

Canadian Trio Provide Blood Conserve Life

MADRID, July 23—(CP)—Because they are three, and because there is something distinctly out of the ordinary about their friendship...

When he learned of their project, he closed his office and volunteered as truck driver. He drove Dr. Bethune and Sorensen in the new truck across France into Spain.

He loves to sit in cafes in Madrid and Valencia and talk with the Spanish soldiers, laborers and farmers. Periodically, during his months in Spain, Sorensen has been into moods of deep melancholy.

Every now and then he declares that he wants to get a machine-gun and go over the top. In spite of his linguistic ability, he speaks Spanish, English, French and German and serves as interpreter, liaison officer and truck driver for the unit.

He reached the hospital, all hued, lavishly furnished place which formerly had been occupied by a Spanish duke. Gorgeous tapestries were still hanging in the high-ceilinged halls. They entered.

A test was made. It was found that the soldier was of the same blood group as Sorensen. Sorensen climbed up on the table and lay beside the soldier.

He is a little over six feet tall with dark hair and fine, aristocratic features. He is son of Paul F. Sise, one of Canada's healthiest business executives, whose home is in Montreal.
