GADGET MEASURES MOON MAGNETISM

REGINA, May. 1—(CP)—The "Universoscope," designed to measure the moon's effect on gravity perfected by Donald Johnson, of Regina, is gaining recognition in England.

"Armchair Science," an English periodical, explains use of the deelicate instrument as a heavy square framework of steel upon which pull of the moon and of gravity are effective.

It swings backwards and forwards, the length of time of motion from stop to start varping with the phases of the moon. This determines not only the moon's effect on gravity but also measures and classifies respective differences of the moon's phases and effect on gravitation.

A wide variation in time of motion of the swing is observed when timed with no moon and when timed with a full moon. The former averages two hours and six minutes, the latter three hours and 35 minutes.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. G. R. LePAGE

The community of Rustico and vicinity were deeply shocked to learn of the sudden passing of Mrs. Garfield R. LePage at her home in Rustico on April 23rd, at the early age of fifty-three years.

Mrs. LePage had been about her work all day as usual and on retiring appeared to be in her usual good spirits. A few hours later her husband was awakened by a sound of gasping and almost before he had time to reach her side her spirit had taken its flight.

Her many friends and relatives throughout the province will be grieved to learn of her sudden passing.

Besides her part taken in community activities which will be greatly missed, she was also a kind and home-loving woman, always looking to the welfare of her family, who are heart-broken at her untimely passing.

Mrs. LePage was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bulman, of Rustico, and leaves to mourn, besides her husband, four children, Elwell, on the staff of the Royal Bank, Halifax, N. S.; Fred, with the Royal Bank at Wolfville, N. S.; Helen, with the firm of Prowse Bros., Charlottetown; and Weston, at home; also the following brothers and sisters, Ernest Bulman, of Rustico; Mrs. Hamilton Horne, of Milton; and Mrs. Percy Dickieson, of New Glasgow.

The funeral, which was held on Sunday, April 25th, was largely attended. After a short service at the house the remains were taken to Saint Mark's Anglican Church, where the main service was held. The service was conducted by her pastor, the Rev. E. O. Lancaster, assisted by the Rev. W. A. Patterson, of Cavendish. During the service "Shadows" was beautifully rendered by Mr. Gordon Carew.

The esteem in which she was held was shown by the many floral tributes from the family, relatives and friends.

The pall-bearers were: Messrs. Charles Houston, Edison Rollings, Stanley Houston, Cyril Toombs, John Clark and Reuel LePage.

Still Hearty Paul Lea 92 On Sunday

VETERAN OF WOODWORK MANUFACTURE IN MONCTON AND CHARLOTTETOWN— ACTIVE AND KEENLY ALERT.

(Moncton Times Saturday Night)

He'll be 92 tomorrow and he can remember when a bank gave him 12 per cent interest on savings.

Those are two reasons, at least why Paul Lea, prominent retired manufacturer, should stand out above the ordinary run of men. Not every man lives to be 92. Nor does every man get 12 per cent interest on savings.

Tall, grey-haired Paul Lea sat in his study in his home on Mountain Road, listening to the radio last night when a Times reporter called to find out a little about his life.

The mark of time has been laid gently on the old gentleman. He is hale and hearty. He rose immediately when the newsman entered the room, asked him to be seated. Then he gave the visitor a modest account of a life crammed with action, colored with initiative and enterprise, and vivid with adventure.

Started at 16

Paul Lea started out "to learn his trade" when he was 16. He apprenticed with his brother-in-law in Charlottetown. During the four years he spent in the capital, he worked on many an imposing structure, many a solid home. Among the buildings he helped put up was the Methodist Brick Church, still standing on Prince street. Said Mr. Lea, with a smile, I used to sing in the choir of that church."

Mr. Lea remembers the great fire which wiped out four of Charlottetown's best blocks in the spring of 1895.

Four years he had, of Charlottetown and apprenticeship, when he felt the call of adventure. And so he, and a young friend by the name of George Malcolm MacGregor, packed their duds and took a boat for California. They travelled all the way by water, with the exception of the Isthmus of Panama, which they crossed by rail. From the Isthmus, it took the boat 16 days to reach San Francisco. Paul Lea walked off that boat at the great port of the West—dead broke.

Got Work Easily

But work was to be had for the asking and he worked steadily the four years he was there. Then he came back to the east, to Charlottetown. Before he left he drew his savings out of the Sacramento Savings Bank, along with the 12 per cent interest which had accrued on the money in that time. Mr. Lea showed The Times reporter a worn, faded book, published by the Sacramento Bank in January, 1869, to prove to him the 12 per cent was no fake. And there, in the book it showed that depositors were paid at the rate of 12 per cent. "Fifty-two years later," said Mr. Lea, "I went back to the west and called on the heads of the bank . . . . they were surprised when I showed them my deposit book."

Back in Charlottetown, Mr. Lea started the first woodworking factory in Prince Edward Island. He ran the business for 12 years before he came to Moncton to settle. Arrived in the city, the first building he put up was the house of Thomas Williams, still standing on the corner of Park and Highfield streets. Fire wiped out his factory in 1893, but he rebuilt it and continued to manufacture lumber until 1922, when he retired, selling his plant and business to the B. W. Lockhart, Ltd.
