McGuigan, secretary of that organization, who, though still a young man, has done a considerable amount of spade-work for his party and whose merits, for some unaccountable reason, have been ignored by the local Liberal administration.

bullish reading for those interested in petroleum shares. On the contrary it is expected that this journal, due within a week, will set forth the new Standard Oil policy rather clearly and will indicate that the biggest interests in the industry are preparing for a period of lower oil prices and consequently smaller profits.

So far as Imperial Oil Limited is concerned, the writer understands that this company increased its business 30% in the east in 1929 but for the entire country the increase was only 10% which indicates a big drop in Western Canada. Like the Canadian Pacific Railway, the Imperial Oil has also been affected adversely by the wheat situation.

Imperial Oil The softness in the price for the shares of Imperial Oil Limited is the topic of much discussion on the Street. Weakness is mostly attributed to the various cuts in crude oil which have been made by the leading American companies and in this connection we have been advised that next issue of the "Lamp", house organ of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, would not make very

An Attic... Salt-Shaker CHATTY WEEKLY BUDGET OF STORIES ABOUT FAMOUS PEOPLE BY W. ORTON TEWSON

It may have been a great soldier but he certainly was not a ladies' man. Once, in London, he invited the Duchess of Sermoneta—the beautiful Princess Vittoria Colonna of Rome—to go with him to inspect some Chinese porcelain being exhibited in a Bond street gallery and afterwards go on to the Court Jeweler to see the crown jewels that were being cleaned up for the coronation of King George.

THE DUCHESS accepted. When the time came to start—they were hunching together at the home of a mutual friend—Kitchener said to her: "We will walk."

HAVING inspected the Chinese porcelain, they proceeded to the Court Jeweler. Kitchener again said firmly: "We will walk." On they went in the blazing July sunshine. After examining the Koh-i-noor and the Sceptre and other historic objects that are not approachable in everyday life the soldier and the beauty emerged once more into the London streets. And here the tid-bit supplied by the Duchess:

FROM one extreme to the other: The Duchess tells of a week-end-party at the country home of Alfred de Rothschild, at which King Edward was the chief guest. Rothschild was the "perfect host," everything being most carefully thought out for the comfort of his guests. He even had a Rolls-Royce motor car, each driven by a driver and groom, and their mission was to follow anyone walking in the gardens so that they could get in whenever they felt tired!

PALPITATION Throbbing of Heart After the "Flu" Mrs. J. Cunningham, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., writes: "Last February I had a severe attack of influenza which left me with palpitation and throbbing of the heart. I felt very weak and tired so began to take MILBURN'S HEART NERVE PILLS and used about six boxes and have found them help me a great deal, and am very thankful for having found such a good medicine."

asked to "Name three kinds of people in the world?" "There are three kinds of people in the world—ladies who have husbands, ladies who want husbands, and ladies whose husbands are dead."

THE sort of family feeling—totally lacking nowadays—that used to exist between an author and his readers is recalled by Lizette Woodworth Reese the beloved poet, who remembers that when Dickens died in the summer of 1870, she—a girl in her early teens—heard the news while visiting her grandmother at Baltimore, Maryland, walked all the mile and a half back to her own home saying to herself "Dickens is dead. Dickens is dead."

AND at one of the literary clubs in Baltimore, on an afternoon when the reports from Kipling's physician became reassuring, the whole assembly, told of these, broke out into applause—Miss Reese recalls. Now, Mr. Kipling, it's your turn! WHICH reminds me that Mark Twain, too, was seriously ill at the same time, and that the cables were kept busy exchanging messages across the Atlantic, asking after the condition of the two distinguished invalids. When both had recovered, Mark went to London and was given a banquet at the Savage Club—where he was always a great favorite—Replying to the toast of health, he said: "England and America, which have been brought nigh to each in Kipling will not be divided in Twain."

BY THE WAY, Katharine Goodson, the pianist, has an autographed photograph of Mark Twain which the great humorist gave her on his last visit to London. On it is written: "A place for everything and everything in some other place. This is not advice; it is custom.—Mark Twain."

FOR forty-five years Lizette Woodworth Reese taught in the public schools of Baltimore, retiring in 1921. She has many happy, and some amusing, memories of her teaching days, among the latter being the reply of a boy who turned in this gem on being asked to "Name three kinds of people in the world?" "There are three kinds of people in the world—ladies who have husbands, ladies who want husbands, and ladies whose husbands are dead."

As he (Washington) sat at table after dinner, the fire behind him was too large and too hot. He complained and said he must remove. A gentleman remarked that it behooved a General to stand fire. Washington agreed but added that it did not look well for a General to receive it from behind!

ANOTHER Washington story—told by Paul Wiltach—has it that Colonel Humphreys' secretary to Washington, dared his chief to jump a certain hedge. Washington accepted. Humphreys went off first, cleared the hedge, but landed in a muddy ditch which held his horse up to its girth. Washington rode up to the hedge, discreetly looked over and observed: "Colonel, you're too deep for me!"

THEN there was the apologetic communication written by a father, which asked that Christians would "please be excused" for her inability to attend school during the past week as her mother had had a baby. "Please excuse, Teacher. It won't happen again."

TALKING of children everyone knows they are born romancers, weaving their stories out of anything that strikes their fancy. Here is the record of a nursery battle between fact and fiction—given in "I Will Be Good" by Dion Clayton Calhoun: "Mother," said a wee child at bedtime, "I've just seen a lion in the garden." "You naughty girl, you know it's only a dog. Say your prayers and ask God to forgive you for the wicked fib."

STORIES of George Washington as a humorist are almost as scarce as those about Lincoln are plentiful. One of the best—excepting that about the cherry tree—is told by Dr. William Thompson.
