"Jack!" she screamed out, so that he might hear her above the roar of the thunder, the reverberation of their swift progress along the loosely fitted boards of the old bridge, the rain and the, to her, almost audible crack of lightning.

MAKE AND KEEP YOU WELL

It was a simply disgusting oath Roberta told herself. She might be too modern to be shocked at a little profanity, but he simply should not say such things. She would see that he never said that again. But Sir George! What earthly right had he to follow?

Sir George, only too anxious to answer that question, was following as closely behind them as Jack's speed permitted.

The old bridge, one of the few ancient woodpe covered bridges left thereabouts, was a long bridge, crossing the river at its widest.

The quaint wagon shedlike structure had windows at equal distances all the way across. These old covered bridges were delightful places in which to cool off in summer time, with their narrow windows showing every now and then the beautiful river and the equally beautiful shores.

In a rain such as today's the bridge was a long, dim, dark tunnel, lit by occasional flashes of lightning. The noise of the rain on the wooden roof was terrific. Sir George, with a sinking heart, remembered his small supply of petrol as he increased his speed slightly so that he might not lose sight of Jack. He would save for the last spur and stop Jack at the other side of the bridge just before he reached the highway.

Jack's plan was, of course, directly opposite. He meant to drive beyond the required regulations while he was on the bridge, and when he reached the entrance he intended to go flying at top speed up the hill to the broad highway that led to the New York road.

He had forgotten what his pursuer suddenly remembered with a relieved sigh, that there was a toll gate and a toll man at the other end of the bridge, and there the cars would have to stop while toll was paid.

Sir George, remembering this, relaxed. He could surely stop them at the gate, for Roberta would hardly care to stage a public scene. She might even be glad to come back with him. If she was not, then it was a thing to be settled between Jack and himself. Sir George rather hoped Roberta would not want to come with him at once, so that he might have that excuse to give Jack the beating that he richly deserved.

Then it happened. Suddenly, as it seemed instantly, after a long and terrible peal of thunder came a tremendous blinding flash and a sound as though something had been ripped. A rolling ball of fire flew before his eyes, a queer sulphurous smell filled the air and immediately his car and Jack's burst into flames.

Sir George's car, some distance behind Jack, stopped, then went forward as flame and smoke rolled up. He felt a moment of horror. Roberta! was Roberta hurt? Forgetting his own peril, for the flames were running along the roof and sides of the bridge and would soon reach him, he called aloud in his terrible anxiety and fear, as he drove forward. He did not realize that he was using the pet name the girl's father had given her and that he secretly thought charmingly fitted her boyish red-gold hair.

"Bobbie! Bobbie! Are you all right? He continued to shout as he leaped from his car and ran toward the fire which was now like a flaming screen between them. "Bobbie! Bobbie! Where are you?"

Beyond the smoke and flames, after her swift collapse against the shaking Jack, Roberta MacBeth lifted her head and listened. The shock had stunned them both and automatically Jack had stopped the car. What she heard made her turn to the flaming part of the bridge just behind them. Jack stretched out his hand to start the car again.

Again that agonized shout. This time it was plain to Roberta and Jack, too. "Bobbie! Bobbie! Wait! I'm coming."

Jack grinned an ugly grin. "He'll never get his car through that," he said, with a frightened look behind him.

But Roberta's hand was on his arm. "Don't start up Jack," she begged, "Wait until he comes."

"Like h-h-h Let that Englishman gum things up? You're crazy." He put his foot on the self starter.

Roberta promptly struck him across the face and pulled on the emergency brake. Before Jack could recover himself she was out of the car and running toward the fire. Through it, staggering, she could see a tall form.

"Bobbie! Bobbie! Don't be frightened!" Sir George called. "I'm coming!"

Half sobbing Roberta MacBeth ran forward. "Sir George, oh Sir George, I'm all right! Don't! Don't! Then she screamed.

Jack looked back. The tall figure with his clothes on fire, his forearm over his eyes, to shield them from the flames, came striding toward Roberta who, screaming, ran forward to meet him, flung her arms about him and began beating cut the flames with her bare hands. And as she beat at them the man picked her up in his arms and ran toward her.

The flames were licking nearer. They were terrific! Another bit of the roof caught, and with a roar, the fire leaped forward. The bridge behind them was like a funnel full of flames.

It was too much for Jack. He started the car, determined to get out of it at any cost. As for the girl, if she was fool enough to stick by that fellow she could stick, he was not going to wait for her. The wind was blowing the flames toward him now. Half in despair of his carefully laid plans, half out of a desire to justify his actions, he gave a loud call:

"Come on, Roberta!"

There was no reply, but as the car started it was suddenly checked. Jack had forgotten that his enemy was six foot three, but Sir George had not. As he saw the only hope for the girl and himself about to be taken from them, he dropped the girl and flung himself forward on the running board. One arm stole around Jack's neck. As the machine bounded forward wildly, Roberta screamed again and the car came to an abrupt stop.

A voice in Jack's ear had said: "Shut it off, you fool, until the girl gets in, or I'll strangle you. I don't mind telling you I'd enjoy doing it." Sir George, still with his hand on Jack's neck, motioned to Roberta to get in.

"Now you can hurry, my man, as you've never hurried before. You'll hear something presently when the flames reach my car."

He released Jack's throat, as the girl climbed in, but still on the running board with h's hand on Jack's arm, they dashed for the other side. There was a muffled explosion.

"There goes Ray's car," Sir George called to Roberta, smiling at her with an absurd, singed and blackened face, like a man badly made-up for a minstrel show. "And I was worried about not having enough petrol!" He leaned heavily on Jack's shoulder and shouted in his ear: "Here come the fire engines! We have only one chance in ten of getting off this bridge on dry land. Unless you rip out a little speed it will be a spectacular plunge into the Delaware for us."

SECURE WEDDING RING WITH GOLD PLATE PLUS TEETH AND 3 DOLLARS

AMBRIDGE, Pa., Sept. 6.—Love found a way tonight and J. M. Clero, Ambridge jeweler handed over a wedding ring for a gold plate and artificial teeth.

"I'd like to buy—a wedding ring," stammered a youth, "how much is this one?" "Five dollars," replied the dealer. "How much for this gold?" asked the youth, removing his teeth. "Oh—two dollars."

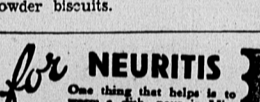

"Here," smiled the bridegroom to be, handing over three one dollar bills and the teeth.

A PRIZE WINNER FOR 17 YEARS

EDMONTON, Alta., Sept. 6.—(By The Canadian Press)—One of the most consistent winners of culinary prizes at the Edmonton exhibition is Mrs. A. H. Elliott, of Woodbend, who has captured first prizes for white and brown bread for the past 17 years. This year Mrs. Elliott advanced her claim to being one of the best home bakers in this district by winning first prizes for brown bread and baking powder biscuits.

The Crippled Lady of Peribonka

By James Oliver Curwood

History has recorded how Molly Brant, sister of Theyandanege, great chief of the Mohawks, became the bride of Sir William Johnson, the king's right arm in the Colonies.

After a hundred and thirty-five years the blood of lovely Molly had come into its own. The modern Molly, who lived in a palace with a Croesus for a husband, saw what was happening as the years passed.
