Scott, chief commissioner of the Greater Winnipeg Water District, was seen Wednesday by Mayor Green, states a Winnipeg exchange of recent date. However, the matter of administration is still a problem for the future, he said. The Greater Winnipeg Sanitary District board will hold its first meeting at the city hall, Wednesday afternoon, with the mayor in the chair. The proceedings will be more or less formal, consisting of passage of a few bylaws preparatory to getting the organization under way. Mr. Scott referred to his being a native of Prince Edward Island, and as an engineer was employed here during the building of our Water Works. The reservoir and other projects were constructed under his supervision. He recently paid a holiday visit to his native Province.

IN MEMORIAM
DANIEL K. MACDONALD
The sudden and tragic death of Mr. Daniel K. MacDonald, which occurred on Friday morning, July 19th, 1934, has saddened the whole community of Hartsville and many neighboring districts where he was known and loved. Mr. MacDonald was killed instantly by a fall of gravel in the pit where he was at work.
At their home on the Glen Valley Road Mrs. MacDonald was preparing dinner when she heard the heart-breaking news. No one will ever quite realize how terrible the shock of such tidings must have been. Nevertheless, the few intimate friends who were present at the time can bear witness to the gallant and courageous spirit of the young man. From an unseen source she was given strength to carry this heavy cross.
The funeral service was held at Mr. MacDonald's late residence on Sunday afternoon, July 21st, and the vast throngs which attended were a silent tribute to the esteem in which he was held. The service was conducted by Mr. Rudolph J. Berlis, the acting minister of Hartsville Presbyterian church. Mr. Berlis, deeply touched by the tragedy, delivered a thoughtful address in which he paid tribute to Mr. MacDonald's splendid character and stressed the Christian's assurance of immortality. Rev. H. Staver, a former Hartsville Minister, assisted in the service. The familiar solo "Will the Circle be Unbroken" was beautifully rendered by Mr. Robert Hill.
Following the last rites of the church, a brief but impressive service according to the Masonic ritual was held at the grave in Hartsville cemetery. Mr. MacDonald was an honored member of the Prince of Wales Masonic Lodge and the pall-bearers were all brother Masons: James E. Andrews, Horace Cutcliffe, Murdoch Cutcliffe, Granville Buntain, John MacLeod and Eldon Seaman.
Beautiful floral tributes were presented by the following friends and local societies: "Brothers and sisters"; Mr. and Mrs. Brenton Dolph; Mr. William Hollywell; Mrs. Ella MacDonald, the Prince of Wales Masonic Lodge, and the Springton Women's Institute.
Mr. MacDonald was the last surviving member of his family. His only brother, John A. MacDonald, passed away in 1928.
Mr. MacDonald, known by everyone as "Dan," was only in his 36th year at the time of his death and his untimely passing has shaken profoundly the whole community of his friends. A young Christian of the finest type, he manifested a spirit of generosity and friendliness which won universal admiration. He was ready to expend time and effort if anyone were in trouble and his unaffected cheerfulness even in the face of difficulties will be missed sorely by friends and neighbors. He was industrious and clean-living—a grand example of young Canadian manhood at its best. The radiant beautiful home-like which Mr. and Mrs. MacDonald had achieved together was a challenge to everyone.
The heartfelt sympathy and prayers of all go out to young Mrs. MacDonald in the loss of her beloved husband. In these days so dark and lonely for her, multitudes of friends remember and seek to help her in every possible way.
"As when the setting sun in the far west
Touching with golden light all in its path
Tarrys a moment on its way to rest,
Then sinks, in strength, to seek its aftermath;
So went he on an evening to farewell,
That gleaming life which over us had shone
Gilding with beauty all on which we fell,
Tarrying with us an instant—then was gone.
But even as the sky is glowing still
And filled with gorgeous colours,
Though the sun has set,
Goes on his wondrous labours to fulfill—
So is it with us, now his life is done.
That brilliant glowing splendour which was his

Scientist Brings Frozen Monkeys Back to Life
HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 6.—Dr. Ralph Willard exhibited today a male rhesus monkey named Jekal which he said he had resuscitated after having frozen it "solid."
Another monkey, Matilda, did not respond to the technique of Dr. Willard, a native of the Russian state of Georgia, who now directs a clinical laboratory here. A third, Gaston, still was in the zero-cold chamber of an electric ice machine from which Dr. Willard said he will take it in a few days. Several months ago Dr. Willard announced successful similar experiments with guinea pigs.
Dr. Willard said he first put the monkeys under ether, then injected a solution of sodium citrate to prevent blood coagulation. The monkeys, he said, were then placed in the ice machine.
Jekal was brought to life by slow stages. Dr. Willard said.
Dr. Willard believes his experiments with the freezing and resuscitation of animals may yield important knowledge of gland control that might be applicable to human beings.

The Actor Colony At Fortune
(Camera and Curtain in Montreal Daily Star)
CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I., August 6.—There is an interesting spot in the Garden of the Gulf called Bay Fortune. There are other intriguing places, notably the local golf course (but that's an entirely different story, which, accurately reported, could never appear on the pages of this Saturday theatrical department is that there is to be found a colorful sentiment revolving around stage folk.
Years ago, it seems, an actor or actress decided that Bay Fortune was a lovely location for a summer's respite from the arduous life of the theatre. Soon quite a colony of thespians cropped up and thrived and continued even to the present day. They liked it, and I don't blame them, for Bay Fortune is a beautiful corner of a very attractive island.
One of the crowd of Manhattan players who found solace in its sparkling waters and succored in its caressing spherics was known as Flockton. You may have heard of him. I never have. However, when Mr. Flockton departed this life, his last request was that his ashes be taken to the island, scattered in the bay, and there stands in its waters a monument to his memory.
Whether or not his ashes were actually scattered over the bay is a nice point, for another distinctly different legend persists. Some folks have it that when Flockton died in Florida, his iron coffin was washed from the shores of that Sunny State and floated up into Bay Fortune. Since playwrights and actors have a way of doing the extraordinary, not to say the impossible at times, maybe this did happen.
Not many weeks past a group of performers from Gotham were vacationing at Bay Fortune, thought to pay their holiday visit by organizing a troupe of strolling players. They rehearsed a piece and hired a hall in Charlottetown, giving two performances. The plan was to roam throughout the island, entertaining where the spirit moved and facilities were available. Unfortunately they failed to gauge the tastes of these particular citizens and the venture died an early death. Too bad, too, for no finer place exists for a summer theatre.

King of Bronx Still Under Fire
ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 6.—The State of New York launched a new campaign of official harassment against Dutch Schultz tonight. Using as its instrument an order directing the erstwhile king of the Bronx underworld to appear in court for an income tax examination Thursday.
The move came with startling suddenness at Syracuse and Schultz was so surprised he merely accepted service of the warrant in his hotel room without show of legal objection.
Less than a week ago, Schultz escaped the frying pan of federal prosecution for the alleged evasion of $92,000 in income tax payments when a jury in Malone, N. Y., acquitted him. He immediately found himself in the cross fire of police edicts from New York City, where Mayor La Guardia sounded the official keynote. It was:
"There is no place for him here."
Similar bans have been issued against him in Syracuse, Albany and Troy.
When he heard what Mayor La Guardia had said, Schultz sounded off in defiance with the declaration that he was, nevertheless, going back to the city that made him a beer baron during prohibition days. He didn't know at the time he might go back under a court order.

STERLING INSTITUTE, STANLEY BRIDGE
The July meeting of Sterling Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Thomas Bolger with twelve members and two visitors in attendance and the president, Mrs. H. S. MacEwen, presiding. After the usual opening numbers the minutes were read and adopted. The correspondence included a letter from the secretary of the Children's Aid Society and a letter from a member of the community who had hospital treatment, thanking the members for a small gift sent her. Mrs. Frank Bell reported several visits made and fruit brought to the sick.
New committees were appointed to visit the sick—Mrs. T. Bolger, Mrs. Earl Henry and Levisa Fleming; to prepare the program—Mrs. Lorne MacEwen and Mrs. Austin Walsh; and to prepare the lunch—Mrs. Lorne MacEwen, Mrs. A. Walsh, Pansy Adams and Hilda Hiscott.
A splendid account of the annual convention, held in Charlottetown, was given by Mrs. T. Bolger, and Mrs. Dimock, a visitor from Stoughton, Mass., gave an account of the workings of different women's organizations in her town.
The program included a contest put on by Mrs. H. S. MacEwen, first prize being won by Mrs. J. E. Fleming; a humorous reading by Mrs. Dimock, and vocal and instrumental music by Miss C. Campbell.
Mrs. Wallace MacKay invited the members to her home for the August meeting, roll call to be answered by "Two minute speech on a subject."

Catch of Fish in June Higher Than Same Month 1934
(Canadian Press)
HALIFAX, Aug. 6.—Fishermen of the Maritime Provinces and the Magdalen Islands caught 63,341,800 pounds of fish during June, according to the monthly report of the Eastern Division of the Federal Department of Fisheries. This represents an increase over the catch for the same month of 1934 when 63,053,200 pounds were taken from the Atlantic waters.
The landed value of the catch showed a corresponding jump, returns netting the fishery $1,499,515 compared with $1,358,897 for June, 1934.
Nova Scotia fishermen led the other provinces and the Magdalen Islands both in total catch and value received. A catch of 39,402,700 pounds brought $918,117. Figures for the same period of last year were 36,558,700 pounds valued at $691,421.
Poor ice and weather conditions prevented Cape Breton seagoers from taking many fish during May, thus tending to increase June's returns. Scarcity of codfish off the Cape Breton coast resulted in a decrease of 3,733,200 pounds in the month's catch. All other important varieties showed large increases.
In New Brunswick, fishermen brought in 12,293,100 pounds, more than 5,000,000 of which were sardines, but this represented a decided drop over the figures for June, 1934, when the catch was 16,068,600 pounds. The landed value was correspondingly low—$263,187 against $357,225 for last year.
The catch for Prince Edward Island fish increased more than 500,000 pounds, but the returns showed a slight decrease in the landed value. A total of 4,577,800 pounds brought only $175,620 this year, while 4,041,200 pounds sold for $183,276 in June, 1934.
Magdalen Islands fishermen took 6,978,200 pounds of fish from the Gulf of St. Lawrence during June, 1934, and received $139,501. Last year the total catch was 6,384,700 pounds, and the landed value $127,045.

LISBON, Aug. 6.—Twenty-two men were saved early today when fire gutted the British Freighter Methill off Cape St. Marie, in the Mediterranean. The captain and crew were taken off safely by the Spanish Ship Campeador, which took them to Gibraltar. The British Freighter Methill also went to the rescue and towed the ship toward Lisbon.

Guard Boundary Against Plague of Jap Beetles
(Canadian Press)
SAINT JOHN, N. B., Aug. 6.—Fifteen traps, baited with perfume, have been set in Saint John because Japanese beetles are spreading toward Canada after ravaging orchards, vineyards and gardens in the United States. At many points along the international boundary line entomological agents are watching to prevent entry of the pests, which might cost Canadian agriculturalists millions of dollars. Shaped like lampshades and baited with fragrant geraniol, the traps have yet to catch a beetle and this is regarded as an indication that the oriental pests have not reached this area. Geraniol, a lure devised by the United States department of agriculture, emanates the same flower-like odor as female beetles. Thus a male beetle near one of these traps is apt to sniff his way to doom.
On the principle of bug eat bug, entomologists in the States are increasing the campaign of extermination by pitting wasplike parasites against their deadly enemies, the hard-shelled, tank-like beetles. The winged insects were imported from Japan for the special purpose of having them feed on beetles.
Vigilance has been increased by Canadian officials, who remember a previous disastrous experience. Hundreds of miles of corn land were laid waste in Ontario by the European corn borer, said to have been imported in a bale of broom corn. As a result Canadian farmers had to turn to South Africa and the Argentine for a greatly increased proportion of their feed corn.

WEARER OF THIS HAT LIKELY TO BE SHUNNED
NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP)—At last it has been created: A hat "to wear when you have the mumps, and want to go out that night."
This long-needed bit of head-gear, a turban with a gold veil that swatches are ears and throat—was brought forth today at a fall hat show. The designer (John Fredericks) also launched this style hint:
Splash some ink on your new fall hat if you would be smart and match it with an ink-stained scarf.
The ink splashes, red and blue, appeared on a white wool scarf and white insets of a sapphire blue velvet hat.
Hats of imitation beaver were shown: It's new, it hasn't been done since Grandmother's day.

SAYS MAN STILL HEAD OF HOUSE
(Canadian Press)
SAINT JOHN, N. B., Aug. 5.—Regardless of what some women may think, the man is still the head of his home, J. Starr Tait, K.C., crown prosecutor, declared emphatically in the police court here. He was arguing in the case of a defendant charged with possessing liquor while under a restriction order at his house, where his wife is the legal tenant.
"Even though the lease be in the wife's name, it is the man's home if he lives there. The man is the head of the house," contended Mr. Tait.
Magistrate F. W. Palmer expressed the opinion "it's his home if his wife lives there" unless he had other residence.

THE PATTERN OF CANADIAN PROGRESS

Notwithstanding business depressions which should be regarded as an impediment to progress, the natural expectation in a country such as Canada is for fairly well-sustained growth in production and trade says Messrs. A. E. Ames & Co's report. This expectation finds its origin in three principal assumptions, viz, (a) that our population will increase, (b) that the standard of living will rise, (c) that our foreign trade will expand.
Each of these assumptions predicates an eventual revival and enlargement in the demand for goods and services and an eventual replacement and expansion in the machinery and facilities for production which are always subject to depreciation, obsolescence and decrepitude. In other words, growing need necessarily means growing business.

Our population in relation to our resources is far from the saturation point, and, irrespective of business conditions, it continues to grow, thereby providing one of the basic reasons for business recovery. According to official estimates the population of Canada has increased in the last ten years as follows:
Our population grows at the rate of between 150,000 and 200,000 each year; in 1935 it is approximately 1,000,000 larger than in 1929.
Granting that our present dependence upon foreign trade determines the degree of economic welfare of a considerable part of our population, it still remains true that the long-term upward trend of Canadian business reflects in an important way the numbers and standard of living of our own people.
The pattern of Canadian progress can, therefore, be traced only by an upward line from which we deviate as our situation changes month by month. The chief interest of the accompanying chart is that it shows in graphic form the variable conditions under which this country has moved forward in past years. It also measures the scope of our recovery since 1933 and the quickened pace still necessary to return us to the line of our long-term growth.
