LONDON, July 15—The cat has been let out of the bag in the matter of the Mediterranean naval arms, and it is now announced authoritatively that Parliament will be requested to make a special naval appropriation to carry out a new program designed to meet the requirements in the inland sea. A squadron, slightly superior to either the Italian or the Australian squadron, will be stationed in the Mediterranean, and new ships will be built to take their place in the waters nearer home. This arrangement, it is understood, is independent of any proposals the Canadian Ministers may make, as it is extremely improbable that they will come to any immediate decision.

That has been the keynote of the representatives made by the British ministers, which has been presented in such a conclusive manner that the Canadians are absolutely convinced of the danger in prospect."
