DEATHS

WYNN.—At Emyvale on August 26th 1920, Patrick Wynn aged 74 years. R. I. P.

IN MEMORIAM

PETER JOSEPH LAWLESS.

The Angel of Death visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Lawless, at Little River, and called from their midst on August 21 their eldest and dearly beloved son Peter Joseph at the early age of twenty-one years.

Deceased had been in failing health for the past three years and although not seriously ill yet the thread of life was gradually wearing away, for the best of medical skill could not stay the hand of death and fortified by the last rites of the Holy Catholic Church, he peacefully breathed his last.

He leaves to mourn besides his parents three brothers and two sisters; John Paul, Walter, Loretta and Hilda, also an uncle Joseph who resides with the family.

The funeral which was largely attended took place on Sunday 22nd when all that was mortal of a kind and loving son and brother were laid to rest in St. Francis Cemetery there to await a glorious resurrection. The pall-bearers were J. A. Steele, Peter C. MacDonald, Alfred MacDonald, Alex. MacDonald, J.D. Steele and Neil MacCormic.

A loving one from us is gone
A voice we loved is stilled
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. JUST A GIRL

BY JANE PHELPS

AN INVITATION TO LUNCHEON

Chapter 98.

Several times when on my way to the little restaurant where I always lunched, I had seen Mr. Betts—seemingly by accident. One day he stopped me:

"Will you lunch with me today Miss Stewart?"

"Thank you Mr. Betts but I never lunch with anyone."

"I will take you to a nice place which you will enjoy."

"Thank you, but I cannot," I answered.

"I wonder if you would have the same reply for Claxton." The sneer was unmistakable, as he turned and walked away.

I felt very uncomfortable for some time whenever I recalled his remark. Why should he bring Mr. Claxton's name into the matter? I knew I would have given by employer the same answer that I had his manager—yet I acknowledged it to myself with a different feeling. And I understood the implication. But gradually it slipped from my mind—probably because I never again encountered Mr. Betts in the vicinity of the cheap restaurant where I lunched.

I had been with Mr. Claxton nearly three months when he said to me:

"You are capable now of filling Miss Lee's position. I shall return your assistant to the outer office where she belongs. Your salary will be $25 a week and will increase as you prove your worth."

"You are sure I am not supplanting that other girl—or Miss Wilcox? I would hate to think—"

"Your feeling toward the other girls is very commendable. But Miss Wilcox is Mr. Bett's stenographer. The other girl I borrowed until you were capable of doing my work alone—until you had the necessary speed. In other ways you were capable from the beginning."

"I am so glad!" I exclaimed, unable to conceal my delight. "I am so happy, yet. I should not like to think my good fortune meant some one's else misfortune."

"I am called a hard taskmaster." He smiled at me.

"I am not afraid!" I laughed from pure joy. Already there were plans running through my mind. I could live on half my salary or less, give Mother $5 each week and save something toward the home that loomed large in my mind. It was as I had said almost too good to be true.

That night when I told Mary and Mrs. Fagin, they were delighted.

I had scarcely finished telling them before Thomas Clancy came in, and I had to repeat it all for his benefit, or hurt Mary's feelings. So I went through it all again.

Mary and Tom insisted that I go to the motion pictures with them to celebrate my good luck. I much preferred to remain quietly at home but saw I would hurt their sensitive souls if I refused so I consented.

We went to a medium priced house near enough so that we could walk. Carfare counted for Tom and there was three of us.

The picture, a clean society drama, was very interesting and I was enjoying it thoroughly, when someone behind me leaned over and said in a sneering voice which I seemed to recognize but could not place:

"I wonder if you would have come with me?" Then "Who's your swagger friend?"—of course making fun of Tom.

I turned a bit in my seat and saw the sneering face of Mr. Betts. A disdainful smile curled his lips. Mary turned, saw, and understood something disagreable was happening.

"What is it, Zena?"

"Sh—s" I replied frowning at her.

"Shall I tell Tom to punch his face?"

I knew she was thinking of Joe and Mike and what Tom had done to them.

"No, Mary, never mind now," I whispered leaning over so Mr. Betts could not hear.

Mary turned deliberately around and stared at him then said loud enough so he could easily hear:

"I don't like his face much. If you say so we'll have Tom fix it for him."

I was terribly embarrassed. Mary saw I was penitent, and whispered. "I didn't mean anything. I thought he was worrying you."

Tomorrow—A New Plan for Tom and Mary.

Hints for the Motorist

BY ALBERT L. CLOUGH

LOOSE FAN BELT CAUSES BOILING

J. J. B. asks: What makes the radiator water of my Ford boil after running seven or eight miles? This car has a generator run by a chain belt from the fan shaft. Can this have anthing to do with the over-heating?

Answer: If the belt that arrives the fan is not sufficiently tight, it will not turn the fan or the generator either at full speed and the radiator will become unduly hot as well as the generator's failing to produce the usual amount of current. If by taking hold of the blades of the fan, it can be turned with hardly any resistance, it is probably that the bell is not tight enough and you should tighten it. If this does not stop the boiling, clean out the radiator with washing soda solution, make sure that your spark is as much advanced as it should be, see that your muffler is not clogged and run on as lean a mixture as you can.

FOOLPROOFING THE IGNITION SWITCH

W. J. writes: Twice lately the battery of my car has been run down, through carelessness in leaving the ignitions which on with the engine not running. Is their any device that can put on to prevent this from happening again?

Answer: At most well equipped electrical service stations you can buy an automatic ignition cut-out that can be wired into your primary ignition circuit and installed in a convenient location. This cut-out embodies a thermostatic bar, that is heated by the uninterrupted flow of the ignition current to such a degree that it releases contacts that open the crcuit when the ignion switch is carelessly left on but does not do so when the engine is running. The cut-out can instantly be re-set to restore working conditions in case it operates.

A THE PROBLEM

A. L. H. asks: In the case of a car that is driven but 2,000 to 3,000 miles a year, is it more economical to buy the cheaper rather than the more expensive kinds of tires, considering the depreciation due to ageing? In such a case do you recommend standard or oversize tires as the more economical?

Answer: Our feeling is that it does not pay to use the most expensive kinds of tires, those of the cord type for instance, on a car used as sparingly as this. Depreciation due to age becomes a very large factor in the tire cost of a car thus used and tenders to make its tire cost per mile somewhat excessive, no matter what kind of tires are employed. Everything else being equal, the more money one has invested in a tire the more depreciation is costing one, while the tire is idle. For similar reasons we should not recommend the use of oversize tires, unless the size standard for the car is manifestly too small or unless the car wile it is running is subjected to serious overloading or very strenuous road or driving conditions.
