharf for the P. E. I. Railway."

"THE SCHOONER "Beatrice," Captain O'Hara, arrived from Picton Saturday, with a cargo of coal for Matthew & McLean Co. She is anchored at their wharf and will commence discharging her cargo today."

"THE SIR WILFRID was anchored at the railway wharf Monday. This schooner was on her way to the Magdalen Islands with a deck load of lumber, but was forced by stress of weather to seek shelter in Souris Harbor."

"THE SCHOONER "Dictator" has discharged her cargo of stone at the end of the breakwater and on Monday was anchored in the harbor ready to set sail for Wallace, N. S., where she will again load up with Rip-rap stone."

"THE LADY SYBILL arrived from Picton at 5.30 p. m. Monday and left for the Magdalen Islands at 7.30 p. m. Both her inward and outward cargoes were small. Among her passengers were Captain McLeod, who was called to the Islands on business; Mr. H. M. IMPORTANT IMPROVEMENTS ON THE I. C. R.

MONTREAL, Sept. 15.—Two new departments and an improved organization of the whole system will soon be in operation, F. P. Gutelius, general manager of the Intercolonial Railway, now in the new departments Robert Simpson has been appointed general freight agent and B. K. Klock, general tie agent. On the programme of improvements are the double tracking of several sections of the road, increased yard and workshop facilities, improved ferry service at the Strait of Canso, installation of a telephone service on the Moncton-St. John line, and the introduction of the automatic block service. The construction of several new and attractive station houses is also planned. Speaking of workshop facilities Mr. Gutelius said it did not pay to make an absolute concentration of the mechanical force at headquarters, and at the River Du Loup shop fifty additional men were recently appointed. All boiler repairs must, however, be done at the Moncton shops. The contract for the eight miles of double tracking from Levis to Chaudiere Junction was awarded on Saturday to Messrs. Soper & McDougal. The yards at Levis, too, are to be extended to double their present size. A second ferryboat for the Canso crossing will be provided shortly at a cost of $300,000 and this will give a more efficient service. The train dispatching telephone on the St. John and Moncton section will mark the first attempt of this kind on the government system. At the same time the automatic block system is to be introduced.

IS THE FOX A MAN-EATER.

An answer in the affirmative comes from Italy. In Upper Piedmont, in the Biella district, Lieutenant Bartolotti, of the Carabinieri, was patrolling one of the gorges of the Graglia range, when, at a spot about 1500 metres above sea level, he came upon some articles of female clothing the owner of which had disappeared. From an inquest held, it resulted that the owner was a young woman, Teresa Rufino by name, a sort of "Madge Wildfire," hailing from the hamlet of Graglia, known to be in the habit of ascending the gorge, and in pursuance of the dog snow in the snow by way of cooling herself. Fatigued and hypnotized by the cold, she must have fallen asleep and been devoured by the foxes bounding in the neighborhood. Their footprints, and those of no other animal, wild or tame, were distinctly identified. A similar mode of identification was reported from the Abruzzi, where, in the depth of winter, a soldier of the line on a visit to his parents, while making his way in the snow, was attacked—this time by a wolf—and devoured, after vainly endeavouring to defend himself with his sabre. Next morning both body and bones had disappeared, only his sabre and belt, both bloodstained, attesting the fight, while the characteristic footprints of the wolves were clearly in evidence on the track they had made to the adjacent pine wood. Another such case, similar in identification, occurred in the same severe winter, near Catani, in Sicily, where shortly after sunset, a little boy, sent to a neighbouring well for the household supply, was seized and carried off to a wood, in which his body, almost entirely devoured, was discovered at the end of a snow track impressed with the footprints of wolves. In each of the three cases the local authority, on the strength of these indications, had the satisfaction of proving that "ogni sospetto del trattenimento" (every suspicion of its being a question of crime) was excluded.

FEAR.

Fear may arise from a physical or mental weakness, or inadequacy, and it shows itself in timidity and hesitation, which may be carried so far as to prevent all action, says the New York World. Fear of our hands, James us, and before our minds, so that we do nothing, lest we make mistakes. Pessimism is fear carried to the last degree, and the pessimist is not satisfied with stopping his own activity, but tries to prevent others from doing anything because he sees all the dark side of life and none of the bright side.
Fear is frequently due to a lowered state of the physical system; the blood flows sluggishly, the digestion is poor and the person "feels so bad" that he has not the energy to do anything. Energy flows from a sense of well being, when you feel like running, jumping, or accomplishing any and everything—even the impossible. One of the most frequent causes of fear and depression is the derangement of the digestive apparatus. It is a fact admitted by all psychologists, though not yet explained, that any pain below the diaphragm has a most depressing effect.

RATIONAL OPTIMISM.

In the nineteenth century the data of pessimism grew enormously on our hands through the study of the struggle for existence as described by the evolutionists. We now take it as a matter of course that all surviving species have come through their present estate through struggle, and we recognize sacrifice as one of the laws of life. Hence we place more emphasis on the conditions of life along the way, and we say less about an all-inclusive plan. Then, too, our new interests in the slums, the shops,

FIXING HIS NATIVITY.

While visiting in the South recently a traveller chanced upon a resident of a sleepy hamlet in Tennessee.
"Are you a native of this town?" asked the traveller.
"Am I a what?" languidly asked the man as he rose to a sitting posture.
"Are you a native of this town?"
"What's that?"
"I asked you whether you were a native of this place?"
Suddenly there appeared at the open door of the cabin the man's wife, tall, gaunt and sallow. After carefully scrutinizing the intruder, she said:
"Ain't you got no sense a-tall, Ira? He means was yo' livin' here when you was born or was yo' born after you began livin' here?"
"The National Food Magazine.

PILES

certain that the mind may and can influence the body, and by its intellectual power bring about certain physical conditions which help to establish confidence rather than fear. If we exert ourselves it is possible to overcome slight bodily depression and replace it by stimulation. When, however, the mind gives way to fear the entire system is affected. When sunk in depression, hopeless, magnifying difficulties and looking at the dark side of life we become uneasy, discontented, fretful, and ill-tempered; we begin to worry, hesitating to do anything for fear of the wrong results, and the very first result is shown in the blood pressure.
EFFECT OF ANGER.

This is greatly lowered, and the face becomes pale and the feet cold; the contraction of the small arteries becomes spasmodic and irregular; the skin reacts slowly after a cold bath. On the other hand, when we become very angry apoplexy is liable to follow.
Depressed state of mind diminishes the secretions of the body, lowers the digestive power till nothing seems to agree with us. The liver and pancreas do not work right, and the kidneys especially are affected, even to the point of becoming diseased, if the trouble is long continued.
Dyspepsia is more often traceable to a depressed state of mind than to anything else, for the mind has so decreased the secretion of the stomach that there are not enough of the juices to act upon the food, and even the character of these juices is altered.

Fear is the worst enemy that any man or woman can entertain, and if it is felt the cause should be ascertained at once. If there is a physical cause it should be corrected under expert medical advice. If, as is more often the case, it is mental supreme efforts should be made to throw it off ere it be too late, and we become the victim of our own fears.

CHILE, ON INDEPENDENCE DAY, HONORS TWO NATIONAL HEROES

Throughout the great length and narrow breadth of the South American republic of Chile a wave of patriotic enthusiasm will sweep today, for this is the Chilean festival of independence, "dedicate a la gloriosa de los heroes San Martin, Cochrane y O'Higgins."

The celebration of the birth of freedom will center in the lovely Alameda de las Dolores, the Via Apia of Santiago, the magnificent capital of the "long republic." This thoroughfare, a broad avenue 350 feet wide and nearly three miles in length, is a vista of trees and flowers, interspersed with fountains, statuary, and other works of art. Here are to be found—decorated today with flags and flowers—the great equestrian statue of General Jose San Martin, the celebrated liberator who led the patriot army across the wild wastes of the Andes in the cause of Chilean independence, and General Bernardo O'Higgins, his immortal Irish aid. Here, too, is a memorial to Admiral Lord Cochrane, the intrepid Englishman who commanded Chile's navy in the war for independence from the Spanish yoke.
A more illustrious trio of heroes than these no nation may boast. San Martin is the "purest patriot that ever lived," is represented holding in his hand the standard of liberty, his right hand thrown back on his haunches. O'Higgins, "the bravest of the leaping some obstacle on the battlefield of Rancagua. San Martin, having freed Argentine, Chile, Peru and Bolivia, retired from public life, refusing all reward for his patriotic service, and spent the last days in poverty and exile.
Remembering Lord Cochrane and O'Higgins, it is small wonder that Chileans have always entertained a great affection for the English and that of Great Britain lead all other nations in the origin of Chilean imports. There was a time, too, when the Chileans were proud of being called "the Yankees of the South," and entertained a great affection for Uncle Sam. "We admired him," writes a prominent Chilean, for the beautiful fight for independence. To our eyes the Yankee personified freedom. The vital breath of justice which animated this young nation won our most sincere admiration. We bowed before our big brother and took pride in his triumphs. The oppressed of yesterday, however, evinces a strong tendency to become the executioner of tomorrow. The freed colony, now a strong nation, is visibly forgetting the noble words of its heroes and has begun to abuse its powers."

In Chile nitrate is king, and the greatest source of wealth. Nitrate practically supports the government, and far-sighted statesmen are beginning to dread what will happen when the nitrate fields are in territory taken from Peru as a result of the war of the early '80s, and constitute the most valuable war indemnity ever exacted from any country in the history of the world.
Chile's independence day is also a Spring festival, similar to our Easter, since Winter is now giving way to Spring in Chile. The women of Santiago, famed for their beauty, will celebrate the holiday by riding up and down the Alameda de las Dolores, displaying the very latest in Parisian costumes. Chile is a land of millionaires, and the wives and daughters of the wealthy are nothing if not up-to-date in their costumes.
