BRIEF SUGGESTIONS FOR A SHORT TALK

Note: Choose a good speaker for this. The paragraph below may be expanded into an address, or some other topic may be chosen.

SHORT TEMPERANCE ADDRESS

An electric sign has these words emblazoned across its premises: Light, Heat, Power. These are the essentials of the Temperance movement.
Light first; the light of knowledge concerning alcohol as a "protoplasmic poison" and such modern discoveries as that craving for alcohol and stimulants is often produced by diet deficient in vitamins and minerals such as are found in whole cereals, fruits, vegetables and dairy products.
Secondly, we need the heat: a burning zeal to eradicate the drink evil and the opium evil and the scrambling evil, that men shall have fewer spiritual enemies to face and that no traffic shall be tolerated that makes money out of the misery of fellow-men and from the degradation of humanity.
Thirdly, power: which we will receive if we like life of righteousness and seek to be co-workers with God.

HYMN — "SKYLINES"
Tune: "Onward, Christian Soldiers"
On the far horizon, towering cities rise,
Gleaming domes and turrets 'gainst the morning skies,
Ever reaching upward toward a heavenly goal,
Emblems of the striving of the human soul.
CHORUS:
God is ever building for the watchful eye,
Skylines leading upward to our home on high,
Here the teeming millions labor day by day,
Working, hoping, praying on their toilsome way,
In the upward struggle of each valiant heart,
For the common welfare, may we bear our part.
CHORUS:
Grant, O Master Builder, that our lives may trace
Still more perfect skylines for the human race.
—The Indian Temperance News.

MANY READY FOR THE CHRISTIAN APPROACH

"Up and down the world many individuals and groups are ready for spiritual guidance and for challenging messages having to do with faith and hope and love. There is a hunger even deeper than that for food, a hunger for a better realization of the meaning of life and of its true worth and eagerness for a sense of direction through the maze of things, a thrust toward the light as natural as the push of young plants through the soil as spring advances readiness to reach out towards the divine if only spiritual meanings are so interpreted that mind and heart can grasp them, or many, war's desolation would seem to have intensified this thrust or to have longed for it. Kagawa, in Japan, today has only to start preaching on any street for crowds to gather thereafter to give rapt attention to his presentation and appeal. He is a leader in the three-year movement in Japan to win three million souls. Dr. T. Z. Koo, gifted Chinese leader of students, has drawn great crowds in South America in practically every city, where he appeared. In many places in the Philippines, in Siam, and in Burma, the Christian movement appears to be at a stage when large harvests are to be expected. Such conditions are challenging samples, but the condition is by no means universal so far as general temper is to be noted. However, it is probably a reasonable statement that never before in mission lands were so many individuals ready for the Christian approach." C. H. Fahs, Curator Mission Research Library.

THE NATIONAL SECRETARY

Dear Young Folk: February is the month when we specially honor Frances Willard, that woman of vision whose great heart overflowed beyond the borders of her own country to all the countries of this world and envisioned a liquorless world. In those early years of the temperance movement there were many difficulties and discouragements. Yet she did not give up but declared: "There are the same difficulties of licenses as those of prohibition. We have also learned that if prohibition does not always prohibit, neither does civilization always civilize, nor education educate, nor Christianity Christianize." Her words still give us encouragement to continue in this struggle to which we have been called, for "only the Golden Rule of Christ can bring the Golden Age of Man." Even at that time she was able to say "Science is on the side of temperance." We, today, are realizing more and more the truth of that statement.

BESET WITH A GRIPPY COLD

Had Chills and Fever
Nostrils Filled With Mucus
"I discovered the easiest way to help end a Grippy Cold is to take deep breaths of Catarrh-o-see."
1. It is a harmless vapor.
2. It attacks a cold instantly—
3. It helps to destroy the germs that cause the cold.
4. It opens the breathing organs to the free passage of fresh air.
5. The irritated membranes are soothed and healed.
6. Inflammation in the upper nostrils, throat and bronchial tubes is rapidly reduced.
"To help drive out a cold in one night, I strongly recommend Catarrh-o-see." Follow the advice given by the writer of this letter, a Montreal business man. All druggists sell Catarrh-o-see in 25c and 50c sizes.

GET-RID-OF RUPTURE MISERY

Former Rupture Sufferers are delighted with the splendid results effected by the Latest Scientific Development for Rupture Aid—RICE'S RUPTURE SUPPORT. With it a NEW ERA has opened for the Non-surgical care of a distressing and dangerous ailment. Hundreds fortunate enough to have learned about and used it report "freedom from Rupture distress." TODAY, while your Rupture Swelling still can disappear, take advantage of this Modern Achievement to obtain relief from an ailment which when improperly cared for affects physical well-being and mental peace. —BEAU—
By Mrs. Harry Fugh Smith
The night seemed endless, but Carolyn was no longer afraid. Beau would not let her die. He smoothed back her hair. He wet her parched lips with cracked ice. He held her hands when she tried to claw the bandages. He laced his fingers around hers. It seemed to Carolyn that strength flowed into her from Beau's strong brown hands.
Toward morning she drifted into natural sleep. She slept almost an hour. When she woke, the doctor was there. He said a blood transfusion would not be necessary. He said the patient's native vitality had reasserted itself, but Carolyn knew that Beau's strength had pulled her through.
"She'll do, will she, doctor?" asked Beau. He was white and haggard, his voice was hoarse. Carolyn felt a pang when she looked at him. How could she ever have believed that Beau did not love her, she asked herself, clinging to his hand.
The doctor nodded. "She'll be as good as new in a couple of weeks."
The nurse followed the doctor outside. Beau looked at Carolyn and tried to grin, although his lips quivered. "You gave us a scare, Mrs. Beau."
"Darling!" whispered Carolyn. "I've been such a fool."
"No!"
"Yes," he said. "I had an inferiorly complex or something. I was crazy about you, but I imagined if I weakened you'd walk over me. So I tried to drive you like a team of mules. I had no more idea how to handle a high-strung, well-bred girl like you than any other roughneck. It's going to be different from here out."
"Yes!" cried Carolyn radiantly. "Oh, Beau, we are going to have a baby!"
His face told her, though he said nothing. "Beau," she whispered, the light draining from her eyes, "have I lost my baby?"
He took her hand and laid it against his cheek. He kissed her palms. His voice trembled. "Better luck next time, honey," he said.

CHAPTER XXIV

Carolyn had not understood what Beau meant when he said things were going to be different.
"You're going into Father's office!" she exclaimed incredulously when she learned his plans.
Beau grinned. "I'm through bucking you, honey."
"But, Beau, will you be satisfied?"
"I tried it my way and made a mess," said Beau. "It's your turn."
A short while before, Carolyn would have been elated at such a concession on Beau's part, now she felt curiously let down. "But, Beau, you always said you'd never—" she began.
Beau interrupted her with a grim chuckle. "I'm not so certain as I was that I know all the answers," he said. "What we have been through has lowered the old head. If you don't know, I suffered a few tortures of the damned when you left me, Carolyn. Then you know, I'm not dead, I'm here, I've been hard-boiled and stiff-necked, but not any more."
"I'll go back to the filling station with you, Beau," said Carolyn. "I don't care where we live if only I can be with you."
Beau was nothing if not thorough and having made up his mind that he had carried things with too high a hand, he was ready to yield to the other extreme to make amends. "I was an idiot to expect you to be contented with a tourist cabin and an automobile mechanic, Carolyn," he said firmly. "Especially when it wasn't necessary. There never was any reason except my false pride why you should have been penalized because I haven't any money."
"I was far more at fault than you were," protested Carolyn.
"You were not," declared Beau. He would not let her censure herself. He was determined to take the whole load upon his shoulders. It was sweet to have Beau treating her like a fragile vase which his clumsiness had all but shattered. It was plain he got a kick out of being generous about everything he had argued over. Carolyn was not in any humor to fight with Beau and so she let things slide, unwilling to disturb the amicable-ness of their relationship by a word.
"Only," said Beau with a frown, "I'm going to insist upon one thing. I'll not accept a penny more than I am worth to your father and we'll live within my income."
Beau was extremely busy settling up his affairs in Maryville. Olive was going to marry Chester the first week in October. Beau had rented out his garage business. As he explained, Fisher Weems had never been any good at that sort of work.
"I've put the money into a small cash and carry dry goods store," said Beau. "Fisher is a good clerk and he's tickled pink to be in

BETRIE TRIMMED WITH VEILING
LONDON, Eng.—Christian Dior, Paris designer, has encouraged women to bring the old favorite beret right back to town. Worn on top of the head, with its little stalk sticking straight up, it is kept in place by spotted veiling tied under the chin and reminiscent of the early days of motor-cars.
"Anything you want to do is O. K. with me," whispered Carolyn.
It was Beau's idea that he and Carolyn take a small apartment. George Webster had advised Beau from the first not to consider living with his in-laws.
However, Beau agreed with her mother that Carolyn was not physically able to start right out house hunting upon leaving the hospital. It was decided that until she had fully recovered her strength, Carolyn and Beau would occupy her old room at the Scott mansion.
And so Carolyn came home from the hospital in the family limousine. Carolyn's room was a bower of hothouse flowers when she arrived and it was heaven because Beau was there. "It's just like another honeymoon," thought Carolyn.
