picked up all over the world. For Dorothy Dix's home reflects the pulse of its mistress, the urge to see things first hand, to know every race and creed and country. And so there are rugs from Turkey, brasses from Damascus, embroideries from China and inlaid furniture from the East. Each has been brought back from one of many trips, along with a wealth of impressions and observations and a keen interest in "the next jaunt."

And, miraculously, each year her vitality matches her enthusiasm. Two years ago she viewed a large section of Northern Africa from a camel's back. Last year she penetrated, also on camel back, as far as Teheran, in Persia, especially to study the women of the Near East, many of whom still live in the secluded harem life. This year her goal was Alaska—not the tourist land seen from a comfortable deck chair but the real Klondyke as viewed from a dog sled fifty miles above Dawson.

Every morning the postman staggers up to the door of this New Orleans home with 1000 pieces of mail addressed to Dorothy Dix.

"These letters," she confessed, "are the most amazing human documents ever written; and as they flow across my desk in an endless stream, I am given such a glimpse of the human heart as perhaps no other human being has ever been privileged to see. It is a cross-section of life, raw and bleeding, with nothing covered up. Some of the letters are written by souls in torment. I can imagine men and women getting up from beds on which they have tossed sleeplessly to try to ease their over-burdened hearts by writing me.

"What do they write about, these and steamstresses, judges and teachers, stenographers, and farmers? Most clerks and business men, governors of their letters are written in terrible stress, many are heartbreaking pathetic. Some are so heroic in their acceptance of almost impossible living conditions that you feel that the warriors should be decorated with the cross of the Legion of Honor.

"Many, too, are amusing. Not long ago one writer said, 'I usually take my problems to God, but now, Miss Dix, I want the advice of someone real practical.' Generally the letters follow a distinct trend. When I first began keeping my finger on the pulse of humanity about the beginning of the century, it was much quieter and generally speaking, staidier.

"Some letters are naive in their explanations of extenuating circumstances, such as the one from a young girl who wrote not long ago, 'Of course, Miss Dix, you're old-fashioned in your ideas, but then they didn't know about sex when you were young, did they?'"

"To which I felt bound to respond that Adam and Eve had known all there was to be known about the subject, and that women had even invented a new word since the Garden of Eden."

"Wives today are truer to the 1900 form than any other class of correspondents. They are still bothered by drunken and faithless husbands; and just as often, perhaps oftener, they have fallen in love with another man, whom they are ready to break up their homes. Curiously enough, their vanity leads them to believe that their fascinations are so great that the 'Other Man' will be willing to take them with five or six children!"

"One hundred husbands write me today where one used to write ten or twenty years ago. And the reason for this is that there is a revolt of husbands quietly going on in America. The modern husband is no longer satisfied with a wife who is merely faithful and virtuous and a fair cook. He wants a wife who will be entertaining, who will keep up with him mentally and especially one who sympathizes with him and is affectionate to him.

-DAIRYMEN-

Naturally you expect every manufacturer of BALANCED RATIONS to assert that his product is the best on the market—BUT ASK THE MAN WHO FEEDS THEM.

Note what Mr. Gilbert McMillan, noted Ayrshire Breeder of Huntingdon, Que., breeder of the first Ayrshire Cow to produce over 100 lbs. of milk in a day, has to say regarding BALANCED RATIONS. (Extract from a letter dated Dec. 2, 1929)

"UNION GRAINS are practically the only Commercial Mixed Feeds I have ever used that I felt satisfied were as good value as I could mix myself. As long as they hold to their present relationship in price to the other standard feeds we will continue to use them.

(signed) Gilbert McMillan.

There is no Dairyman in Canada better qualified to judge of the value of Dairy Rations than Mr. McMillan as his lifetime has been spent in breeding, rearing and feeding cattle for show and production.

"NOT BY MEAT ALONE"

Leading fox ranchers have demonstrated that, in addition to meat, it is absolutely necessary to feed a liberal supply of IMPERIAL BISCUITS daily during the winter season, in order to keep the bowels regular, and also to ensure the females having an adequate supply of milk during the lactation period.

IMPERIAL COD OIL BISCUITS are made from a formula which has been prepared with these results in view and which reliable tests, extending over a considerable term of years, have proved to be signally successful.

Ranches, which have continued the feeding of IMPERIALS regularly in winter, have had the largest litters of young foxes and also the highest average of pups raised to maturity; in addition, they have practically eliminated the destroying of young by the females.

For assured results feed IMPERIALS throughout all the winter season.

IMPERIALS are sold by leading distributors or direct from the factory.

"Why it's gotten so," Dorothy Dix laughed condescendingly, "that I can't read and enjoy novels any more. They all seem tame after the real live letters I read every day. Many of them have plot, mystery, romance, intrigue—everything needed for a novel of human emotions. 'Poor soul,' said they to her; 'Poor soul,' said she to them."
