WHAT IT MEANS TO BE "BOSS" OF NEW YORK.

Throughout my series of meetings with the president of Blackberry I had seen little of Morton. For that I cared nothing, but played my part slowly so as to give him time, having perfect confidence in his loyalty and knowing that my interest was his interest, and I in no sort to be worried. On that day when Blackberry showed at one hundred and thirty-seven, Morton came to me. He laid down a check for an even million dollars.

"I've been getting out of Blackberry for a week," he said with his air of delicate lassitude. "I found that it was tiring me, don't you know. Besides, we've done enough. No gentleman ever makes more than a million a year; it's not good form."

That check for one million, drawn to my order, was the biggest thing of its kind I'd ever handled. I took it up, and I could feel a pringle to my finger-ends with the hot contact of so much wealth all mine. When I could command my voice I said:—

"And now I suppose we may give the Blackberry its franchise?"

"No, not yet," returned Morton. "Really, were not half through. I've sold thirty-five thousand shares the other way. It was a deuced hard thing to do without sending the stock off; the market is always so beastly ready to tumble, do you know. But I managed it; we're now short about thirty-five thousand shares at one hundred and thirty-seven."

"What then?" said I.

"On the whole, continued Morton, with just a gleam of triumph behind his eyes, and rolling a fresh cigarette between his fingers—"on the whole, I think I should refuse the Blackberry. The public interest would be thrown away, and the people are prodigiously moved over it already. It would be, politically, neither right nor safe, and I'd come out in an interview declaring that a grant of what the Blackberry asks would be to pillage the town. Here, I've the interview prepared. What do you say? Shall we send it to the Daily Tory?"

The interview appeared; Blackberry fell with a crash. It slumped off fifty points, and Morton and I emerged each the better by fairly another million. The Blackberry in the storm of it grazed the reef of a receivership so closely that it rubbed the paint from its side.

DOWIE "ELIJAH II."

John Alexander Dowie who styles himself "Elijah II" and who recently invaded New York with some thousands of followers from Zion City undertook the regeneration of New York City has knocked in vain at the door of the American Metropolis. He has retired beaten and discouraged from the assault.

Dowie permitted the New York papers to make him a ridiculous figure and so conducted himself upon the platform as to excite the disgust of all free minded people who saw or read of his platform antics.

It is clear today that, while Dowie may flourish in the cruder West the East will have no part of him, and has administered a telling rebuke to one of the greatest of modern impostors.

A. B. AYLESWORTH, K. C.

Among the pictures of men in the public eye which are printed to-day on this page is one of A. B. Aylesworth, K. C., one of the Canadian commissioners on the Alaskan boundary tribunal. Mr. Aylesworth and Sir Louis Jette refused to sign the award and protested that the finding was diplomatic rather than judicial, yet, when Mr. Aylesworth returned to Toronto from London the other day, he gave this advice to his fellow countrymen.

He said that resentment was childish and that—

"We have fought our fight, we have lost in the struggle. We must bow with as much graceful submission as possible to the inevitable result. It would be sad indeed if in any feeling of childish resentment of what we thought was an injustice we should say, this is the end, or even this is the weakening of British connection. The tide that binds it to the Motherland on stand the strain, if strains there be, of many Alaskan awards."

GEORGE E. DRUMMOND.

The Canadian Magazine, for November, contains a continuation of its sketch of Canadian celebrities.

The subject of this month's article is George E. Drummond, president of the Canadian Manufacturing Association whose picture appears above.

The Magazine says in part:—

In 1888 George Edward Drummond was one of three young men who ventured to establish a firm in Montreal to import British and foreign heavy iron and steel. By 1887 that firm had progressed sufficiently to employ seven or eight clerks. Then the Tupper iron tariff came into force, he resigned, Mr. Drummond fears to ruin the young business. "Well, if they won't let us import, we shall produce; we must keep on selling," said Mr. Drummond. And so he plugged his firm and friends into the pioneer work of establishing pig-iron manufacture in Canada. Today those interests which formerly employed seven or eight clerks give employment to more than 1,500 workmen. Before 1888 he was not anxious for an iron and steel tariff; but, having been driven by force of a tariff to build up a national industry of first importance, he has become one of the most ardent and consistent exponents of a positive tariff policy. Thereby he possesses one of the most important qualifications for the presidency of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. His election to the chief office in the gift of the association is at once a reiteration of faith on the part of the members in the principles previously enunciated, and an assurance that these principles will continue to be steadily and actively maintained.

There is required of a successful president of the Manufacturers' Association infinite tact, a strong personality, a vigorous energy. The association is now the strongest trade organization in Canada. It embraces about 1,300 manufacturers from Victoria to Halifax, representing a capital of not less than $400,000,000. It is doubtful if there is as representative a Manufacturers' Association in any other land. It is strong in members because it has been active in work.

In speaking of Mr. Drummond's personality, it is difficult to avoid what might appear flattery. He is a well-built, staid man like his brother of "Habitant" and "Johanne Courteau" fame, Dr. W. H. Drummond, and it is a well-known fact that there was a well-proportioned space left in his anatomy for his heart. Indeed, it is his unselfish sympathy with Canadian manufacturers that induced him to be their president, and assume the onerous duties of office. He is a governor of the Montreal General Hospital, vice-president of the Church Home, and warden of St. George's church; an active worker in all. His influence is ever positive rather than cynical. This is the man who is prominent temporarily as president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, but who will always have a strong individual influence on the nation, so long as his present vigor of full manhood continues. He is of that type of self-made man to whom Canada looks for the upbuilding of her great economic structure.

WIND COLIC.

"In my opinion," writes Mrs. Philip Collins, of Monticello, Que., "there is no medicine can equal Baby's Own Tablets. Before I began the use of the Tablets my baby cried all the time with wind colic and got little rest or sleep, and I was nearly worn out myself. Soon after giving baby the Tablets the trouble disappeared, and sound natural sleep returned. I have also proved the Tablets a cure for hives, and a great relief when baby is teething. I would not feel that my children were safe if I did not have a box of the Tablets in the house."

All mothers who have used Baby's Own Tablets speak just as highly of them as does Mrs. Collins. The Tablets cure all the little ills from which infants and young children suffer, and the mother has a solemn assurance that this medicine contains neither opium nor any harmful drug. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 25c a box by writing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.
