THIN GIRL MUST REST MUCH AND EAT FREQUENTLY

The more she sleeps, the more likely the painfully thin girl is to gain the extra pounds she needs to make her figure softly curved instead of flat and angular. The catch is that, more often than not, extreme nervousness accompanies an underweight condition, making it how to get to sleep quickly one of her major problems.

A young screen actress—one of the few who worries about losing weight rather than gaining it—considers that her greatest difficulty is in relaxing; she adds that unless she can relax, her keen appetite for food is impaired and sleep is impossible.

The slender star should be thin instead of slender if she didn't eat five times a day and sleep nine hours every night; recommends relaxation exercises to relieve nervous tension and thinks that the ideal one is the alternate swimming and floating routine. When a pool is not available, she suggests this exercise:

Lie on a bed with arms at sides. Lift arms high above head, then let them become as limp as possible and fall down on the bed. Now lift legs, relax them and let fall in similar manner. Repeat five times with arms, five with legs.

The actress follows her relaxation exercises with a warm bath and finishes with a cologne rub down. She sleeps without a pillow and tries not to worry about tomorrow's problems once she is ready to go to sleep. If she simply cannot sleep, she switches on the light, sips another glass of warm milk, reads until she does feel drowsy. Keeping the light on and reading makes her less taut and nervous than twisting and turning this way and that, counting sheep.

If you've any kind of a small turban with some glamor, you might try taking a waist-length piece of very sheer veiling and draping it over your head, allowing it to fall over your face and well past your shoulders.... Then don your hat. You'll like the way you can throw your veil back, even in a stubborn summer-night breeze with this arrangement.

Else, you could do what Joan Bennett, of movie fame, does with her black off-the-face hat. A veil is draped straight over the crown, only to fall way down past her shoulders on both sides, and to be caught under her chin, naively, with a jeweled clasp. This method is a bright one, we think, for it leaves her face free and clear and still gives the impression of shrouded enchantment.

Presentation And Address

A very pleasant evening was spent on Monday, July 25, when the congregation of Marshfield Presbyterian Church met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex MacNevin, East Royalty, to convey to Mr. and Mrs. Ernest MacMillan congratulations and best wishes.

When the congregation assembled Rev. J. C. McNeil, pastor, explaining the object of the get-together, called upon Mr. Earl Foster who read an enspiring address to the young couple, and Mrs. Henry Boswell presented them with a beautiful silver tea service. Although taken by surprise Ernest thanked them for their lovely gift and wished that all present would call often.

A delightful program of contests, games, and sing-song besides a trio by Messrs. Burnett, Andrew, and Fitzgerald was arranged by Miss Francis Munn and Emily Foster.

After a dainty lunch was served by the ladies the remainder of the evening was spent in sing-song and social intercourse.

Following is the address:

To Mrs. Emma Olivia MacMillan and Mr. MacMillan

Dear Friends: —Realizing that "it is not good for a man to be alone" and learning that you have recently accepted the responsibility and "taken this man for better or for worse," we have therefore gathered here this evening to wish you both every success and happiness in the path that lies before you.

Having known you, Mrs. MacMillan, from childhood, and having been so closely associated with you, in our church work, we cannot forget with what zeal and enthusiasm you shared every problem that confronted us, how you have ever been ready with your time and talent to contribute to every worthy cause, especially would we mention your work in connection with the choir, and we are confident that having entered this higher sphere of life you will bring with you those sterling qualities by which we have known you in the past.

To you, Mr. MacMillan, we offer our heartiest congratulation on securing a helpmate so capable and efficient and the fact that you were able to win her speaks volumes for you character and ability.

Please accept this small gift from your old friends of the Marshfield congregation and always remember that the best wishes of each and every one goes with it.

Again wishing you every success and happiness in your new life, we sign on behalf of the congregation of Presbyterian Church at Marshfield.

CLEAR SOUP MAY BE WELL-MADE AT HOME

Buy four pounds of shin beef, bone and all, and ask the butcher to saw it through for you.

Take out the marrow, and put the rest of it into four quarts of water, with a dessertspoon of salt.

Bring slowly to the boil, and simmer for half an hour. Then take off the scum.

Add two sliced onions, two sliced carrots, one sliced turnip, a sprig of thyme, a bayleaf, and half a dozen peppercorns. Simmer for five hours. Then strain the stock through a hair sieve into a basin.

When it is cold take off every scrap of fat from the top. It is now ready to be turned into clear soup as required.

If you want about a quart of it, put this into a saucepan, and when it has liquefied, add the lightly beaten white and the broken shell of an egg.

Whisk over the fire until boiling point is reached, then take out the whisk and boil the soup up. Afterwards let it stand beside the flame for a quarter of an hour without boiling.

Candidates whose numbers are marked with a star have not completed their matriculation, but will be allowed to attend College. They will be required to pass supplementary examinations in certain subjects in order to complete this examination before receiving a license to teach in the public schools.

Candidates whose names are published herein will be admitted at the opening of the college term, and may study for (a) teacher's license; or (b) a commercial certificate; or (c) the ordinary academic certificate leading to a more general education.

Students who in this examination have done well in Arithmetic, and who may be found at the beginning of the session proficient in Penmanship, will be offered in lieu of these subjects, a course in Mechanical Drawing at a cost for equipment not exceeding $8.00.

Must Fill Out Form

Every student that purposes attending Prince of Wales College must fill out and return to the "Prince of Wales College, Charlottetown", the form which is found enclosed with the report card received from this matriculation examination, at once or at a date not later than August 20th, and all former students who intend to return to College and join the classes of the First or Second Year should also notify the college office on or before the same date, so that arrangements may be made for classification and accommodation.

College Opens Sept. 6

Prince of Wales College will open on Tuesday, September 6th, on which day at 2.00 p.m., all students of the Third and Fourth Year classes will be enrolled and classes formed. On Wednesday, September 7th, at 2.00 p.m., students of the First Year will be enrolled; those from Charlottetown at 10.00 a.m., and those from the country at 2.00 p.m.

Students' fees will be payable at the College on the day of registration. In the case of Third and Fourth Year students, fees may be paid half-yearly. For the First and Second Year students the fees for the ordinary courses are $5.00 for country students and $10.00 for students from Charlottetown, with an additional dollar of caution money for the male students. For Commerce students the fees are $20.00 for those from the country and $35.00 for those from Charlottetown. For Third Year the fees are $50.00 and $75.00, and for the Fourth Year $100.00 and $150.00 respectively for country and Charlottetown students.

Advise Re Licenses

Students wishing to obtain a teacher's license are advised that the minimum standard for the same in the other provinces of Canada requires at least two, and generally three years of study after passing Grade X. The Board of Education in this province, however, will leave it possible this year for those students who are eighteen years of age, and who can make 65 per cent in the examinations of the First Year course to obtain their license with but one year's attendance at the Prince of Wales College. To do this, however, only those candidates who have made at least 65 per cent at this present examination, can be expected to be successful, and consequently young and immature students making a low pass mark in this examination should hesitate to come at this stage to Prince of Wales College, but if desirous of a teacher's license should remain another year at school, and obtain a better educational ground work before incurring the great expense of the course at College.

The public schools with six weeks' holidays will open on Tuesday, August 16. All other schools except those of Charlottetown and Summerside will open on Aug. 30.

Supreme Court

The Supreme Court has been sitting in Charlottetown throughout the week, occupied with the nearing of two cases.

Monday to Wednesday Mr. Justice Arsenault presided, when the trial of Paul vs. Pineau was heard. This was an action for damages arising out of the collision, near Hunter River last spring, of an automobile and a horse and carriage. Judgment was reserved. Donald MacKinnon, K. C., for the plaintiff and J. O. C. Campbell for the defendant.

Thursday and Friday the Court, Mr. Justice Saunders presiding, heard an appeal in the case of Larkin vs. Larkin, an appeal from the judgment of Judge Fraser, County Court Judge of King's County, under the Deserted Wives and Children Maintenance Act. At the conclusion of the evidence of the Respondent, legal argument was heard and the case adjourned until September 9th next, August being vacation month in the Supreme Court. J. J. Johnston, K. C., for the appellant and J. O. C. Campbell for the respondent.

Secure Information On Aircraft Output

OTTAWA, July 29 — (CP) — A complete picture of aircraft manufacturing conditions in Canada was drawn for the mission of the British Air Ministry by Lieut. Col. L. R. LaFleche D. S. O., deputy minister of National Defence, in a three-hour conference today. The mission will build on the information they gleaned today by meeting with the Canadian aircraft industrialists Monday.

After, they will make a thorough survey of Canadian factories. Their purpose will be to ascertain what equipment presently exists, the type of work engaged in, the standard of efficiency of the plants, their capacity to take care of contracts from the British Government, with assurance of continuity and regularity of production, and their potentialities for future expansion.

Lone Trans-ocean Flier Enroute Home

(A.P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

DUBLIN, July 29—Douglas Corrigan bade a railway station farewell to his Irish admirers tonight and took a train for Cobh where he will board the New York-bound liner Manhattan.

"Good bye and don't take the wrong turn," Lord Mayor Alfred Byrne sang out to the young aviator who landed here July 18 after a surprise flight from New York.

The Lord Mayor presented a silver loving cup from the citizens of Dublin to Corrigan, who flew the Atlantic in a $900 antiquated plane and then told everybody he thought all the time he had been headed for California.

(G. Ennis Smith, Superintendent, Dominion Experimental Fox Ranch, Summerside, P. E. I.)

The Dominion Experimental Fox Ranch has been called upon to examine the conditions in numerous cases of fatalities amongst pups in a large number of ranches. In some cases the pups had been subject to fits and convulsions, and whilst they had proved fatal in a large percentage of the cases the remainder made a complete recovery when the aggravating conditions were rectified. In other cases the greater percentage of the pups in the ranch were under-developed, which was associated with very heavy fatalities. Fox breeders have been very lax with regard to the fundamentals in respect to the care and feeding of their fox pups. In all of the cases the rations were deficient in most of the vital constituents required in the diet of growing pups; also in the majority of the cases the rations were poorly prepared and in many other cases the meat and food had been stored in such a manner that it would lead to the accumulation of decomposition products and the unfavourable results were directly due to some form of food poisoning.

Ground bone and bonemeal are necessary constituents of the diet of fox pups. After the limbs have formed the calcification of the bones makes a severe drain on the calcium content of the blood. If there is not sufficient ground bone or bonemeal to maintain a normal calcium level in the blood it would inevitably cause severe convulsions which might lead to fatal results. One-quarter of an ounce of ground bone or one-eighth of an ounce of dried bonemeal should be fed at each meal to growing fox pups.

Dried brewer's yeast is another important constituent on account of its vitamin B content, which is commonly called the anti-neuritic factor, because if the rations are deficient in this particular vitamin it will lead to paralysis and a lack of function of the nervous system. At least one-eighth of an ounce of dried brewer's yeast should be fed at each meal. It is very necessary that this should be fed regularly as the animal system is not able to store vitamin B.

In a large number of the cases we examined the foxes were in a very severe aemeic condition, and in those cases there was practically an entire absence of salt and green vegetables in the rations. Both these are vital constituents in the diet of growing pups. The salt requirements of a growing pup is in the neighbourhood of 1-20 of an ounce, that is to say one ounce should be fed daily for 20 pups. Also 1-2 an ounce of ground green vegetables should be fed at each meal, not only to supplement the rations with the necessary growth factors, but to lead to a proper digestion of the food. Recent research work shows that there is a growth factor in the juice of green vegetables that is not present in other classes of food, so that in order to produce a proper growth some form of green vegetables is a necessity. The Dominion Experimental Fox Rranch recommends the following finely ground green vegetables, young grass, young clover, green alfalfa, young turnip tops, beet tops, swisschard, and watercress, if obtainable.

A severe catarrhal condition in the stomach and intestines and bloating were altogether too common due to the lack of roughage in the rations. To counteract bloating and a catarrhal condition and to insure a normal digestion of the food and a healthy condition of the stomach and intestines, it is necessary that 1-4 of an ounce of bran or alfalfa meal and 1-2 an ounce of ground green grass, or some other green vegetables, with an equivalent amount of roughage, should be included in the rations.

Numerous cases of food poisoning have been examined; in all of these cases there have been gross irregularities in the manner in which the meat has been stored. To avoid the accumulation of poisonous intermediate decomposition products in meat and fish it is absolutely necessary to keep them under conditions where they are well ventilated. Ventilation is the most important factor in the storage of any class of fresh or frozen meat and fish, and it is just as important that frozen meat should be well ventilated as fresh meat. But in the ranches where food poisoning occurred the meat was kept covered with sacks, or kept in air-tight containers with the idea of keeping the meat frozen, under which conditions inevitably the meat would become poisonous. The evidence that we have obtained in our experimental work shows that while it may be necessary to keep the meat in a cool place it is more important that it should be well ventilated.

BOOKS ARTS MUSIC

(By F. R. H.)

The layout of the pavilions and park is alone a beautiful miracle. The dominant industries are to the fore and the projection of these industries has involved native artists and crafts.

The collaboration of the arts — pictorial artists, novelists journalists and musicians contributing — is in evidence everywhere.

"Glasgow," writes Mr. Blake, "is entitled to boast modestly of the unusually interesting content and constructive success of its Exhibitions. That of 1888 provided the nucleus of the funds out of which the Museum and Art Galleries at Kelvingrove were built. That of 1911 provided a foundation for the Chair of Scottish History at Glasgow University. Empire Exhibition (Scotland) 1938, has no such cultural end in view, but it could not have been what it is without the imagination of those who, like the coneys, are a feeble folk but cherish the best of the past and dream dreams for their country's future."

Kenny Baker of Goldwyn Follies and Jack Benny radio hour fame is now in London, requested to appear as Nanki—Poo in "the Mikado," the first Gilbert and Sullivan opera ever filmed.

The film is to be made in Technicolor and will include in its cast many present and past members of the D'Oyly Carte Co., in addition to Kenny Baker, Jean Colin of the British stage, and Constance Willis of Grand Opera.

C. A. Lejeune writing from London says:

"Mr. Baker has never sung Gilbert and Sullivan before, except for the Pirates of Penzance' at school, but he is tackling his job like a veteran. The set of Gilbert and Sullivan records that he brought with him from America was worn down to the matrix before he reached Plymouth. He spends his evenings at the Scala Theatre listening to the No. 1 company in action. He thinks Martyn Green is swell. He thinks the whole thing is his big opportunity. In between whiles he dashes around in a hired car seeing the English countryside. He has heard about it all in the movies, but this, he says is the real McCoy . . . . When Victor Schertzinger, the director, justified his choice of Kenny by comparing him with Titio Schipa, and describing his voice as 'one of the few really beautiful tenors we have in the world to-day with youth behind it,' some of us were dimly skeptical I was skeptical myself to be exact, up to 3.25 P. M. last Friday. At 3.26 prowling around the Pinewood studios in my usual feral manner, I found myself in the No. 2 theatre, where they were running a playback of Kenny's first Sullivan number. By 3.31 I was shaking Victor Schertzinger warmly by the hand . . . . Fifteen years in the film business have taught me, I hope, a fair amount of caution, but I feel inclined to take a chance on 'The Mikado,' and promise you something special."

May Oppose Renewal Of Trade Agreement

EDMONTON, July 29 —(CP)— Sentiment in the Bahamas is against trade with Canada because Dominion exporters have boosted prices as high as possible, Hon. Kenneth Solomon, Government leader in the Bahamas House of Assembly, said in an interview here today.

"I doubt very much if the present trade agreement of the Bahamas with Canada will be renewed," said Mr. Solomon who is accompanied by Mrs. Solomon on a vacation trip that will take them to Vancouver and Alaska.

(There is no separate trade agreement between the Bahamas and Canada, but the Bahamas are included in the general Canada-West Indies Agreement.)
