Retain all
Yearling Hens;
Eggs Wanted

In order to bring the present efficiency program for increased egg production to its highest pitch, so as to meet the requests from Britain for millions of dozens more eggs and also to maintain Canadian requirements, the Dominion Department of Agriculture urges upon poultrymen the importance of retaining all suitable laying yearling hens in full lay as long as possible and stressing the fact that the care and management of pullets during the month of September is of vital importance.

With regard to the keeping over the yearling hens, the Department points out that the two-ounce eggs laid by those birds in September and early October of A Grade quality bring the highest price of any eggs during the year. When the birds start to moult, the moult may be speeded up by withholding the mash feed and cutting down the grain feed for a short time; then bringing the birds back on full rations after an interval of ten days or two weeks.

In the meantime, in order to get the greatest possible production and the highest possible quality, every poultryman should be encouraged to keep a full hopper of mash before the yearlings at all times; also plenty of clean, fresh water, which is as important as feed. The early hen is the laying hen. If that bird has a good feed of mash before it starts out on range in the morning, the urge to scavenge will be checked in part. This simple procedure will do much towards ensuring a higher percentage of Grade A eggs. The price return for eggs is such as to warrant every producer keeping a hopper of dry mash before the birds at all times.

The care and management of the pullets during September is a vital issue in the efficiency production campaign, necessitated by the needs of both Canada and Britain. In the fall of 1940 and in the fall of 1939, thousands of good early hatched pullets did not reach profitable production before December because they went into laying quarters in poor condition and underweight. This situation can be avoided now by encouraging the pullets to lay all the eggs they can. Let them start on range, feed them well, provide outdoor nests, help them to get into their full laying capacity on range and keep them at it.

Overcrowding in the colony houses and range shelters must be avoided and plenty of laying mash and fresh water provided. Pullets and yearlings should not be housed together in the same pen, nor young pullets with older pullets. The older birds drive the younger from the feed. Ample hopper space is essential because the birds will not lay well without lots of food. In short, good condition and good body are imperative for maintaining production.

Both Britain and Canada need eggs and efficiency in production will get them.

MONTREAL QUE., Sept. 4—In order that Canadians from the East may economically visit friends and obtain a first hand picture of the West, special low round trip fares will be offered by the two Railways to points in Western Canada and on the Pacific Coast, according to the Passenger Traffic Managers of the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways.

These fares will apply from the Maritime Provinces and all points east of and including Port Arthur, Armstrong, Sault Ste. Marie, Windsor and Sarnia, to all western points, including Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Edmonton, Calgary, Jasper, Banff, Vancouver, Victoria and Prince Rupert.
