CHILDREN'S BIRTHDAY PRESENT TO MAMMA.

It was to be a profound surprise. "One," said Bessie, "that mamma mustn't even suspect."

"Let's pledge ourselves to warfare against the one who gives her a single clue," suggested Harold.

"What must we give—something nice—nicer'n anything she got last year," said Harold, breaking the silence.

"That's what we're going to," replied Harold; "why were we thinking so long?"

"She had a watch last year—from Switzerland," said Carl, ruefully, for hadn't he seen the stock of fine ones at Freeman's?

"We can't get any of these," it was Harold's turn to think. "Besides, they'd cost—"

"We'd never thought of that," exclaimed Bessie in dismay, "about the money! I don't believe we can get—I haven't a cent!"

"Nor I!" they "fished" into the pockets of his trousers—his first ones—and drew from their—his—magical depths only a jackknife handle. "Then we can't—"

"It's something we each can give—what she's wanted and wanted—ever so long! And what she's asked for, too," mysteriously.

"I—don't—see," said Harold, thoroughly puzzled. "We haven't got any money!"

"I'll hang up all my things in their proper place when I come from play or errands—I really and truly will, Harold."

"Mrs. Holman smiled her sweetest mother smile when she received her gifts two days later.

"They are the choicest presents I have ever received," she said, happily, "for they are something we all can keep."—Adelbert F. Caldwell, in The Youth's Companion.
