Labor Problem Not Cattle Embargo Cause of Defeat

Special to The Guardian
LONDON, March 4.—The London Daily Express discussing the defeat of Sir Arthur Griffith-Boscawen, the recently appointed Minister of Agriculture, in the Dudley by-election, says the result is a manifestation by the British public of their determination that pledges given to the Dominions during the war shall be carried out. Other newspapers, while admitting that the question of the British embargo on Canadian cattle with the related question of the price of meats had an influence upon the result in Dudley declare that the unemployment problem was the most important factor in the contest and suggest that it is a warning to the Government to adopt more vigorous measures to alleviate the growing unrest of the masses.

COL. D. A. MCKINNON INTERVIEWS NOVA SCOTIANS

In Connection With Proposed Steamship Service Between Charlottetown and Pictou. Nova Scotia Business Men Keenly Interested and Sympathetic.

Col. D. A. McKinnon, D. S. O., returned last night from a trip to Pictou, New Glasgow and Halifax. His visit had for its object the creating of greater interest in the proposed steamship service between Charlottetown and Pictou. He was warmly received, everywhere and the greatest courtesy was extended to him wherever he went. He found the people, particularly the business men, eager for the re-establishment of an old as well as the history of the province. The Colonel says Prince Edward Island is losing an incalculable amount of trade in its farm products through the non-operation of this service. Halifax business men instance the fact that it required from eight to nineteen days to get a consignment of eggs from Charlottetown to Halifax last summer. This was not due to any inefficiency, but to congestion of freight on the other side. The province is also losing seriously in the inter-travel between Halifax, Pictou, New Glasgow and Charlottetown. This travel was estimated at upwards of 6,000 persons to this province annually during the summer months when the steamers were running on this route. From a conversation with the Colonel it was learned that there was considerable interest in the business men here in the necessity of creating new possible avenue of trade. Unless local products could be shipped quickly and cheaply in the winter months, the islands farms are going to lose one of their very best markets. There is also the loss to the city and province of the inter-city passenger trade. Take for instance, exhibition week last year when fully 15,000 more people would have come had there been direct steamer communication.

Quarterly Meeting of the Fish and Game Association

The Secretary also reported that Prince Edward Island Fish and Game Association was held last night in the Charlottetown Board of Trade Rooms. The President, Mr. James Paton, presided. The Secretary Mr. A. R. B. Duck read the minutes of the previous meeting which were adopted. The Secretary submitted a copy of a handbook containing a synopsis of the Fish and Game Laws and the executive committee empowered to get one thousand of these printed. Some discussion took place regarding the P. E. I. Game Act and the general feeling was that it should be revised because as it stands, it is misleading and also conflicts with the Migratory Birds Act. On motion of Mr. A. E. Morris, seconded by Mr. J. S. Morris, it was decided that this matter should be left with the executive. The Secretary read a number of communications, one a letter accompanying the text of the King's speech, tried at Ottawa, and another correspondence re the securing of five deer to be placed here for ornamental and educational purposes. Warden of New Brunswick, Anon's letter re application for a permit to run hounds to hunt foxes. The applicant was informed that the Association had no power to grant same. The secretary also reported that about thirty new members had been secured. Mr. T. Gallant, Inspector of Fisheries was then called on and gave an interesting talk with re

INAUGURATION OF PRESIDENT HARDING

Pathetic Departure from White House of Aged and Infirm ex-President Wilson. Harding's Inaugural Address Disclaims Intention of Mingling in European Entanglements.

Special to The Guardian
WASHINGTON, March 4.—Warren Gamaliel Harding, was inaugurated President of the United States today with ceremonies almost as simple as those customary attending the opening of a session of the Canadian Parliament at Ottawa. President Harding in his inaugural address today declared that the United States seeks no part in directing the destinies of the old world and is unwilling to become entangled in European politics. The recorded progress of the United States, Mr. Harding said, proved the wisdom of non-involvement in old world affairs. We will accept no responsibility except as our own conscience and judgment in each instance may determine. He declared our eyes never will be turned to a developing and our ears never deaf to the call of civilization in the world which the closer contact with progress has wrought. We sense the call of the human brotherhood fraternity and cooperation. We crave friendship and harbor no hate but America can be a party to no permanent military alliance. It can enter in no political commitments nor assume any economic obligations or subject our decisions to any other than our own authority.

GERMAN DELEGATES PROFESS OPTIMISM AND COURAGE

With Respect to Terms Imposed by Allies While Germans at Home a Fomenting Revolution, Overthrow of the Government and Establishment of Soviet Government.

Special to The Guardian
LONDON, March 4.—After a long night session the German delegates again tackled the reparations problem here today. Ruffling the complacency of the Allies to the completion of the Allies to be submitted Monday noon. The air of the Germans was distinctly optimistic. Although cast down by Lloyd George's speech the delegates were hopeful. Privately it was stated that they had anticipated heavier penalties than the Allies named for fear of a rise to meet the reparations demands.

Japanese Parliament Adopts Bill on Women's Rights

TOKIO, March 4.—The rights of women in Japan were advanced a step when the House of Representatives adopted a bill giving women the right to attend political meetings. The measure annulled a law which prohibited women from joining political associations or being present at political gatherings. It has been commented upon as an important advance towards the emancipation of Japanese womanhood.

Maritime Aerial Route Discussed

FLYING DEMONSTRATION ON HALIFAX-CHARLOTTETOWN-ST. JOHN ROUTE PROPOSED.
HALIFAX, March 3.—At Government House a meeting was held of the executive committee of the Maritime branch of the Canadian Air Force Association. It is the Lieutenant Governor's honorary president in the chair. Those present were: Flight Lieutenant L. E. D. Stevens of Truro; Flying Officer, F. A. E. McRae, of St. John, vice-chairman; Flight Officer H. R. Stewart of Charlottetown, secretary; Pilot Officer H. H. Whitlock, of Charlottetown; and Pilot Officer A. E. Stephenson of St. John and W. H. Denison, Halifax. It was decided to forward to the Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Air Minister, a letter setting forth in detail certain recommendations relative to the development of aviation and it is understood that the carrying on of flying demonstrations during the summer months on the Halifax-Charlottetown-St. John-Halifax route is one of these means. Another, it is understood, is that pilots and customs inspectors be carried by seaplanes and the British Prime Minister. The cabinet had no definite official news from Dr. Simons and in the absence of this confined its delivery in last night's session which lasted until nine o'clock to an informal survey of the situation.

"SCOTLAND IN SONG AND STORY"

Substance of Eloquent Address Delivered by Clansman J. H. Malcom at Caledonian Club Rooms Thursday Night.

In the course of an eloquent address, better known as Lady Nairn, on "Scotland in Song and Story" at the Caledonian Club rooms Thursday evening, Mr. J. H. Malcom said: "Scotland is, and has reason to be proud of her songs and of her music. If so obsolete a word as the Muse is to be used in our day, it may be asserted and repeated that the Muse of Scotland is not a class beauty, nor a crowned Queen, nor a fine lady, but a simple country lass, fresh, buoyant, buxom and healthy, full of true affections and kindly charities; a barefooted maiden who scorns all false pretences and speaks her honest mind. If sometimes indiscreet in her language her heart is pure. She never jests at virtue though she sometimes has a fling at hypocrisy. Her laughter is as refreshing as her tears, and her humor is as genuine as her tenderness. There are ample evidences that a literature of song and legend existed in the Northern land before the coming of Saxon or Norman. Gaelic was the language of the Court until Malcolm Canmore's Queen, in the 11th Century, put it out of fashion; but for some considerable time after this the Celtic origin of the nation received solemn recognition. In Scotland from a very early period we find the poet's craft a recognized and honored one, and the Scots are not quite the unlettered people they are so often called. For example the first great English poet, Chaucer, had finished his Canterbury Tales in 1383, but the Archdeacon of Barbour, of Aberdeen, completed his poem "The Bruce" in 1377. Barbour was succeeded by several distinguished poets in King James I. Henry son of Dumfermline, and Sir David Lindsay. Not these only, but a vast body of wandering minstrels from an early date kept Scotland alive by song. With their harps across their shoulders and their bardic character familiarly recognized by the people, the whole land was free to their passing to and fro. The High Treasurers' books of the reign of James IV. show the King's fondness for their stories and song. They supplied in fact the place of the public library, the popular theatres and concert rooms of today. They were foremost in wild and lonely places where grew into earthen of song in hearts long after them. "No land has had in history greater extremes of fortune and misfortune, and perhaps in no other country has there been manifested more variety of race. The Celt, the Dane, the Saxon and the Norman brought with them each his store of superstition of the sea and the night's dark terrors. They peopled every glen and cave, every crag and stream, with a host of imaginary creatures. Headlands and dales became haunted with memories of wild conflict and bitter death. It is the passionate drama in which life was lived, and the blending of such temperamental races, that makes Scottish history so enthralling in its activities, and so rich in ballad and story, quivering with passion of battle or melting with love and sorrow. "The origin of Scottish music is traced to the highlands and comes down to us from the shadowy period of tradition. Melodies have been preserved, we know not how long by oral communication and have passed through innumerable hands and hearts before being collected and printed. For the most part Highland ballad music is composed in the minor key and was originally sung to the harp. The bagpipe, now considered the national instrument of the Gael, only came into general use in the 16th Century. There still survive many beautiful Highland melodies unprinted and unlearned to the Lowlands which may yet be heard in remote glens and straths; but during the past century the tide of emigration has rendered all but solitary many a romantic district. It was not until the appearance of Ramsay's "Miscellany" that interest was sufficiently stirred to try and recover from the fading memories and trembling lips of those who still had traces of them, the fragments of Scottish ballad minstrelsy. "Except the scrolls for national independence which brought upon the pages of Scottish history the shining names of Bruce and Wallace, nothing has so impressed the life and poetry of Scotland as the fortunes of the ancient Stewart line. The Jacobite misadventure truly a national emotion No lover of history and music can speak of the Stewarts without affectionate regret, and some degree of respect which is due to misfortune Song has ever a large romantic failure; and there is not a touching cry than that of a more heroic Lady Nairn, which rises through the heart yet—"Bonnie Charlie's Now Awa." One of the grandest of Scotland's war songs is the Jacobite "Sound The Pipe, roch."

GERMANS FOMENTING REVOLUTION

BERLIN, March 4.—The German communist party today made the ultimatum delivered by the Allies to German delegation in London the occasion for a revolutionary proclamation, in which the German workmen are called to overthrow the Government, reject the ultimatum and effect a political and economic alliance with Russia. The communists announce that demonstrations will be held on Sunday. The text of the Allied ultimatum reached Berlin last night and the evening papers were off the press and the public at large remained uninformed with respect to the punitive measures announced by the British Prime Minister. The cabinet had no definite official news from Dr. Simons and in the absence of this confined its delivery in last night's session which lasted until nine o'clock to an informal survey of the situation.

Germans Concerned Over Allies Threat

BERLIN, March 4.—German Cabinet sat until 9 o'clock last night, discussing the report sent by Foreign Minister Simons on days events at London. The Ministers are reported to have expressed regret over the threat of penalties which they considered would find Germany defenseless and which they believed would constitute an infringement on Versailles treaty.
