250 NOMINATED FOR ELECTIONS IN FREE STATE

De Valera's Fianna Fail Heads List — Campaign Now In Full Swing.

BY SEAN O'CAHAIN
Canadian Press Correspondent
DUBLIN, June 23 (CP)—More than 250 candidates, 100 of them standard bearers of Eamon de Valera's Fianna Fail, were formally nominated today for the Irish Free State General Election July 1.

While the Government Party named the largest number of candidates the Fine Gael Oppositionists, led by former president William Cosgrave, were close behind with 97. William Norton's Labor ranks named 23, with Independent Labor and Independent Labor nominees bringing up the rear as regards numbers.

The oratorical campaign leading up to the naming of 137 deputies for the ninth Dail, as compared with 152 in the House recently dissolved, already is in full and vigorous swing. The speaker holding the 133th seat in the Dail, is returned automatically.

The reduction in the membership of the Dail has been affected under the provisions of the old constitution which lays down the proportion of deputies to the population and prescribes revision of the constituencies every 10 years.

Constituencies which existed since establishment of the free state have been badly shaken up in the process. The old practice was to group two small adjoining counties as single units.

In the new order of things, Kerry, Donegal and Galway are among the areas which have been split into two parts; a slice of south-west Galway goes to strengthen President Eamon de Valera's own constituency of Clare; Dublin City and County have been entirely rearranged; Leitrim has been separated from Sligo and Carlow has been taken away from Kilkenny and distributed into portions which have been added to Wexford, Winklow and Kildare.

THE STORY ANITA LOOS

as well as his pocketbook would not let him lose Madison.

"Time is of the essence," he said to himself as their plane crossed the state line into California. We got a head start, but she's half way across the continent now if I know Carol. And I do!"

He was worried about getting Madison out to Santa Anita. Yesterday's betting and winning had spoiled the night long dormant. There would be no conflict with him. But there was Carol to reckon with.

Madison found a stack of telegrams from New York waiting for him when they reached the hotel. He put a number of long distant calls. He spoke to his Los Angeles representative and got in touch with whom he was to confer about the concession. Duke heard it all. Madison had told him to "stick around" if he wouldn't be bored. He wasn't. He was interested in watching Madison, seeing what a shrewd business man he was. He was also a little awed by the huge sums which Madison mentioned in the off-hand manner. Carol had certainly been right when she had said Madison did not deal with "chicken feed."

But Duke was not only fascinated by what he heard. He was worried. Madison seemed to have become just a big financier. He might become so absorbed in concessions and stocks and bonds that he wouldn't go to the races. So his heart almost skipped a beat when he heard Madison say:

"Of course, Mr. Pruett we must go into that right away. It won't take much time and that's good. I'll be here one time and I'm going out to Santa Anita every day. Don't think I came all this way just to talk business."

Duke left the two men alone when Mr. Pruett arrived. He was to wait in the lobby for Madison to join him in an hour. As he turned from the newsstand where he had gone to get a paper, he gasped. Coming through the entrance where Fritzie-Kiffie-Tip. So the plane was in!

Fritzie saw him first, ran to him and threw her arms around him. The two men shook his hand. "Carol with you?" he asked. "For once we're free of that dame," said Tip. You see she wasn't arrayed in just the right garments for travel. Gee, I'll bet she was blushing when she missed the plane. "There'll be another one soon," said Duke, thinking he had only this one day when he could be sure of getting Madison to Santa Anita. "What do you do with papers, ducky dear?" a red Fritzie. "Can't you see there on the front page, there's a terrible storm somewhere or other being threatened?" "We just got through."

Hold Services of Confirmation At Milton and Rustico

On Sunday evening June 20th, the Right Reverend John MacKenley, D.D., Lord Bishop of the Anglican Diocese of Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island, visited the parish of Milton and administered the rite of Confirmation of the Spirit into Galilee. The Bishop stressed the importance of the Holy Spirit in guiding and directing our lives and that the same spirit should be allowed to urge us at all times. "There is urgent need today for the return of the family altar. Too much of our time is spent in our own, personal, concerns and too little time is spent with God."

A large congregation was present at this inspiring service. During the offertory Miss Verina Rodd sang "Lord For Tomorrow and Needs." The officiating candidates: Millard Wright, Harold Lemuel Rodd, Reginald Henry Coles, John Gordon Rodd, Charles Garth Mathieson Hooper, Rena Vere Coles, Erma Constance Coles, Mary Agnes Coles, Hilda Louise Coles and Helen Edith Coles.

Confirmation service was held in St. Mark's Anglican Church, Rustico, on Monday evening. Bishop MacKenley confirmed candidates including: John Ernest Bulman, Garfield Weston LePage and Mildred Blanche Bulman. The Bishop based his message upon the book of Proverbs 23-26 — "My Son, give me thine heart."

Canada World's Granary

LONDON, June 23 (C.P.)—Canada, known for decades as the "World's Granary," may some day become a major producer of silk—synthetic silk from milk. But—this is the important qualification—the cows must be fed a daily meal of mulberry leaves, diet of the silkworm.

The experiment already has passed through the slow and costly stages of research and been declared a success. For 10 years Benjamin Ross, 41-year-old German chemist now residing in London has been working on the idea. He had spent £25,000 roughly $124,000 on his scheme, maintaining Laboratories in four countries, samples submitted to analysis have come so close to the standard of real silk it has been difficult to distinguish between them.

Ross, however, is not yet satisfied. He set an objective of trying to obtain five essentials—beauty of color, strength, softness, elasticity and non-shrinkability. At present he has succeeded in combining any four of these qualities, but the fifth has eluded him.

An average cow can produce enough casein daily to manufacture nearly two pounds eight ounces of synthetic silk. It takes more than 30,000 silkworms, who will eat a ton of ripe mulberry leaves, to yield 12 pounds of raw silk.

Mountain City Celebrates Anniversary

KAMLOOPS, B. C. June 21—A city that passed through halcyon days of the fur trade and mining in British Columbia's pioneering stage and emerged as a railway town on the two Transcontinental railways, Kamloops celebrates its 125th anniversary this year. Deep in the mountains of central British Columbia, Kamloops dates its history back to 1812 when the Astoria company built a fur trade post on the present site of the city. It was known as Shuswap fort, named after a tribe of local Indians.

The North-West company absorbed the Astoria company in 1813, took over Fort Shuswap and built a new post called Fort Thompson after the noted explorer David Thompson.

From 1813 until the Hudson's Bay company took over the post a few years later, the trade in furs increased. After 1821, the beaver began to disappear and Archibald McDonald, a trader, mentioned this in his report on the trade in 1827.

The situation evidently became very serious for when Sir George Simpson, Governor of Hudson's Bay Company, visited Kamloops in 1828 he wrote this report to the company in London: "The post of Kamloops, on Thompson's River is a very unprofitable establishment."

Even though the trade was lacking, the Company continued to operate a post. In 1842 another post was constructed on the west side of the North Thompson river and the name was changed to Kamloops, which means "The Meeting Place of Waters."

Then came gold. In 1862, in the rivers, streams and lakes of the Kamloops district gold was found and placer mining brought pros-
