WHAT CAUSES HIGH PRICES?

A man and his wife had given up farming in one of the best fruit regions of New York State for what they thought a more lucrative position in town. As they were taking the train away, children came selling grapes round the station at two cents a box.

'Don't let us open the suit case! We can buy these grapes just as well in New York,' demurred the man.

'But the express charges,' suggested his wife.

'Won't be more than a cent a box for those! I should know! I've shipped enough of them.'

But on the arrival in the city, what was the man's amazement to find he could not buy that 2 cent box of grapes under 40 cents.

Forty cents! The ex-farmer rubbed his eyes. That was an advance of 2,000 percent on the price the buyers used to pay him. How in the world was the price made up? Express was only one cent. That brought the cost to three cents as the box reached New York. Allow one cent more for risk and handling; four cents. Now 20 to 40 percent advance is a high profit for a wholesaler; at most, so far only six cents. All the retailer's profit of another 20 to 40 percent. At most, the grapes should not be marked to exceed 10 cents. What unseen hand had juggled prices up to 40 cents—75 percent too high for the man who eats; 2,000 percent too low for the man who grows?

Why, he could have afforded to pay the freight, to pay the New York end of the handling, to pay a man to look after the sales, and still have put away 50 percent profit on his grapes.

...Paying the New York extortion ground floor rents—the big grocery, where the ex-farmer made his first inquiry was on Broadway and paid a rental of $12,000 a year. And then over and beyond these preliminary charges against the grapes, paying a clear dividend of about 500 percent each to commission man, wholesaler, retailer.

No wonder the wealth of the nation centred in the cities! No wonder the boys and girls broke away from the farm to pursue that wealth! This sort of game made the farmer's nine-billion-a-year crop a sort of sluice box for depositing gold in city vaults. When the farmer, however, wanted a loan, he had to come on his knees to those bank vaults for it.

But perhaps, the grapes were an exception owing to their perishable nature. Your ex-farmer continued his first-hand investigation of the things he used to grow for the city man to eat. The more he investigated, the hotter he grew. He found such extraordinary conditions as these.

Potatoes, price paid the farmer 35c; cost to the city man $1.50; advance 300 percent, of which only 30 percent went for freight and handling in the case he investigated.

Milk, price paid the farmer 4c; cost to the city man 8c; advance 100 percent.

Fork, price paid the farmer 4c to 6c; cost to the city man 20c to 30c; advance 500 percent.

Wood, $3 a cord; city price $8; cost of cutting $2; advance 100 percent.

Eggs, country price 20c to 48c a dozen, or 2c to 4c an egg; cost in hotels 30c for two or 15c an egg; advance 400 to 800 percent.

Cabbage, price paid farmer $1 per 50 cabbages, or 2c each; cost to city man 1c each; advance 500 percent.

Beef, per steer $50 to $60 to the farmer; cost to the city man figured out on the basis of prices paid in the Senate Restaurant $2,000; advance 3,000 percent.

Wheat, $1 per 60 pounds; breakfast cereal 15c a pound, or $9 per 60 pounds.

Bread, 8c to 10c per pound; advance 800 to 2,000 percent.

Now our farmer-man has not gone far in his investigations before he became convinced of several things. Railway charges did not account for the difference between the price on the field and the price on the city market. The farmer alone created the wealth; but he didn't create it for himself; and he didn't create it for the consumer. He created it for the middleman. A sort of colossus, or giant, that middleman appeared, as you thought about him, with one hand picking the farmer's pocket and the other hand digging into the city man's coat tails; with one foot out on the farmer's back and the other foot solidly planted on the consumer's stomach. THE TOBACCO TRUST

The Boston Post, speaking of the Tobacco Trust, says: "The decision of the Supreme Court on the American Tobacco Company case is a peculiar finding in that its main conclusion is sharp, straightforward and commendable, while its recommendations for further procedure are weak and evasive.

This concern, the court decrees, is "in restraint of trade and an attempt to monopolize within the first and second sections of the anti-trust act." That, the country will be glad to hear, and all the more because of the absence there of the words "unreasonable" and "undue" that loomed so large in the Standard Oil decision. There is at this point no quibbling about good and bad trusts and "reasonable" monopolies. So far, excellent although the "rule of reason" shows up later on. But having adjudged the tobacco trust a violator of the law, the court declines to apply any penalty itself, but send the case back to the next lower court with the vaguest instructions to do something to compel the trust to fix itself up in conformity to the law or be dissolved within six months. In the words of the decision, the lower court is given the task of "ascertaining upon some plan or method of dissolving the combination, and of recreating out of the elements now composing it a new foundation which shall be honestly in harmony with and not repugnant to the law."

Thus the lower court—the Southern District Court of New York, which is completely reversed because it had enjoined the tobacco trust from doing interstate commerce—is directed to reopen the case and "by evidence or otherwise," to help reorganize the trust so that it can "get by," possibly another application of the "rule of reason" theory. All of which appears to be a remarkable sort of paternal interest on the part of the highest tribunal in a combination that it declares to be illegal.

It was a foregone conclusion that Justice Harlan would dissent from that part of the decision, and he does so vigorously and logically. He believes that the court has evidence enough and power enough to suppress the trust itself. "I have found nothing," he says, "in the record which makes me at all anxious to perpetuate any new combination among these companies which the court concedes had at all times exhibited a conscious wrong-doing."

We believe that the best, the widespread sentiment of the country will endorse Justice Harlan in his view of the matter. It will say that the Supreme Court has dallied with the situation in that it has thrust back upon a lower court the duty of reorganizing a trust that it declares to be bad, but declines to punish. It will commend that declaration, but will find the decision as a whole vacillating and unsatisfactory.

If a few of the trusts took heart of grace at the Standard Oil decision, many more of them will perk up their spirits at yesterday's decree. If it is to be taken as a precedent, it will mean that there is no penalty for illegal combinations in restraint of trade except that of beginning all over again.

MAY TURN MOTHER-IN-LAW OUT

CHATHAM, Ont., May 30—That a man may legally turn his mother-in-law out of his house if he does not use violence was the gist of a decision handed down today to Police Magistrate Houston.

Mrs. L. A. Turner came to Bert Avery's house about money matters and Avery ordered her out. When Avery tried to push her out of the house she resisted. So he used force and in throwing her out her arms were bruised on the door jamb. The Magistrate was of the opinion that Avery had a right to put his mother-in-law out of the house, but that he used too much violence.

"PIMPLES" Broke Out All Over Her Face. Pimples are caused, almost entirely, by bad blood, and there is only one way to get rid of them, and that is to get at the seat of the trouble by using a good reliable blood purifying medicine.

Burdock Blood Bitters has been on the market for 35 years, and is one of the very best blood medicines procurable. After using it you will find that the pimples have disappeared, and you will have a beautiful clear complexion.

Mrs. Robert McNab, Badjeros, Ont., writes:—"I am greatly pleased to report the benefit I have derived from the use of Burdock Blood Bitters. About a year ago I became so weak and run down I could scarcely walk, and pimples broke out all over my face. I tried one thing after another, but nothing seemed to do me any good. I was advised by a lady friend to try B.B.B., and before I had used one bottle I felt it was doing me good. I used three bottles, and am now well and strong, and the pimples have all disappeared."
