

Your family's Income DOUBLED!

until the youngest child becomes of age

The IMPERIAL DOUBLE INCOME POLICY is new and unusual

HERE is a remarkable plan of Life Insurance for the man with young children. It relieves him of a great anxiety—that of providing a sufficient income for the growing family until they are self-supporting.

The Imperial Double Income Policy provides in the event of the policy holder's death, while his children are young, that there will be paid to the family until the youngest child reaches a self-supporting age an income equal to 12% of the face value of the policy.

A $10,000 Policy on this Plan would provide $100 per month ($1,200 a year) during the income period and then pay $10,000 in cash to your beneficiary—perhaps your widow—as a nest egg for her old age.

You see how unusual this is—twice as much income is guaranteed as a similar amount of money could provide under any other plan—and the principal sum is left intact.

Here is real family protection. Send for further particulars today.

Steadier Increase In Gold Prices

(C. F. By Guardian's Special Wire) MONTRÉAL, Jan. 7.—A spectacular rise in the price of gold and the rapid gain in the value of Canadian gold production has tended to obscure the noteworthy advances achieved by the base metal mines.

The most substantial gain was that of nickel and the least expansion that which took place in copper. The letter says, "A steadily increasing proportion of Canadian ores are smelted and refined within the country, with the result that both mining and allied industries have shown pronounced recovery through the expansion in world demand for these materials."

Induction of Rev. Mr. Jeans At St. John, N.B.

The following account of Rev. Mr. Jeans' induction is taken from a St. John, N.B., exchange: With impressive ceremony, Rev. C. J. St. Clair Jeans, native of Glasgow, Scotland, and lately minister of the Presbyterian Church at Summerside, P. E. I., was inducted by the Saint John Presbytery as minister of the Church of St. John and St. Stephen on Thursday night.

Mr. Fullford had for his text Exodus 3: 11-12, with the significant words, "Who am I?" Centainly, I will be with thee." Using the story of Perseus and Andromeda and incidents in the life of Moses to give emphasis to his message, he declared that those whose purpose was high and whose motives were clear of self-seeking have the assurance of God that He would be with them. He closed with the words, "It is well to know the source of our strength, for He is not far from us."

Mr. Macarthur reviewed the steps that had led up to the calling of Mr. Jeans to the pastorate, succeeding Rev. W. L. Newton, whose resignation had been regretfully accepted fifteen months previously. He proceeded to ask the solemn questions of an induction service, first addressing Mr. Jeans and then addressing the congregation. Immediately afterwards members of the presbytery extended the right hand of fellowship to Mr. Jeans.

Prayers Minister Dr. Ross, having congratulated the new minister on being called to so historic a church also congratulated the congregation on obtaining "a workman who needeth not to be ashamed." His words were not to be ashamed of an amplification of the admonition of Paul to Timothy, summed up as, "Watch yourself; watch your teaching; stick to your work." Under those headings Dr. Ross exhorted Mr. Jeans to manly his office and while cultivating humility to beware of an inferiority complex or of becoming discouraged; to give the Gospel message knowing it to be the only solution to the problems of the world today; to busy himself in his ministerial duties and pastoral work that he would have no time to be restless and his people would receive from him the leadership and helpfulness that mean so much to them. Dr. Ross expressed the hope that without individual congregations suffering, there might one day be erected in Saint John a cathedral for Presbyterian worship.

Dr. Morrison, addressing the congregation, said his words were a pledge of the body and his awareness of the high qualifications of Mr. Jeans convinced him that there was a bright future before the Church of St. John and St. Stephen. "You're in a great church, a notable city," he said. "Many cities may exceed Saint John in size, but not many surpass it in cultural attainments." He warned of the danger of expecting too much from one individual, recalling that even in the time of Moses, not all gifts were given to one man. Dr. Morrison exhorted the congregation to respect the time, freedom and limitations of power of their minister, regarding his abilities as his own chance to serve God and claim his rights in their own chance to render such service.

BRINGING UP FATHER

CANADA'S UNSOLVED MYSTERIES

SLAYING OF A MASTER MARINER (By Ralph Morton, Canadian Press Staff Writer) (Copyright, 1935, by the Canadian Press) YARMOUTH, N. S., Jan. 5.—(By The Canadian Press)—Captain George Perry, one of Yarmouth County's most widely known master mariners, spent a life time on salt water. Schooner, and bark, and brigantine were all alike to him. He had sailed them all, this fearless old sea-dog. Years ago, he "swallowed the anchor" and settled down for a peaceful life of retirement.

But the 66-year-old, bewildered skipper was not at ease. He existed under the shadow of impending disaster. He was obsessed with the thought his death would not be a natural one. "Should anything happen to me, I want you to see that my money is employed to investigate the case," the genial, bluff, hearty mariner asked of his friend, Thomas C. Nickerson, who took the remark casually at the time. A crisp, clear night, Feb. 26, 1921, the retired captain stopped with neighbor Nickerson to smoke a pipeful or so of tobacco. The two talked over old times. Nearing 11 o'clock, he started for home. His comrade bade him farewell. That was the last any friend saw of Captain Perry alive.

The murderer lurked in the back-porch of the Perry residence. As the ex-mariner went to open the door, he was struck down by a blow on the forehead. Then, with a round, blunt instrument, he was hit twice on the top of the head, dragged a short distance on the ice and there left to die.

Maritime Canada was shocked at the tragic killing. Detectives, special investigators, officials of the Attorney-General's department, came and went. Yarmouth citizens, alarmed, clamored for the capture of the "killer." But the mystery of the "back-porch murder" has remained unexplained to this day. The Captain's wife and their daughter had been away from the house on the fateful night. The daughter returned with a male "friend after attending a movie. The young man went to look for the "aptain and found him in the backyard—dead."

The Attorney-General's Department ordered the body exhumed. Before the death inquiry was concluded, the County Court House "where the hearing was proceeding" burned down.

Years rolled by. Gloomy and "rainy," the Perry residence failed to reveal its secret of the "kill." "People said it was haunted. Fires it was set on fire and finally was burned to the ground."

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. J. J. HUGHES

On Wednesday, Jan. 2nd there passed away at the City Hospital, after only a brief illness Mrs. James J. Hughes of this city at the comparatively early age of 83 years. The late Mrs. Hughes had entered the City Hospital about two months previously, where she underwent an operation, and for a time fond hopes were held out by her husband and friends for her final recovery; but it was otherwise ordained, and her kindly and gentle spirit passed out from this life to the quiet and peaceful abode of eternal happiness. Deceased was the daughter of the late Thomas and Mrs. McGuigan of St. Patrick's Hope River, where she spent her early life. After her marriage to Mr. Hughes which took place at the Cathedral in Charlottetown Sept. 17th 1896, she removed with her husband to Kinkora where she spent the rest of her life on the farm up to July last when they moved to Charlottetown to reside.

Mrs. Hughes was a woman of a noble and generous nature, and was held in the highest esteem by her neighbors and many friends, while resident in Kinkora. Her married life was one of unbroken serenity and happiness and by industry and thrift she rendered, her husband, over and unflinching in building up a prosperous home. She was a devout member of the Catholic Church and died fortified by all the sacred ritual of her Faith. Besides a sorrowing husband she leaves to mourn three brothers—Peter in Bangor, Me.; Hugh in Barrie, Vt.; and James in Berlin, N.H., besides a large number of relatives in different sections of the province. The funeral took place on Friday, Jan. 4th at 9:30 a.m. from Henry's Undertaking Rooms to St. Dumas Basilica, where Requiem high mass was celebrated by Rev. Eugene Murray. Interment was in St. Dunstan's R.C. Cemetery, the obsequies being performed by Rev. Father Douglas of the Basilica staff. The Pall Bearers were—D.W. Matheson, Harold Kelly, Victor Coyle, Ernest Duffy, W.P. Mc Kenna and William Grimes. May her soul rest in peace.

HITLER RULE MENACED BY 'DECOMPOSITION'

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—"Decomposition" has begun to undermine the regime of Adolf Hitler, Miss Tony Sender, former member of the German Reichstag, said tonight but she added it is still too early to predict a change.

"If there were a real free vote in Germany today, Hitler would not get a majority," she asserted. "Dissatisfaction is growing in all classes of society."

Miss Sender, a small, black-haired woman, was a Socialist deputy from 1922 to 1933. She left, she said, because a friend warned her she was on a "conscripted" list and scheduled to be killed.

Four Billions For The Unemployed

Amount Will Be Used To Transfer Workless From Dole To Jobs — Congress Likely To Sanction Expenditure.

(By Richard L. Turner) (Associated Press Staff Writer) (A.P. By Guardian's Special Wire) WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—The United States Congress tonight appeared reconciled to another unbalanced budget and ready to appropriate $4,000,000,000 more for transferring the unemployed from dole to jobs.

Senate and House members split, however, on the proposal of Assistant Roosevelt's annual budget message today that the President be given the money in a lump sum with power to use the money where and how he might see fit.

A move arose to have Congress prescribe the projects on which it might be spent which drew support from both parties.

However, there appeared little doubt of the ultimate outcome. The view was expressed privately even by critics that this is a Roosevelt congress and on this and other questions, the President's views will prevail.

Congress scanned the $8,520,000,000 budget proposal for the year stretching from July 30, 1935 to June 1, 1936, and the $34,000,000,000 national debt forecast for the end of that period with but little outward perturbation.

For months it had been apparent that the budget could not be balanced by the end of the next fiscal year, and while Republicans did some criticizing, the Democrats pointed to the President's assertion today that: "I am submitting to the Congress a budget for the fiscal year 1936 which balances except for expenditures to give work to the unemployed."

"If this budget receives the approval of the Congress the country will hereafter have the assurance that, with the single exception of this item every current expenditure of whatever nature will be fully covered by our estimates of current receipts."

"Such deficit as occurs will be due solely to this cause," he said. "And it may be expected to decline as rapidly as private industry is able to re-employ those who now are without work."

Senator Joseph Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, expressed the opinion that the President's message revealed "a gratifying situation" and "involved many details which will have to be given careful study."

"The minority leader, Senator Charles McNary of Oregon, regretted the inability of the President to balance the budget," but "recognized the necessity of taking care of those who are unemployed and in distress."

In the House, Bertrand Snell, the Republican floor leader, contented himself with one sardonic sentence: "It looks like we'll all have a lot of money by and by."

"As usual the President is not afraid to meet an issue," said Speaker Joseph Byrnes, "and the issue this time is three and a half million people who will need jobs until they can be taken care of in private industry."

Senator Vandenberg, prominent Republican with liberal inclinations expressed no fear of "a public debt peak of $34,000,000,000 if we can thus conclusively buy prosperity," and then added: "IS DOUBTFUL" "But, I continue to doubt whether prosperity can be purchased in this fashion, and I am particularly challenged by the President's annual recurrent necessity to move his debt quadrate ever upward."

From the western Progressive came assertions that $4,000,000,000 would prove insufficient. Some members of that group, notably Senator Robert LaFollette of Wisconsin, had urged work relief outlays running as high as $10,000,000,000.

The President called for a smaller outlay of $5,000,000,000 for the next 18 months, together with an increase of $180,000,000 in national defense appropriations, $130,000,000 in veterans payments, and full restoration of the government pay-out at an additional cost of $40,000,000.

Total expenditures of $8,520,000,000 and receipts of $3,991,964,639 were estimated for next year, outlays of $8,581,060,926 and income of $3,711,650,983 for this year. The net deficits were placed at $4,528,508,970 and $4,869,418,338. For the last full fiscal year the deficit was $3,980,496,035.

Another report forecast by the President was an increase in the national debt from $28,480,487,870 on June 30, 1934 to $31,000,000,000 on the same date this year and $34,239,000,000 on June 30, 1936. Borrowings this year were estimated at $4,608,668,460 and next year at $3,788,623,762.

Native of P.E.I. Dies in Boston BOSTON, Jan. 8.—Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Beaton, widely known as a writer for Catholic publications died Thursday in her Dorchester home. She was the widow of Dr. Archibald Beaton, a physician in Dorchester for 38 years, who died in November, Mrs. Beaton, the former Mary Elizabeth Lamont, was born in Prince Edward Island, but was brought to this country as a young girl by her parents who settled in Franklin, Mass. She started her career as a reporter on various daily papers in and about Connecticut, later turning to poetry. Her contributions appeared on many occasions in the pages of the Boston Globe, the Philadelphia Ledger, and the Boston Pilot, official Catholic weekly for the archdiocese. She was also the author of many stories which appeared in the Extension Magazine and other national publications. Until very recently she had been in excellent health, but an ailment which first became apparent during the long illness of her husband recurred, necessitating an operation from which she never recovered.

Mrs. Beaton was an active worker in St. William's parish of which she was a member, as well as many Boston Catholic organizations. A tireless and cheerful worker, she was well known and universally liked. Surviving are two daughters, Miss Catherine and Miss Monica Beaton and a son, Archibald. A solemn funeral mass was celebrated Monday in St. William's church, followed by interment in Holyhood cemetery, Brookline. Mrs. Beaton was a member of the Ladies Catholic Benevolent Association, the Martha Jefferson Club, and was for a long time an official and member of the Catholic Poets' Society.
