Canadian Garden Service 1945
By Gordon Lindsay Smith

By this time most of the garden will be planted, unless the spring has been unusually backward, but this does not mean that one should forget all about it. As a matter of fact there must be some June maintenance in the way of cultivation, insect and disease protection, staking, thinning, etc., if maximum results are to be obtained. Also, and the experts say that this is most important, there is still time to set out late flowers and plant many vegetables. Indeed it is most desirable to continue planting of corn, beans, carrots, and such things right up to the first or second week of July and in order to have a succession of the tenderest vegetables right through the growing season.

In most parts of Canada such things will mature sufficiently for immediate table use right up to the second week in September, and even if early frost does come along before this the loss is trivial compared to the possible gain.

For Speed
The old gardener knows many short cuts to hurry growth along. In dry summers he will, if at all possible, apply a little water to very growthy vegetables, and where there is no hose he will have things like lettuce, tomatoes and beans close to the house or pump so that they can be watered with the minimum of inconvenience. He also knows that weeds are moisture-robbing and that he will keep removed so that the vegetables wanted get all the moisture that nature provides. The experienced gardener also knows that a weekly cultivation equals a brief shower because it tends to conserve moisture. He also usually has on hand a small supply of commercial fertilizer which he applies when plants are set out, or where the rare vegetables are grown twice early in the season to push growth.

Moving Perennials—Pruning Shrubs
For ready reference, keep on hand Dominion or Provincial Government bulletins on perennial and shrub care. This will tell when is the best time to move or prune. Certain perennials such as peonies and iris, for instance, are best moved in September, others should not be shifted until August, and some in late fall or early spring.

Summer Hints
Peas and beans will continue bearing longer if pods are removed regularly and promptly as soon as they are ready for the table. It is well to keep out of the bean patch when the plants are in flower, as striking them up at this time is liable to spread rot. Sweet Peas should be picked regularly. Grass should not be cut as often or as close in hot weather.

Feed Vegetables Again as They Near the Harvest
Modern commercial plant food is quickly available to plants, and it may be used rapidly by fast growing vegetables. As they approach maturity an additional application will insure continued rapid growth, which means maximum size, tenderness and flavor.

When growth slows down many vegetables grow tough and lose flavor; some even develop a bitter taste. The time to make this additional application will vary with different crops, but in general it is when they begin to approach maturity.

When tomatoes, egg plant and peppers set fruit, an added application of fertilizer will often produce an increase in yield, and in the fruit.

When root crops begin to form edible roots, which begins to blossom, when lettuce thinnings are large enough to use, you can make sure the plants will finish their course in top form, by giving additional fertilizer. This should be about half the strength of the original application. Instead of using four pounds to 100 square feet, or 1 pint on each side of a fifty-foot row, use half as much in each case.

The best way to apply it is as a side dressing, two or three inches away on each side of each row, near the surface, where roots near the surface are alive and have never been disturbed, spread the plant food in bands on the surface of the soil. If there is no danger of injuring feeding roots, shallow trenches can be made and the fertilizer spread in them and covered.

Many gardeners prefer to stir plant food in water and apply it. Half a pint to a bucket of water is a safe mixture. During dry spells this insures that food will be immediately available to the plant. Do not allow plant food to touch the green leaves of plants, and remove there, as a heavy dew might then cause the leaves to burn. Wash off plant food, if it gets on leaves by mistake.

Opening the final assault on Okinawa, Yanks stormed the Yaeju-Dake plateau from three sides, blasting enemy suicide troops with flame-throwers and tommy-guns. In a 1000-yard gain by Allies, about 10,000 Nips were driven back to the sea. Simultaneously, the 1st Division Marines cracked the western end of the Yaeju-Dake under cover of darkness, as the 7th Infantry opened attack at Hanagusuku. The town of Yuza and high ground surrounding was taken in frontal attack by 98th Infantry Division.

Wherezit?

In a move of possible significance in Allied-Spanish relations, Spanish troops are being withdrawn from the International Zone at Tangier, Spanish Morocco. Before the war a neutral area under international rule, Franco sent his troops into the area in June, 1940, to prevent occupation by one of the belligerent powers.
