MacDonaldite Community At Bangor, P. E. I. Cited As Example Of Successful Co-operation.

(Special to the Guardian) BANGOR, P. E. I., Feb. 20.—The community of Bangor, Prince Edward Island which is situated about four miles from the nearest Canadian National Railways station, Morell, seems to have solved the problem of co-operative living. It has been going on now for the past twenty years and is well organized. The community is made up of upwards of one hundred souls including men, women and children and at their head is Captain John Compton a comparatively young man who took over the reins of office from his late uncle Ben Compton. The uncle started the enterprise and the community now owns some thousand acres of land which is farmed co-operatively. There are community tractors and other community farm machinery and a community sailing vessel, and in the fall of the year Captain John Compton takes the produce and sells it for the common fund. There is also a co-operative store and all monies are put in the bank to the credit of the community as a whole. When a young fellow wishes to get married the community sets him up on a farm with a house which the community furnishes. All of the farms are worked co-operatively and there are community barns and other buildings of like nature. The community is one of the most law abiding on the island and has its own church, the people are of Scottish descent and are an offshoot of the MacDonaldites, a religious sect which still has adherents on Prince Edward Island. The members of the community dress the same as other people in the vicinity and through their co-operative management seem to have escaped the rigors of the present depression.

(Continued on Page 3) sanctuary has proven to be a year-round home for the birds. "When I visited the island there was a giant flock of more than 3,000 birds, the majority of which were black ducks, resting on the ice. During the last shooting season they began to look upon the sanctuary as home." The feed that can be gleaned around the shores near the sanctuary, he said, is the best. The residents of the island are in sympathy with the project.

Corpus Christi Choir Guests At Entertainment

(Continued from Page 1) the ladies from a beautifully appointed table presided over by Mrs. W. O. Davey and Mrs. J. B. Flemming. Mr. W. J. Brown, director of the Corpus Christi Choir, took over the function of the chairman, and voiced the appreciation of the choir for the very pleasant evening's entertainment. A vote of thanks was moved by Mr. S. F. Doyle, seconded by Mr. Sylvère DesRoches, and supported by Rt. Rev. Monsignor Maurice MacDonald, who spoke in enthusiastic terms of the work done by the C. W. L. and by its devoted president, Mrs. F. J. Casey. Rev. A. J. MacIntyre also spoke to the motion. A unanimous vote was tendered to Mrs. Casey by Mr. Brown. In response Mrs. Casey said that it was a source of much gratification to the C. W. L. to show in some manner the appreciation of the splendid service given by this body of choiristers, and hoped that this initial function would be the first of many such reunions among the various societies which were working for the betterment of social conditions in the city and for the enriching of the service of the Church. A very delightful musical programme was furnished. The following took part: Miss Lucy Blanchard, Mr. S. F. Doyle, Dr. John Blake, Mr. Leo Dolron, Mr. W. J. Brown, with Mrs. Byron Brown, pianist. A pleasing feature was a delightful recitation given by request by Mrs. Frank Murray. The young people then enjoyed a pleasant hour of dancing. The party then broke up. The evening was voted a most successful one in every detail. One of the most pleasing features of the evening was the presence of Monsignor MacDonald who leaves the parish shortly to enter a new field of labour. All present wished him continued success in his new field of work.

A little girl in Johannesburg some time ago heard a missionary relate over the wireless some of his experiences in Central Africa. Inquiring about the lecture, her father asked: "Well, Dot, and what did the missionary talk about?" "Oh, he told us that the poor natives were often hungry, and when they beat on their tumtums it could be heard for miles." ing at Station Creek, near Hampton, N. B., before next shooting season, which opens Sept. 15, it is hoped, said Mr. Tufts. Other sites under consideration are Aero Lake, near Moncton, Sunpoke Lake and a dozen other areas. Mr. Tufts twice each month conducts lectures for the benefit of "Mounties," training at the Halifax barracks, on migratory birds and laws in this connection. In the spring he will make a visit of all detachments in this connection.

QUEEN SQUARE BOYS MAKE PRESENTATION

Rt. Rev. Monsignor MacDonald Was Recipient of Address And Appropriate Gifts.

The pupils of Queen Square School gathered yesterday in their Assembly Hall to remember Rt. Rev. Monsignor MacDonald in an address and presentation. The gifts of the boys were a beautiful easy chair, and a music rack. The following address was read by Stephen MacMillan: Right Reverend Monsignor Maurice MacDonald, Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, From: The Boys of Queen Square School, February 20th, 1933. Dear Father Maurice: The time has come when farewells are in order and to us here assembled it is a particularly sad time in one respect, and a happy one in another. The natural sadness of losing—or rather saying good-bye—to a life-long friend is uppermost in our minds; on the other hand we know your life in your new field will be a pleasant change after nearly a quarter of a century of the toil and turmoil of city activity. During the past twenty odd years you have always been fearless, energetic and unceasing in your labors, and we feel that you now should enjoy a change to the comparative quiet of beautiful Tracadie. As long as Queen Square School exists, so long will the name of Father Maurice be remembered. For, to you, dear Father, goes the credit for this beautiful building. You, as it were, led us from the land of darkness, from the exile of the old annex to the light and beauty of our present accommodations. And so we hold for you a reserved place in our hearts, and shall deem it a privilege to welcome you, whenever time permits, on any one of your visits to the city. At the same time we are unwilling to relinquish hold, as it were, of you so dear, and hope to visit you often in your new surroundings. So dear Father Maurice we ask you to accept this little gift from the boys of Queen Square School, and hope and pray that God may spare you yet many happy years. Signed on behalf of the Boys of Queen Square School. STEPHEN MACMILLAN, GORDON CONNORS, EDMUND CHRISTOPHER. Charlottetown, P.E.I., Feb. 20, 1933. Rev. Monsignor MacDonald made a feeling, eloquent and appreciative reply. In regard to the building of the annex, to which reference had been made in the address, he was glad to pay tribute to the splendid co-operation which he had received from the members of the School Board. He also gave some valuable advice to the boys to take full advantage of the splendid educational facilities which are being provided them today. Brief, but commendatory remarks were also made by Mr. C. H. B. Longworth, chairman, Messrs. S. P. Paoli and Reuben Macdonald, members of the School Board, Rev. Father Enright, C. S. S. R., Rev. C. J. McCarthy, and Rev. E. O'Hanley. Mr. Leo MacDonald, Principal of the school, presided and the proceedings were opened with the singing of "O Canada" and closed with the National Anthem, the boys standing throughout the whole proceedings and keeping the best of order.

DUFF (Continued from Page 1) Provinces from that prevailing throughout Canada, said Mr. Duff. There should be one tariff for the Dominion. PREMIER BENNETT Mr. Duff has made a strong plea "that the legislature of another country should act differently from what it has," said Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Prime Minister. It would clear the air at the outset if one recognized that the plea made by the member for Antigonish-Guyshoro was one that "it is not in our hands to grant." The United States framed its own fiscal policy, just as Canada did hers, and the right to do so must be conceded to that country. The Prime Minister went on to review at some length the trade relationships between Canada and the United States since the adoption of the national policy in 1879. Mr. Bennett mentioned the McKinley, the Dingley tariff of the United States and finally the advent of the Wilson administration with free entry of many commodities as between the two countries. Sir Wilfrid Laurier stood for reciprocity and this failed. Hon. S. Fielding, in 1910, said that after years of negotiations with "friends to the south" negotiations might be reopened again; but the resumption must initiate in the United States. Then came the reciprocity arrangement of 1911. Mr. Bennett continued.

Mrs. Jardine speaks in the highest terms of the courtesies extended to her while a patient in the P. E. I. Hospital. Hon. Dr. Cyrus MacMillan leaves this morning on return to McGill University, Montreal.

Another Reason Another reason why he believed the resolution should go no further at this time, Mr. Bennett said, was the fact that within a few months the world Monetary and Economic Conference would be considering this very question, not only in relation to Canada and the United States, but to all the nations of the world. The United States had, "not without some reluctance," agreed to placing the tariff question on the agenda of the conference, the Prime Minister said, and he thought it unwise for the House at this time to register an opinion on any particular aspect of it. On the geographic aspect of Canada's trade problem, Mr. Bennett, speaking as a native of the Maritimes, said no one knew better than himself that the pre-conference agreements with the United States had brought prosperity to that section of what became the Dominion of Canada. "Termination of established channels of trade, whether by short notice or six months notice, always brings injury to those who established them," Mr. Bennett declared. "If there is any meaning to the term 'natural market' when referring to a foreign country," the Montreal markets with this product.

More Regarding The Maple Leaf Jig Saw Puzzle Many readers seem disappointed because this puzzle is pasted on heavy white paper and not cut out ready for fitting together. They do not seem to realize that this is a competition with every possibility of large cash prizes for those who are successful and not merely a pastime fad. Surely the cutting out of the puzzle is not going to stop the readers of this paper from entering the competition. A good way to do is to first paste the puzzle sheet on this cardboard and then cut it out with a pair of scissors or sharp pen knife. It takes about one hour. "This is not an easy puzzle and so you need not be afraid that the correct solution be sent in before you get started. Somebody will win. It is the publisher's intention to make known through the paper certain clues in a few days time and to offer several cash purchase certificates that can be used at any of the large stores in Charlottetown. Don't lose patience, this is going to be a worth while contest, so if you did not get your puzzle yet buy it today and watch the papers. Remember your hospital, some one will win and everyone has the same chance. How many hours would you work for fifty dollars? Get busy and the prize may be yours. There should be at least eight thousand contestants in this competition, making first prize $150 with ten other prizes of $25 each. Hospital donations should total $375. It is up to you readers. You can put it over the top if you will for 25 cents. Prime Minister continued, "The United States is our natural market." But in the one feature most referred to by Mr. Duff, the fisheries those who prosecuted the industry along the New England coast protected the hardy fishermen of Newfoundland and the Maritime Provinces set up an unreasonable competition. The result of their protests was a tariff of two cents a pound on fish as landed in the United States, that, Mr. Bennett said, was practically a prohibitive tariff. "We must concede the absolute right of the American congress to do for its people that which it conceives to be for their interests," declared the Prime Minister. "In the meantime we can do only as previous governments have done always be ready to avail ourselves of any proposals for agreements that are fair and reasonable and of a kind that would not involve hardship in this country if they were suddenly terminated. To the mover of the resolution, whom he congratulated for the manner in which the resolution was presented and for giving the opportunity to the House to discuss this important question; the Prime Minister suggested that once that purpose—discussion—had been accomplished he would be acting in the best interests of the country if he withdrew it. MR. A. E. MACLEAN A. E. MacLean (Lib., Prince), seconded the resolution and expressed the opinion that the Prime Minister had offered no good reasons why it should be abandoned. He believed that the time was approaching with a new government about to take office in the United States, for Canada to make the first move to secure a reciprocal trade agreement. The farmers in Central Canada were producing the same commodities that were produced in the Maritimes, and the eastern provinces were completely cut off. "With 120,000,000 people at the very doorstep of the Maritimes," Mr. MacLean argued, "is it not wise that we should trade with them?" He believed the government should look upon it as a mere business transaction and secure a trade agreement. That was all the resolution asked for and he thought it quite possible the new United States administration would be agreeable to a reciprocal trade agreement. "If there's a high tariff against Canada in the United States today, a great deal of the blame lies at the door of our friends opposite," said Mr. MacLean indicating the government benches. The Conservatives had always been so anxious to retain the home market at the risk of losing foreign markets. When Maritime farmers asked for markets, they were told to ship to Toronto or Montreal. In a normal year a few potato farmers of the Maritime could flood the Toronto and Montreal markets with this product.

Coming to the 1911 agreement, the Prime Minister gave two reasons why he had opposed it. In the first place, it was limited to a few customs items and secondly it was framed so it could be terminated by either country—it contained no specific time limit. "It merely meant that if the interests of the United States could be served best by terminating it, all they had to do was to change the tariff rate on any single item and the agreement fell by the way. "In my judgment," continued Mr. Bennett, "any trade agreement which creates a channel of trade that may be terminated at the caprice of one country or without notice to the other or terminated by one party without considering the interests of the other, is fatal to the interests of both." The 1911 agreement was turned down by the people of Canada, proceeded Mr. Bennett. "I do not think," he proceeded, "we can hope to develop the resources of our country, or give it a favorable position in the trade of the world if we render it possible for a channel of trade to be dammed up, shut off, diverted or ruined by any action which may be taken by another party, without notice of, or regard to, ourselves."

Liberal Efforts Failed In 1923, with the Liberals in power in Ottawa and the republicans at Washington efforts again failed for a reciprocal agreement. Cites Mr. King The Prime Minister endorsed the words of Rt. Hon. MacKenzie King, who was Premier in 1923 that Canada could not "throw down our bars against the United States and give them an opportunity to come in here and affect our destinies in a manner even more seriously." Coming down to the present day, the Prime Minister said: "now we are confronted with new conditions. I suggest the member for Antigonish-Guyshoro (Mr. Duff) is asking this Government to take a step he should not ask at this time. If he earnestly desires to accomplish the purpose he had in mind—and he does—then obviously nothing should be done that would in any sense have the effect of lessening the possibility of success in the adoption of the arguments to which I have referred, in dealing with the United States. "If we have the opportunity indicated in the interview (with Mr. Roosevelt) of reliance by the new administration upon reciprocal agreements, then with our standing proposals, which have been the policy of all governments in this country since 1879 until today, it occurs to me that the honorable gentleman (Mr. Duff) will best serve the interests that he desires to promote, having made the speech he has, and after such debate as may be thought desirable, by withdrawing the motion, in order that it may be made apparent to all who run and read that this parliament is still of the opinion that it was in 1879 and that successive administrations have given effect to one general view—that there is an earnest desire on the part of the Canadian people, with their great natural resources, their fisheries and forests and wide plains, to take advantage of the markets afforded by the most populous community in the world living together under one form of government."

Another Reason Another reason why he believed the resolution should go no further at this time, Mr. Bennett said, was the fact that within a few months the world Monetary and Economic Conference would be considering this very question, not only in relation to Canada and the United States, but to all the nations of the world. The United States had, "not without some reluctance," agreed to placing the tariff question on the agenda of the conference, the Prime Minister said, and he thought it unwise for the House at this time to register an opinion on any particular aspect of it.
