CURSE O' LOVE

A Story of Love and Its Toss by MILDRED BARBOUR

CHAPTER 69. THE RESOURCEFUL YOUNG AMERICAN.

The young man stared at Cynthia and at the child in her arms. "I'd not advise you to go out, Madam," he said crisply. "There's still a bit of firing."

Cynthia looked at him haughtily, because she didn't resent his glance, and, somehow, she felt that she should. "I'll risk the fire to be free for a moment of that wretched cough it's all dust and cold and panicky people."

"It's not mine," said Cynthia, gladly handing over her heavy burden. "His mother's in there somewhere, where having hysterics. I think she's forgotten all about it."

"You're not the engineer?" she questioned. He threw back his head and laughed. "No, I'm not the engineer. He's Chinese—and wishing at this minute that he was somewhere else. He's got a bad case of cold feet, poor fellow. You can't blame him."

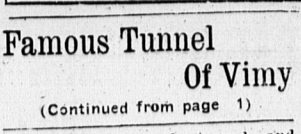

"Then," declared Cynthia triumphantly, "you're the American who fixed up the aerial and afterwards went out with a flag of truce."

"Yes," he admitted, "but what about it?" She flushed. "It's—it's nice to see someone with courage to do something—some one who won't let a handful of Chinese troops dictate to us."

"I'm afraid we have more than a handful to cope with. But, we'll do the best we can to get out of this jam. He nudged at her. "You don't look like the sort who'd stand firm much yourself. What are you doing here anyway? It's a dangerous time to be traveling around China."

Famous Tunnel Of Vimy

We entered a dark tunnel and found ourselves in a labyrinth of passages, dug-outs and battalion headquarters cut far below the ground level in the white chalk of Vimy Ridge. It was as though we had been switched back to April 1917—that time when the Canadian divisions advanced to the conquest of Vimy Ridge. Nothing had changed.

The smoke from the candles once set in niches to light the passages was still black on the chalk. The dug-outs and the walls of the communication passages were covered with names carved in the chalk or written in pencil and as legible as when they were inscribed during the great battle of Arras. The maple leaf of Canada was carved with an original variety in a hundred different places, and on the walls I read at random such inscriptions as these:—

103234, James Burton, A Company, Royal Canadian Regiment, May 8, 1917. Still alive and kicking. W. J. Auchincloss, A Company, Royal Canadian Regiment, May 8, 1917. Untouched by whizz-bangs as yet.

I cannot describe the feelings with which a man in these days approaches the inscriptions written below the earth of the Arras sector. In their cheery naivety we who have survived and can look back on 1917 with the calm unconcern of historians seem to touch Canadian boys who, 10 years ago, crouched in these chalk dug-outs, still "alive and kicking," still "untouched by whizz-bangs," joking, laughing, waiting, quite unconscious that they were carving not only their names, but also history.

We walked for about half a mile, going deeper into Grange subway, until we came to a station headquarters. On a table, which had been used as an officers' mess during the Canadian advance on Vimy, were carved the following names: Major McCaghey, Major Collins, Lieutenant Abbott, Lieutenant Jamieson, Lieutenant H. Cook, May 10, 1927, 52 Battalion Canadian B. Company. In a little carved shield were the words, "Dick Swift."

We stood there, lighting matches in the dark, wondering what had happened to these men, wondering whether they still live somewhere in Canada, or whether they fell on Vimy Ridge. No matter whether they are alive or dead, their personalities live beneath the soil of France so vividly that one expects to meet them round the next corner.

While we were going on towards Mine Shaft, which the Canadians drove beneath the enemy lines, my foot kicked a small object. It was a tin of bully beef! It had been opened, but it was 10 years old! I leave to the imagination of any man who knows what bully beef was like when comparatively young to judge how this specimen looked and smelt.

"See this?" said Captain Simpson, holding up a queer grey slab. It was gum cotton, stamped 1916. "Down there, about 100 feet below our present level," he said, "we found a dump of Mills bombs and also sacks of T.N.T. We have removed them reverently."

In the amazing collection of names written on the walls I came across two which roused my curiosity. They were: Ship No. 7,129, 1st. Section, 7th Division, U.S.M.C., Texas Leather Neck Corps. Ship No. 3,112, G.M., 2nd Class, 3rd Division, Flagship, U.S.S., Saratoga, Asiatic Fleet.

FAREWELL ADDRESS

The members of the Grand River Women's Institute held a special meeting on Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. Joseph D. McLellan, Cass Rivers, for the purpose of bidding farewell to one of their members, Mrs. William J. McDonald, Bayside, who was leaving the following morning for New York.

Mrs. Edward Larkins, president of the Institute, read the following address: Dear Mrs. McDonald: In view of your impending departure, we have taken advantage of this occasion to bid you farewell. Coming to us as a stranger but a few years ago, your bright disposition and engaging personality have won you an envied place in our affections, and we regret that you are to leave us even for a brief period. During your time here you have given of your best and each society in turn has been benefited by your assistance and direction. As president of our Institute during the first year of its existence, your untiring zeal and constant effort brought it to a high state of perfection and its later success owes much to you.

We hope that the few months which you plan on spending amid the scenes of your childhood may bring you much pleasure, and we shall eagerly look forward to your return. Kindly accept the accompanying gift as a token of the love of your sister workers in the Grand River Women's Institute. Grand River, Nov. 1st, 1927. Mrs. McDonald briefly thanked the ladies for their thoughtful kindness and assured them that she too would look forward with pleasure to her return in the spring. A dainty lunch was then served by the ladies, and a pleasing musical programme rendered.

Tone Up The Blood And Nerves Now

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Have No Equal for This Purpose.

Anaemia, or lack of good blood causes not only pale faces and white lips; it is the root of many pains and miseries. It is the cause of shortness of breath, headaches and backaches, and the always tired feeling from which so many women and girls suffer. To regain new health and strength the blood should be enriched through the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. This medicine has brought new health and strength to thousands of weak despondent people.

Among those who have found new health through the use of this medicine is Mrs. Gregory J. Murphy, East Ship Harbor, N. S., who says:—"I bless the day I heard of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before I began their use I was in a run-down and very weak condition. The least exertion would leave me breathless and tired out. Housework was a trial, and at times I felt very shattered. A friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I got six boxes. I had not been taking the pills very long until I began to improve in health, and continuing their use they restored me to my former good health. I also gave the pills to my daughter, who was anaemic and run-down, with the same good results. Now I always have the pills in the house, and would not like to be without them."

OLD INN GIVEN TO CHURCH

"The Saracen's Head" Inn, King Norton, Birmingham, a fine half-

Infant Care

Mothers, you can't start too early to establish a child's serene and tranquil disposition. Even an infant can have a happy, fretless state of uninterrupted health. What will help do this? A simple, purely vegetable product as old as you are: plain Castoria. A few drops of Castoria will settle all uneasiness in a jiffy. Will dispel colic or ward off constipation; and just as surely check diarrhoea.

In real sickness, call a physician. But many physicians urge only Castoria for those little childish disorders that need nothing more. You need never be afraid to give pure Castoria. It is safe and perfectly harmless, for it contains no paregoric, no opiates, no dope of any kind. At least, this is true of the genuine Fletcher's Castoria—the one that is the kind doctors tell you always to buy. Fletcher's Castoria is fine for any child. All children love to take it.

timbered building of the 15th century, has been given to the parish church by the brewers, Messrs. Mitchell and Butlers. Probably the inn was formerly a manor house. It is recorded that Queen Henrietta Maria, the wife of Charles I., stayed there in 1643. King Norton manor was part of her marriage dowry.
