for Czechoslovakia.

Prime Minister Chamberlain returned to London tonight from his vacation in Scotland for a conference with Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, on the latest developments in the crisis.

The rupture in negotiations followed closely upon a statement in London by an authorized British spokesman which was interpreted as an indirect warning to the German Government and the Sudeten Germans to consider seriously the latest Prague concessions.

The spokesman said the Czechoslovak proposals "seem to represent a basis on which negotiations might well be conducted" and "it is hoped here that both sides will get together and examine them in a spirit of good will."

Deny Editorial Inspired

The spokesman denied that The Times of London was officially inspired in a suggestion advanced editorially that Czechoslovakia might find the best way to preserve herself by permitting the Sudeten region to secede and join Germany.

Lord Halifax was said personally to have ordered issuance of the statement declaring that "The Times' editorial 'in no way represents the views of His Majesty's Government.'"

Lord Halifax is known to consider a plebiscite to determine the question almost as dangerous as an outright German invasion. But some reliable quarters heard reports, impossible to confirm, that the editorial possibly was a "trial balloon" sent up for the Chamberlain Government.

The editorial in the often officially inspired Times created gloom in Czechoslovak quarters. They suggested that suspension of negotiations by the Sudeten German Party was directly due to this as apparent evidence that Britain would do anything but fight for Czechoslovakia.

May Outline Stand

Premier Mussolini of Italy, Hitler's partner in the Rome-Berlin axis, was expected to outline the Italian position in the crisis with a speech at Trieste, perhaps Saturday, when Il Duce will pay a long-promised visit to the former Austrian seaport on the Adriatic. It was reported from Gibraltar that two British destroyers and also had a fine herd of registered Brown Swiss cattle on show. Another outstanding exhibitor was Jesse Matthews, Alberton, Jersey herd which carried off the main prizes in that class.

The Ayrshires were not up to their usual fit and entries were not as large, although there were some fine individuals. W. A. Mose of New Annan had a very fine female in the three year olds and there were two choice males in the one year old class. The beef breeds were a larger entry than other years but lacked fit.

The Montrose and Alma Calf Clubs had a very fine showing of Holsteins and Mr. Roper was very pleased with their turnout. Mr. Irving who judged the sheep and pigs was well pleased with these exhibits.

There was a material increase in the number of hogs shown and there were many new exhibitors, including W. P. MacGregor of Lot 16. The standard and quality were greatly improved and were far better market lambs, but they were much better fleshed than last year's showing. The breeding pens compared favorably with other years revealing the introduction of registered stock.

Poultry

Mr. Nash, judge of poultry, stated there was very little competition in this class although the birds were of good quality. The Juniors had an excellent exhibit.

Dr. Clark, Superintendent of the Experimental Farm, judged the fruit, flowers and grain and was well pleased with the exhibit of wheat, both "Reward" and "Coronation" a rust resisting variety. This is a new venture here and showed no sign of rust while the other varieties had some rust. There was some fine barley but the oats were not up to other years.

Mr. Ernest E. Eaton judged the roots, vegetables and potatoes. The vegetables were very fine indeed especially the collection of varieties. Mr. Doucette of Charlottetown judged the dairy exhibits which were very good.

Until then all discussions of political questions appeared to be deferred.

"Liquidate Moravska Ostrava first," the Sudetens were saying. Explaining the break up of negotiations a party communique said "unexampled excesses by the state police" demonstrated the government did not control the situation "sufficiently to begin discussions."

The statement added that the party had just determined to negotiate on the basis of the government's most recent concessions when news of the border incident arrived.

The delegates thereupon decided to break off their discussions and to inform the Premier they felt compelled owing to the incident at Moravska Ostrava to interrupt negotiations," it added.

Stories spread that prisoners in the city jail were being abused, and four Sudeten deputies, Mal, Koellner, Neuwirth and Ritzch went to the jail to investigate.

The Czechs said there was no objection to that but that outside an excited, singing crowd became disorderly and mounted police attempted to preserve order.

Deputy Mal said he protested to the police commander saying he was a member of parliament.

He said another officer answered, "Je fuk," meaning approximately, "that is just so much sausage," and started applying his whip.

Mal ducked his head and escaped in the confusion. He went to a doctor who noted professionally that there was a bruise across his shoulders.

Effect of the incident in Prague was electric and left the British mission aghast.

Two incidents apart from the Moravska Ostrava affair made the Polish-German-Czechoslovak frontier region a hot corner.
