THE CAPITAL OF ALL CHINA

Naval Officer Tells of the Quarters of the Legations in Pekin and the Dangers Which Surround Them.

A naval officer who has just returned from the Asiaic station, recently made two journeys to Pekin by way of Tien Tsin and the railroad, which the Boxers have in part destroyed, and along which the foreign marines and sailors advanced to the Chinese capital. He described the approach to the Chinese capital to a reporter as extremely uncomfortable, even at the best of times. Not only is the journey by rail very tedious, but the preliminaries to landing from a ship-of-war are inconvenient and even dangerous.

"The Taku forts," he said are adobe structures on the coast at the mouth of the Peiho. Either from lack of enterprise or of studied purpose, the Chinese permit a dangerous bar to exist off the mouth of the Peiho in front of the forts. This bar and the shallows about it extend so far out that men-of-war are forced to lie fifteen miles off shore, entirely out of sight of land.

"When a naval officer has occasion to visit Pekin, he must drop from his ship into a little launch, and in this light craft make the journey across the bar and to the point where he is to take the train for Tien Tsin. The journey by rail thence is about twenty miles. The hour of departure is always uncertain, and the train is extremely slow. The road runs through a densely peopled region in which there are few Europeans. Tien Tsin itself is a considerable Chinese town on the Peiho. It has a small foreign colony, but is likely, in view of disturbances at Pekin and elsewhere in the interior, to have this colony considerably enlarged by refugees.

"The journey from Tien Tsin to Pekin is made at better speed than the journey from the coast to Tien Tsin; besides for $5 one may have the privilege of riding in an imperial postal car, which has some of the comforts of the American parlor-car. It is a little misleading, however, to speak of the journey to Pekin by rail, for the nearest station is about five miles from the city. The abomination of modern civilization may not come nearer the sacred city. The journey from the station to Pekin is made over one of the worst roads on earth, and in a peculiarly uncomfortable vehicle—the Chinese country cart.

"Pekin itself is a city of a million inhabitants, standing in a desert, without sewers, and without a public water supply. The filth of the place, which is almost unbearable, offends the nostrils at every turn. The streets are ill paved, and getting about the city is uncomfortable and even dangerous. Peken is walled with a most picturesque piece of masonry, but the city has outgrown its bounds, and from the top of the wall one may see the outer suburbs stretching wide and densely crowded.

"It is hardly accurate to say that Pekin has a foreign quarter in the sense in which that phrase is understood in the treaty ports. The foreign residents are the members of the legations, the missionaries and their households. Each foreign household lives in a 'compound' of its own. These compounds are the only clean places in the city. The compound of the British legation is large and attractive. The same is true of the plot occupied by the Russian legation. The American legation occupies a neat but far too small compound, near the city wall.

"The legations and the missionaries have a social life of their own, and the representatives of foreign Powers give brilliant entertainments. The social life of the legations, however, goes on in the presence of a vast hostile population, and is rendered a little uncomfortable at times by reason of national jealous fears and suspicions. The presence of a large Russian force at Port Arthur, just across the Gulf of Pechill from the Taku forts,, does not tend to lessen the uneasiness of life at the legations.

"Pekin has a hot and rather unhealthy summer climate. The city is as near as may be in the same latitude as Philadelphia, but considerably further inland. Many of the coast towns are also unhealth but Chefoo, on a bluff facing the sea, about 200 miles southeast of the Taku forts, has an excellent climate, and is a favorite place of summer residents with foreigners in that part of China."

THEY WEAR NATIVE DRESS

China Inland Missionaries Popular Mith the People.

The China Inland Mission, some of whose missionaries are missing, is an organization begun in 1866, when the Rev. Dr. J. Hudson Taylor, still its head, and who had himself been at work in China from 1854 to 1860, took out with him from England fifteen others as missionaries. Now the organization has four offices—London, Eng.; Dunedin, New Zealand; Melbourne, Australia, and Toronto—from which funds and workers are sent to Shanghai, the head office of the administrative work in China. Last year the income, all from free-will offerings, without solicitation, amounted to about $300,000, $42,000 of which was contributed through the Toronto office. Training schools are conducted for men and women separately a short distance inland from Shanghai, and after a course of about eight months workers are sent into the country. There are now 820 missionaries engaged at 378 stations in 14 of the 18 provinces of China, and of this number 118 are sent by the North American branch and 43 from Canada, and in addition about 700 native helpers are employed. The peculiarities of this mission are that the workers wear the native dress, and may establish churches of such denominational character as the missionary and his converts may agree upon, for the work is purely evangelical. Nor does the mission guarantee financial support to its workers nor solicit aid, but relies entirely on voluntary assistance.

Mr. H. W. Frost, the home director of the mission in Toronto, states that wearing the native dress seems to make a favorable impression on the people, and that when their missions are attacked friendly natives usually assist the missionaries in escaping to some hiding place, so that a report of a missionary being missing does not necessarily mean that any personal violence has been suffered. The mission has just prepared an excellent map of the country, from which it appears that the provinces of Shan-si, Shen-si and Chen-Kiang are the most thickly settled by their stations.

Consumption's Victims

Can Obtain New Health if Promptly Treated.

It Was Through Miss Lizzie Smith, of Waterford, Was in Consumption. But Her Health Has Been Restored—Advice of Similar Sufferers.

From the Star, Waterford, Ont.

Throughout Canada there are thousands of girls who owe the bloom of health shown in their cheeks, the brightness of eye and elasticity of step, to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. There are few girls in the first years of womanhood who do not suffer more or less from anaemia. We see them everywhere, and they are easily recognized by a sallowness of complexion, or perhaps extreme pallor, they are subject to headaches, dizziness, palpitation of the heart, and feel tired and worn out on the least exertion. To those who suffer in this manner Dr. Williams' Pink Pills offer speedy and certain relief. Proof of this may be had in our own town. Miss Lizzie Smith, daughter of Mr. Wm. Smith, is to-day the embodiment of health and activity, yet not so long ago her friends feared that consumption had fastened its fangs upon her. A representative of the Star recently interviewed Mrs. Smith as to the means employed. to restore her daughter's health. Mrs. Smith's unhesitating reply was that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were entitled to the credit. Mrs. Smith said: "My daughter is nineteen years of age. For some years she has not been very strong and was subject to sick headaches. Last summer she went to work in an establisnment in Paris, and had not been there long when her health grew much worse. She consulted a doctor there who said that her blood was in such a bad state that the trouble was likely to develop into consumption, and on hearing this Lizzie at once returned home. When we saw her we feared she was in a decline. She suffered very much from headaches; was as white as chalk, with dark circles under her eyes and the eyes shrunken. Her appetite was very fickle and she ate very little. She was very despondent and at times said she did not care whether she lived or not. I decided to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which I heard was so highly recommended in cases like hers, a trial. She had only taken the pills for a couple of weeks when we could see an improvement. By the time she had used a couple of boxes her appetite was much improved, her headaches less frequent, and the spirit of depression passed away. Four boxes more fully restored her health, and to-day she is as well and as active as though she had never had a day's illness. I really think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved her life, and believe they are worth their weight in gold to girls suffering as she did."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make rich, red blood, strengthens the nerves, bring the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks, and make the feeble and despondent feel that life is once more worth living. The genuine are sold only in boxes, the wrapper bearing the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," May be had from all dealers or by mail at 50c. a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brookville, Ont.
