Happenings of The Week

Princess Juliana of the Netherlands, who left her wartime home here last September to go to London to be nearer her people, has returned to Ottawa to visit her three small daughters. It was not known when she arrived or how long she would stay, but it was expected she would return to London shortly. She was not available immediately for comment on her visit. When the Princess returned to Britain last fall she left her children, Princess Beatrix, Princess Irene and Princess Margriet, in the care of their mother's four-year stay here, with Mrs. M. Booth, a friend living in Rockcliffe.

Mrs. Thomas B. Woodman and Mrs. James P. Robison are visiting the former's son-in-law and daughter, Group Capt. and Mrs. H. R. Stewart in Ottawa.

According to word received here Miss Betty MacCabe, B.A., of the Canadian Players, has been in Holland for some time, playing in the front-line troops. Miss MacCabe spent Christmas Day at the front. It was a busy day, she said, with hard work, but this bright young entertainer has mastered the art of making service a joy to herself and others.

Mrs. J. A. S. Bayer invited friends to the Charlottetown Hotel last Saturday for a most enjoyable three table luncheon bridge.

Mrs. E. Champion was hostess at a luncheon party Saturday entertaining at The Charlottetown.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Bruce were receiving their happiest congratulations of their friends over the weekend, Sunday being their 25th wedding anniversary.

The engagement of King Farouk's second sister, 22-year-old Princess Foziah, and Mohammed Ali Raouf, son of the late Raouf Bey, of Turkey, has been officially announced. Raouf is 32.

Mrs. Mark R. MacCulgan was hostess at her home Wednesday evening entertaining at a prettily arranged table bridge for intimate friends.

Mrs. E. G. Saunders entertained at an afternoon two table bridge on Thursday at her home.

Mrs. Ivan Y. Reddin was hostess at a delightful personal show Wednesday in honor of Miss Lillian McCarron whose marriage to Lieut. Wilfrid Duffy, RCNVR, is taking place shortly. Many exquisite gifts were showered on the young bride-to-be accompanied by good wishes wittily expressed in verse.

The Duchess of Windsor made the list of the 10 best dressed women in the world "by the skin of her teeth" this time, ranking 10th in the list-up, the New York Dress Institute announced Saturday. The institute, which compiled the list and contacted a panel of designers, editors, stylists and society leaders to determine the winners, said Mrs. Harrison Williams of New York, was not included in the list for the first time in nearly two decades.

Commander and Mrs. J. J. Connors, formerly of Charlottetown, were among the patronesses for the "January Nite" at the Royal York Hotel last Saturday given by the Hospital Aid of the Women's College Hospital.

Sincere sympathy is extended to Mrs. G. E. Robinson and her young son, Hilson, on the death of Mr. Robinson who is so lovingly remembered by relatives and friends here and in Vancouver his old home.

Mr. Donald N. Buntain of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, who has been transferred to Alberton, was the recipient of a valuable gift from the Bank staff of which he was a very popular member, accompanied by hosts of good wishes for future success.

Mrs. Warfield Orr and Mrs. George Dickson of New Glasgow were visiting in Summerside this week, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Williams, Pleasant Street.

Mrs. Orr was a delegate to the Provincial of the W.M.S. of the United Church of Canada which was held in Summerside and largely attended.

Charles E. McLennan, RCN, has returned from overseas and is spending twenty-eight days with his parents, Rev. E. T. and Mrs. McLennan.

Miss Margo Affleck entertained Tuesday afternoon at Barclay Manor, Vancouver, B.C., in honor of Miss Vinay Watts whose forthcoming marriage takes place at St. Andrew's Wesleyan Chapel on Saturday, Jan. 27th. The shower, wedding, caused much merriment and the bride-to-be was the recipient of many lovely gifts. Tea was served by Miss E. Moxham.

Margaret Eaton of Toronto, director-general of the Canadian Women's Army Corps, has returned from an overseas inspection trip wearing a diamond engagement ring. The other half of the combination is a British army officer posted to India just as she was leaving for Canada.

Mrs. Roosevelt's bedroom in Washington, is "like an outdoor greenhouse," she told her news conference Monday due to the order of War Mobilization Director James P. Byrnes reducing heat in government buildings to 68 degrees. The White House is supplied by the same central heating plant that warms all other government buildings, and being much older in architecture than the rest of them its response to the system is sub-standard. "I sat up late writing in an evening dress and got chilled through. Before I got warm I had everything on but the kitchen stove. But it is good for us, excellent. We live in too warm houses. I'm not complaining, but I have liked to become accustomed to it over a longer period of time."

FINE ART OF RAISING CHILDREN

Offsprings Emotional Natures Stunted By Unthinking Parents' Lack Of Affection

There are few parents so unattractive as to be cruel to their own children, and when we do come across a father and mother who beat and make an animal of the helpless little creatures they have brought into the world, the law gives them stiff prison sentences and takes their victims away from them.

But there are thousands of devoted parents whose whole lives are spent in petting and coddling their children who are doing their youngsters a greater hurt than any baby-beater ever inflicted on his. For they are making their children's souls instead of their bodies.

Ann when we see splendid children, who should make fine men and women, having their characters distorted and their lives ruined by the way they are being reared, we can do nothing to save them. We cannot take a fond mother's darlings away from her because she is spoiling them to death and unfitting them for life.

So we have the parents who are careful that their children live in a salubrious climate, that they have plenty of sunshine and fresh air, but who never give a single thought to the spiritual atmosphere in which they grow up.

In many a home the children never breathe a breath of air that is not surcharged with the hatred of their parents for each other, and that is as poisonous as any gas ever used in warfare. Their natures are warped in their very cradles by their fathers' and mothers' quarrels and they develop into cynical and bitter men and women because, from their infancy up, they had been fed on the dead sear of life.

We cannot conceive of a mother starving her children to death, but the very mothers who are careful of their babies' formulas and who take their youngsters have plenty of good, nourishing food and tenderness. They are too busy with clubs, or causes, or social affairs, or their housework to realize that a child cannot live by bread alone any more than a grownup can.

The children who never know what it is to be rocked to sleep on their mothers' breasts, or have Mother kiss and make it well, have their emotional natures as much stunted as their bodies would have been if they had never had the food they needed.

It is unthinkable that any parents who were not friends would take a perfectly formed little baby and bind it in such swaddling bands that it could never grow, but must forever be dwarfed. Yet how many fathers and mothers do you know who try to force their children to remain perpetual infants, and who never grant them any liberty of thought or action?

We cannot imagine fathers and mothers breaking their children's spirits and less for their own pleasure, but every day we see them breaking their children's hearts by refusing to let them marry the girls and boys of their own choice. Nor can we picture a father who would deliberately cripple his children, but we all know plenty of men who are failures because their parents broke their ambitions by discouraging them about everything they wanted to do, or forcing them into careers for which they had no aptitude.

Parental love can be cruel as well as kind.

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

James socks were warm, at least on the outside when he tucked them on this morning. Mine too would doubtless have been very warm had I not called me to early responsibilities. I set bread as soon as the water heated. No that, care for this method. Merely that I was driven to it. It too had its difficulties. As the very first, I searched in the files my memory in an effort to locate the yeast-cake Judy had fetched from the corner-store. I knew where I had placed it. No yeast cake there, Judy was already at the woodshed. Like myself, she likes to get wood early on Saturday. "Then" she explains "I clean up all the litter at once." I didn't call Judy for presently I found it in the pantry but in a cold room. Then I discovered the yeast and mixed the bread. Later when I ordered she said too innocently: "Can bread be set without a yeast-cake?" Mrs. Ellen? I need have had no trouble in this morning. There was plain on the grey of the building but then as I thought of it, etched by Other Fingers than mine, Judy was at her upstairs work when I commenced the baking. I'm obliged to inquire for so many things I ask apologetically now, for after all, one who attempts to unravel the mysteries of Judy's life is bound to ask for help. I said: "Especially when it is right before my eyes." Judy, have you seen the printed doughnuts? I called to her. "On the spice-shelf" Judy answers. I search there thoroughly checking package after package to find it so easily. I search more insistently—but, politely. "I can't find it Judy. She comes down to find it so easily. I search in Mrs. Ellen, in this tin." In a tin indeed and I looked for a package! Judy has a habit of hiding things, moving the spices a shelf lower. A very good plan too, when I become homesick for a drink of soda in the night, he would likely be gone before I could finally locate it. Judy tells me, but I still reach to it to him! "You'll get used to it" Judy tells me, but I still reach to it to him! "You'll get used to it" Judy tells me, but I still reach to it to him!

I did other baking as well this morning, with Judy assisting at times. Pausing now and then to take in the beauty of the morning from the pantry-window where I worked. The shadow of a building on the white of the snow; the intricate design of the maple branches against the pump-house. Once in school-years I had to draw the outline of a tree and I remember finding it so difficult then. It would be a trouble this morning. There was plain on the grey of the building but then as I thought of it, etched by Other Fingers than mine, Judy was at her upstairs work when I commenced the baking.

We made a fruit-cake of sorts this morning. Judy eagerly assisted at the work. Raisins were our only fruit. I think sometimes there is as much enjoyment in the spicy fragrance that reaches to every room, when one mixes and bakes such a cake, as the taking of a slice of its richness. This one presented a respectable appearance. I had it for my approval. "It's done" she assured me.
