Dismisses Case Against Member Of Parliament

(C.P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

TORONTO, March 1—Mr. Justice Nicol Jeffrey in Supreme Court today dismissed with costs the action of William G. Paton, Toronto, in which Paton claims $20,000 and costs from George Burpee Jones, New Brunswick.

The claim was made that Jones sat as a member in the House of Commons in 1931 at a time when he was a partner in the firm of Jones Brothers of Apohaque, N. B., and that Jones Brothers was then under contract to and did supply the government of Canada with goods for which public money of Canada was paid. Paton claimed that G. B. Jones was therefore disqualified from continuing to sit in the House of Commons. Paton further claimed that Jones sat 100 days illegally incurring a penalty of $200 per day which Paton sought.

BANKING SYSTEM

Three Montreal financiers, Sir Herbert Holt, Sir Charles Gordon, and W. A. Black, according to Mr. Garland, controlled assets estimated at $5,835,000,000, one-fifth of the estimated wealth of the Dominion.

Prime Minister R. B. Bennett said the statement to be wrong. These three were members of a large number of shareholders and directors controlling the assets referred to. "It is well to be fair about these things," Mr. Bennett suggested.

"The right honorable gentleman is quite right," Mr. Garland agreed, "but he knows full well how they dominate this wealth."

"Quite the opposite," Mr. Bennett retorted. "They control the companies they head but in the case of others I know they often do not attend the director's meetings."

"Well, I would like to know when Sir Herbert Holt's will was ever thwarted—even by this government," Mr. Garland said.

"Read the Bank of Canada Act," replied the Prime Minister.

That was another question, Mr. Garland replied. While the Bank of Canada Act contemplated control of the volume of money by the central bank, it did not provide for directing its use.

Heavy Damage Is Anticipated From Thaw

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

MONTREAL, March 1.—Flood insurance is being sought to an unprecedented amount here this year in anticipation of a March thaw, insurance brokers reported today.

Canadian companies ordinarily do not write this type of risk, it was learned, and applications for coverage are being addressed to Lloyds in London. Whether that organization will accept the risks is expected to be decided within a few days.

Heavy snowfall and extremely cold weather have caused anxiety, a thaw would cause heavy damage and house owners in low lying parts of Montreal are gravely concerned.

In many cases household furniture has bee moved to protect it should floods occur. The coating of ice in the rivers is much heavier than in recent years and a serious ice jam is feared when the breakup comes.

TILDEN WINS FROM PLAA

MONTREAL, March 1—(By The Canadian Press)—William T. Tilden, the veteran Philadelphia tennis master, tonight proved he carries his 42 years on amazingly sprightly legs when he defeated Martin Plaa, French professional, in five hard fought sets, 7-9, 8-6, 6-2, 6-8, 6-4.

Tilden showed plenty of stamina and power in his right hand in defeating Plaa who played an all round brilliant game. While Plaa's court strategy often left Tilden flat-footed, the Phiadelphian came through in the pinches with a dazzling display that Plaa was unable to face.

Cowley Wins Scoring Ch'ship Of Big Four

HALIFAX, March 1—(By The Canadian Press)—Centre Bill Cowley of the Halifax Wolverines has wound up his first season in the Maritime Hockey League by topping the "Big Four" scorers. The former Ottawa star, pivot man of Wolverines' aggressive front line, notched up 26 goals and was credited with assists in 26 more for a total of 50 points.

His mark placed him four ahead of Sammy McManus, left winger for the Moncton Hawks, who had 24 goals and 22 assists. McManus finished up just a point ahead of his team captain, "Dud" James, who equalled Cowley in assists but dropped to 20 points in goals, for an aggregate of 45 points.

Charlottetown Abegweits broke into the scoring honors list with little Jois Beaton, who finished six from the top. Beaton, last year's leading point-getter, gained only 31 points in the season just concluded.

But to Beaton went the distinction of being the least penalized player in the league. He served only seven minutes in the penalty box all season. Big Bill Gill of the Hawks was the league's "bad" man, with 132 minutes against him.

Stocky Frank Lavigne of the Wolves was not far behind with 110 minutes—the only other player over the 100 mark.

Of the four league teams, Wolverines were penalized the heaviest. Haligonians served a total of 514 minutes with the timers: Moncton, 483; Charlottetown, 437; Beavers, 328.

Final standings of the teams, according to statistics released tonight by W. J. Foley, league scorer, follow:

NO CRIMINAL CASES BEFORE TRIAL JUDGE

Mr. Justice Arsenault, presiding this week at the opening of the Supreme Court in Georgetown, was presented with a pair of white gloves, symbolic of the absence of any criminal cases on the docket.

The Grand Jury in its report found the jail at Georgetown to contain eight prisoners, well looked after and receiving sufficient food of a good quality. They recommended that a new floor be put in the kitchen of the jail and that the walls and ceilings throughout the entire building be repaired, cleaned and painted.

The Court made fitting reference to the death, since the last term, of Lieutenant Governor Dalton and the appointment of His Honour Lieutenant Governor DeBlois. Hope was expressed that the present winter, usually severe winter would be a climax to the industrial depression which has prevailed throughout the world for the past five years, and that conditions, now gradually improving, would show further progress in this direction. The farming population was advised to take full advantage of the increased price now available for hogs and give more attention to the basic industry of dairying. A severe economic loss has been caused by too great an investment in the potato business which was largely speculative.

His Lordship congratulated the Grand Jury on the absence of criminal indictments. Public sentiment, he emphasized, had much to do with safeguarding communities against serious breaches of the law. He felt that much of the crime in other countries, especially in the United States, was allowed to go unpunished because of the leniency of juries and the delays in legal proceedings.

eated the historical background of the Senate, citing Sir John MacDonald's statement in 1865 with reference to the Legislative Council standing in respect to the Commons as the British House of Lords did to the Commons in England "having the same power of initiating all matters of legislation, except the granting of money."

Independent House

Sir John had referred to the Upper House as "the sober second thought of legislation" and intimated there would be no use of an Upper House if it did not exercise when it thought proper, the right of opposing, amending or postponing the legislation of the lower House—it must be an independent House having a free action of its own, valuable as a regulating body, preventing any hasty or ill-considered legislation which may come from the lower House."

Senator Murphy outlined the repeated efforts of the Senate itself to secure a greater volume of legislative business. In 1868, right after Confederation it appointed a committee to seek means to this end, and the committee's report was unanimously adopted. Subsequently other efforts were made.

Senator Murphy dealt with the frequent proposal through the years that there should be Cabinet ministers in the Senate if not with portfolios, then without portfolios but in the government's confidence, and the proposal that ministers should be able to appear in either House to explain and deal with legislation. There was a very dull debate on the latter question in 1921 when the Minister of the Interior, the Postmaster General, and the Minister of Labor were all members of the Upper House. After debate the resolution was withdrawn.

LECTURE ON LONDON, PAST AND PRESENT

"London, Past and Present" was the subject of a most interesting and enlightening lecture given last evening by Rev. Dr. E. H. Ramsay before a most appreciative audience in Hearts Memorial Hall. Dr. Ramsay first gave a brief historical sketch of the city with a number of interesting sidelights, made reference to the lives of famous literary men who lived there, and described some of the more notable buildings and other features. The speaker made use of a map of the city.

In opening, Dr. Ramsay remarked that London is the greatest city in the world. When Julius Caesar invaded Britain he captured the then little town. During their occupation the Romans fortified the town and erected around it three walls. When they left Britain they left intact a city which was built on the plan of Rome. The Forum was located where Mansion House now stands.

The Romans occupied London on account of its strategic value. A large area near the river was tidal bog. The Thames valley is very fertile. Over the chalk formation is an alluvial deposit 400 feet thick in which there are traces of tropical vegetation. The Romans found the fisher people of the city fierce and warlike, and therefore settled in the midst of them. They built the first London Bridge. The Romans withdrew in 410 and the Saxons conquered the country, and eventually occupied the city. The City stood out heroically against the Danes who could not go beyond London Bridge with their boats, until they had dug a canal around it. Eventually London came to be ruled by the Danes, and was later a centre of interest during the Norman conquest.

William the Conqueror built the Tower of London. The Saxons, who were not town lovers, left the city to the Normans, who were great builders, and who erected the Temple, and first St. Paul's, which was burned in 1666, finished Westminster Abbey, and built great monastries. To this day there remains a spot in London where the right of sanctuary may still be claimed by criminals. Smith field is an historic section, as there it was customary to burn heretics, and to hold tournaments.

The Temple is a very large place shut off from the world. In the centre is the Round Church. Here formerly was the headquarters of the semi-religious and semi-military order of Knights Templar. When the Templars were expelled, the Knights Hospitallers occupied the Temple. The Hospitallers were driven out by Henry VIII, who rented the Temple to the barristers. After occupying the Temple till the time of James, the barristers bought it outright.

During the Plantagenet Period, and the Houses of Lancaster and York, the City grew, though scourged by fire and plague. The city of London today is only about one-thirtieth of Greater London, which occupies 400 square miles. The Bank of England is the financial centre of the world as well as of London.

Dr. Ramsay took his hearers along some of the chief streets, indicating points of historic interest. Various parts of continuous streets, he stated, have different names, because they grew inch by inch, and because formerly they were streets of outlying towns. In Greater London there are 16,000 different street names.

All the English literature is instinct with the atmosphere of London. Dr. Ramsay said Chaucer worked there in the thirteenth century, Shakespeare and Ben Jonson argued there in the Mermaid Tavern. It is related of Milton that on one occasion he joined two friends who had been imprisoned by James I for some lines they had written about the Scots, and who were threatened with mutilation.

Speaking of great edifices of London, Dr. Ramsay described St. Paul's Cathedral which contains some of the most sacred tablets of the Empire history. Other buildings, well-known throughout the world were also described by the speaker. Reference was also made to a visit to Thomas Carlyle's house, behind which he saw people picking pears from a tree which Carlyle himself had planted, and from which he had said he expected the Cockneys would pick the fruit.

The speaker described a visit to Hyde Park and Kensington Gardens. In the Round Pond of the latter, boys and men sail toy boats. In Kensington Palace, Queen Victoria was born, and spent her early life. The royal residences in St. James Park were also described. Charles I spent the night before his execution in St. James Palace.

There is no definite industrial section of London, Dr. Ramsay stated. The slum area of the East Side is gradually disappearing as a result of the Government building policy. Modern transportation has made possible much building outside the city.

IN MEMORIAM

MISS RUTH REYNOLDS

Seldom has a community been shocked and saddened to such an extent as was Gaspereaux on Tuesday morning, February 20th, when it became known that Miss Ruth Reynolds, daughter of Mr. Archibald and Mrs. Reynolds, had passed away, the result of an accident, an account of which has already appeared in the press. Her funeral on Thursday 22nd, was held in the Lower Montague United Church near the beautiful cemetery in which is the family plot. She was a member of the Episcopal Church, Georgetown, but, owing to weather conditions and illness of the pastor, it was not possible to hold the service there. Rev. Mr. McNevin, pastor of her Gaspereaux home church, conducted the service taking as his text "My beloved has gone down into the garden to gather lilies." His address was full of beautiful and comforting thoughts for the bereaved ones as well as paying a tribute to the departed. The musical selections by the choir were beautifully rendered—all being favourite hymns of the deceased. At the conclusion of the service the large concourse of sorrowing friends took a last opportunity of looking into the face of one who was so well known and loved.

As a young girl, Ruth made her home for some years with her sister, Mrs. Alex MacDonald, Stellarton, finishing her high school course, and afterwards taking up a business course, graduated, and accepted a position in an office in New Glasgow. To be nearer her home and if needed by her parents, who were her special care and to whom she was most affectionately attached, she accepted a position in the office of W. A. Poole & Co., Lower Montague, P. E. I., and for ten years with the exception of vacations or when the home ties called her, she rendered such service to her employers and the public as few have been privileged to give. Hers was no eye service, but the giving of the best that was in her—the soul of honor, her employers' interest, and faithful service to the public came first. Her position brought her in contact with many people at home and abroad and hers was a popularity to be envied, and in that last look with tear filled eyes, the highest tribute that could be paid was felt by all. Her place is hard to fill.

There are left to mourn in the home her sorrowing parents, her sister, Mrs. MacDonald, Stellarton, a neice Doris, two nephews, Ralph and Lawrence, who mourn for her as having lost a wonderful companion, also an aged Grandmother, Mrs. Wm. Dauncey, Lower Montague. She was carried from the church by six of her home friends with beautiful fragrant flowers, silent emblems of love and sympathy from those who loved her, covering her casket. In her hands her prayer book which in life was ever near near her and read daily by her. She was tenderly laid beside a brother, whose death many years before followed an accident, there to await the resurrection morn. The service at the grave was conducted by Rev. Mr. McNevin and Rev. Gordon Pringle of Montague.

N.B. Dental Act Under Probe

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)

FREDERICTON, N. B., March 1—Two lengthy sessions were devoted today by the Corporation Committee of the New Brunswick Legislature to two bills to amend the New Brunswick Dental Act of 1929, each being directly opposed to the other in purpose. One was supported by the New Brunswick Dental Society, the other by four assistant dentists seeking to become registered dentists.

The afternoon session of the committee was made possible by an early adjournment of the House. This was done in order that a large delegation of dentists, many of them members of the Saint John Dental Society who had come to Fredericton to support their own bill and to oppose that of the four assistants might be present at the meeting during the discussion.

When the meeting adjourned, the chairman, Hon. G. H. L. Cockburn, said the bills would be considered further next week by the committee in private session.

Annual Meeting Of Abegweit Chapter Of The I.O.D.E.

Summerside Branch Has Active Year As Shown By Reports Presented.

The annual meeting of the Abegweit Chapter of the I. O. D. E. was held in the Library rooms at Summerside on Wednesday afternoon. There was a very large attendance. Miss Hunt, Regent, very capably presided. The report of the last annual meeting was read and adopted.

In the absence of the secretary, Mrs. J. S. Perry (through illness) her report of the year's work was read by Miss Gladys Holman.

The report showed that the Chapter had been very active during the year. There were nine meetings with an average attendance of fourteen members. The chief undertaking of the year was handing over the Library, which for years had been successfully run by the local I. O. D. E. to the Town, accepting the Carnegie Corporation's demonstration for three years. This entailed a good deal of work on the part of the I. O. D. E. Another big undertaking was the providing for 75 children to have a half pint of milk daily, at the High School. The members also assisted in a drive for Red Cross funds last June. Altogether the year was most successful.

The treasurer's report showed a balance for the year ending February 1934 of $134.65 with an expenditure of $612.20. Total receipts $746.85.

Other encouraging reports read and passed were the Abegweit Chapter's secretary reporting on education matters; and the report of the Provincial Educational secretary on the year's work all over the Island.

The Regent, Miss Hunt in a most gracious manner gave a survey of the work accomplished during the year by the various committees, speaking particularly of the handing over of the Library to the Town and of the great benefits to be derived from such a library as the public now have at their disposal.

Miss Hunt tendered sincere sympathy to those members who had suffered bereavements during the past year.

Not Advised Of Amalgamation

(C.P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

OTTAWA, March 1—J. E. Michaud, Liberal member for Restigouche-Madawaska, asked at the opening of the House of Commons today if the Government was aware that the Canadian National and C. P. R., stations in Fredericton, N. B., had been amalgamated and that the Canadian National station would be closed.

He had not been advised of this, said Hon. R. J. Manion, Minister of Railways and Canals. No station could be closed without first securing the authority of the Railway Commission for so doing.

While carrying an accident insurance policy application to mail, Mrs. Edith Trorman of Amersham, England was knocked down by a motor-cycle and seriously injured.
