Dr. J. M. Nicholson, graduate of Detroit College of Veterinary Dentistry, spent a busy morning yesterday at the Charlottetown Race Track. Trainers, Cameron and Conroy, had him go over their horses' mouths and make repairs and alterations where necessary. It should be borne in mind by every owner of a horse, that the mouth is one of the most important parts of a horse's anatomy, and that it should be looked after at least once or twice a year by a competent Veterinary Dentist. Charlottetown has such a person in Dr. Nicholson, who has spent a lifetime in the study of horses, and has given years of study to diseases of the mouth. No more capable, honest or painstaking practitioner can be found. What he does not know about the mouths of horses is not in the book.
