STAGE SET

be written as to the results the conference may hope to achieve but, as one confree said today, "the biggest moves are planned by the biggest men and they (Churchill and Roosevelt) are not coming here for their health."

High officials of the Allied armed forces, with experience on every front in which Allied forces are engaged, are in the Chateau Frontenac, conference headquarters, in an advisory and planning capacity.

A clear indication that Pacific strategy is not being neglected in the Allied staff conferences was given when it became known Col. Emmett O'Donnell, American flying expert on the Far East, was in Quebec. He appeared at a press conference held in the Quebec City Council Chamber.

Today in Washington Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State, said he may come to Quebec to participate in the conference. It previously was confirmed that Rt. Hon. Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary is coming.

The anticipated presence of these two men indicated that deliberation on political phases of the global war is likely to form a major part of the conference. Determination of the official status of the French committee for national liberation is expected to be one result of the Churchill-Roosevelt meeting.

Reports from London today quoted a press association report that Brendan Bracken, British Minister of Information, was likely to come to Quebec. There was no immediate confirmation here.

Among arrivals today was Hon. Leighton McCarthy, Canadian Minister to the United States, who came by train from Washington to join the staff of Canadian officials already here.

Canada, with an army overseas acting under direction of the British High Command, has been represented here from the start by Prime Minister Mackenzie King and a large delegation, including the Canadian chiefs of staff.

BOOK ON MODEL AIRCRAFT—The most modern art in the world is that of scale model aircraft building. An interesting book on this subject has been received from Useful Publications, 37 Aldych, London, Eng., giving exhaustive instructions to flying fans who desire to make faithful copies of real aircraft. The book is well illustrated and the author, Mr. V.J.G. Woodason, a professional aircraft model maker has spared no pains in giving accurate and detailed information. A chapter is devoted to the use of scale models for teaching aircraft recognition, another to international markings and camouflage. The work concludes with a lenghty list of the principal aircraft types in use by the fighting powers.

He was educated in England, Scotland and in Leipzig, Germany. In the last Great War in which he served from 1914-18, he won the D.S.O., the M.C., and was mentioned in despatches for bravery. He subsequently held ministorial charges in Lethbridge, Ont., Montreal and Quebec. At the beginning of the present war he was appointed senior Protestant chaplain for Military District No. 6 and served at Quebec, St. John, and Halifax

ENEMY FEARS

Sertorius said. "It goes without saying that the German-Italian command prepared for such eventualities."

In another broadcast the Germans sought to explain the Sicilian retreat, saying:—

"Even bringing up stronger German reserves from the mainland could not have offset fundamentally the disproportion of forces, which was to the disadvantage of the Axis from the very start."

The Berlin radio declared 2 1-2 German divisions crossed the Messina Strait to the Italian mainland, completing the evacuation of Sicily by 6 a.m. today.

Heavy armament and transport equipment also were saved, a broadcast asserted, and Sicilian military installations were destroyed.

Berlin asserted these German units had fought 15 allied divisions and "tied down and considerably mauled them" before withdrawal. (Ten divisions—four British, five American and one Canadian—have been officially reported in Sicily).

A special communique of the German High Command related:—

"Evacuation of the island according to plan has been proceeding for the past fortnight."

CANADIAN NAVY

Davis of Duncan, BC., landed 8th army soldiers north of Cape Passero while the others under Lieut. W. J. Mullins of Bromptonville, Que., and Lieut. K. E. Koyl of Winnipeg rushed supplies to beaches farther north after bridgeheads had been established

"They performed the job superbly," said Cmdr. MacLaughan, seated in an office at Royal Canadian Navy headquarters here. "The men manning assault craft were finished a few hours after daylight and cleared off, but the boys engaged in supplying the beaches worked like trojans 24 hours a day. A week after the landings they were still beetling back and forth from huge transports to the beaches."

Narrow Escapes

McLaughlan, member of the R.C.N.V.R., had a couple of narrow escapes when the destroyer carrying the naval staff was dive-bombed and subjected to fire from tanks and field guns when the warship crept inside Augusta harbor before it had fallen to the 8th army.

A bomb hit the stern of the destroyer as it roved along the beaches near Syracuse and the staff was forced to transfer to another vessel. Later during a patrol around Augusta this destroyer entered the harbor and exchanged salvoes with German field guns on shore and came under the fire of a nest of about 180 Tiger tanks sheltered in a grove.

"The tanks versus warship was a strong shooting match," Cmdr. MacLaughlan recalled. "The tanks could see us plainly as we were cruising just offshore, but we only had a hazy idea about their location. We let them have a few blasts, but we were never sure whether our aim was effective."

At Syracuse and Augusta Italian prisoners were only too glad to pitch in and help the Allies land supplies at jetties.

At Syracuse, where a Canadian armored brigade was landed and held in reserve, more than 3,000 tons of material were landed within 48 hours after the port had been captured, he said.

One of the strangest sights was a ragged and dirty mine-sweeper chugging into port with a brand new Italian submarine in tow, he continued. The sub was run down in the Mediterranean and surrendered after the officers had been killed by gunfire from the minesweeper.

The Canadian flotillas left Britain during March, making the long trip to the Middle East around Cape of Good Hope. For weeks they practised landings on waters cut off from prying eyes and when the big moment came they went into action with confidence born of long hours on the job.

New Ont. Gov't Is Sworn In

TORONTO, Aug. 17—(CP)—Nine years of Liberal administration in Ontario ended officially today when the 10-member Progressive Conservative government of Premier George Drew was sworn in shortly after Harry Nixon and his colleagues in the government that was swamped in the Aug. 4 election formally relinquished office.

The 49-year-old Guelph-born Premier, whose party holds 38 of the 90 seats, heads Ontario's first minority administration since that of E.C. Drury's United Farmers of Ontario group that held office from 1919-1923. In the House the straight party Drew Government will face 34 C.C.F. members, 16 Liberals and three others, including former Premier Mitchell Hepburn who won election as an independent Liberal.

The cabinet, two less than the Nixon Regime, has one particular feature. Leslie M. Frost, 47-year-old Lindsay barrister, holds both the treasury and mines portfolios but Col. Drew told reporters the added burden of the mines department would be temporary pending survey of that department by a committee yet to be appointed.

Otherwise, the cabinet line-up was similar to published forecasts. Agriculture Minister is Col. Thomas L. Kennedy, 64-year-old Peel County farmer, who held the post in the government of George S. Henry, defeated in 1934 by the Liberals under Mr. Hepburn. Mr. Kennedy was the first Minister sworn in after the Premier and this led observers to believe he might be named deputy Premier.

The Attorney-General is Leslie Blackwell, who defeated Health Minister Harold Kirby in Toronto Eglington. With Col. Drew, who represents Toronto High Park, he makes up Toronto's representation in the cabinet.

George H. Doucette, 46, member for Lanark, was given the portfolios of highways and public works. He is a director of the Ontario Good Roads Association and took a prominent part in highway discussions during the last session. He, Mr. Dunbar and George H. Challies, Minister without portfolio and member for Granville-Dundas, are the three eastern Ontario cabinet members.

Dr. R.P. Vivian, from the central Ontario riding of Durham, will be the new Health Minister. Mayor Charles Daley of St. Catharines, the member for Lincoln, takes the labor portfolio while western Ontario's only cabinet representative is the lands and forestry Minister, Wesley G. Thompson of Blenhem in Kent East.

Col. Drew combines the education portfolio with the Premiership — a procedure which has been followed under some previous Conservative administrations.

ALL ENEMY

clared in their broadcast communique that all their forces had been evacuated.

Te latest reports said soldiers of Maj.-Gen Lucian K. Truscott's American 3rd division were crushing the last flickering resistance in hand-to-hand battle with trapped enemy nests in the city of 192,000 while the Germans in the fading hours of dawn were desperately striving to evacuate remaining troops.

Enemy Prepares New Retreat

Already 155-millimetre artillery —the American "Long Toms"— duelled with 15-inch enemy batteries across the Strait, while British destroyers had sighted the flame and smoke of German demolitions on the south coast of the Italian toe.

These demolitions were the first indication that the Germans were making preparations to withdraw farther north up the Italian Peninsula in case the Allies' seaborne operations are extended to the mainland in pursuit of the escaped foe.

(Rome radio, in a broadcast recorded by the CBC in Ottawa, said a large Allied invasion fleet of barges, laden with troops and tanks, had been sighted off Catania east Sicilian port.)

British and American naval concentrations in the Mediterranean were the most impressive of the war.

The feverish activity of Allied naval forces, announced in today's communique, included a bombardment of Scalea on the Gulf of Policastro in which 1,000 shells were sent screaming into the targets in 20 minutes.

British warships put to flight a formation of enemy torpedo boats near Cape Rizutto and American units carried out a similar mission at the northern entrance to Messina Strait.

Heavy Air Operations

One of the heaviest single air operations was that by Middle East American heavy bombers, large formations of which dropped 150 tons of bombs on the big air base of Foggia, the airdromes of Tortorella and San Nicola, and Satellite fields in southern Italy.

The bombers stirred up a hornets' nest of experienced Axis fighters, nearly 100 of them, but shot down at least 43. The raid cost eight bombers.

Air commanders said the Germans and Italians had lost nearly 2,000 airplanes in the effort to defend Sicily since July 1—1,100 of the aircraft captured on airdromes since the invasion began at dawn July 10.

Reds Continue To Advance

LONDON, Aug. 17—(AP) — The Red Army smashed through stiffening German resistance today to make gains up to four miles toward Bryansk and improved their positions in the drives upon Smolensk and Kharkov in fighting that killed more than 10,000 Germans, Moscow announced tonight.

The Germans were falling back from position after position in the Bryansk area, where the red troops were last reported 15 miles east of the great German defence centre. More than 60 towns and villages were taken and the Moscow radio reported that "fierce fighting does not slacken for a moment."

The Germans, dislodged from their main line, were said to be in retreat, covering their rear with tank and plane counter-attacks

Roosevelt Sidelights

QUEBEC, Aug. 17—(CP)—Censorship forbids saying what weather was like when President Roosevelt was formally received in the citadel late this afternoon but it was a colorful and memorable scene as he took the salute from a combined services guard of honor on the ancient parade ground.

Photographers were disappointed because the President and Governor-General were in a leiphaeton with the top up and the famous Roosevelt smile and grin were in deep shadow.

More than 100 news, camera and radio workers, waited nearly an hour for the arrival. But the hour and a half wait was the 45 minutes after the President's arrival before the transmitting the news was confirmity with instructions from censorship officers.

It was difficult to see the President's face but he seemed grave and serious and the same expression was apparent on the faces of Prime Minister Churchill and Prime Minister MacKenzie King who seemed determined not to intrude into the arrival ceremonies which were staged for the United States President.
