Hat-pins are again in favor and form part of the trimming of a hat. The newest ones are tiny bouquets of flowers fastened over the head of the pin.

A single plaiting of tulle resting on the brim makes a light trimming for a wide brimmed sailor hat. Hide the edge with a band of soft ribbon with contracting border, drawn into a narrow strip and finished with short loops and ends. At the side place a small bouquet of roses.

LONDON ZEPPELIN RAID HAD LARGE DEATH ROLL.

NEW YORK, June 25.—"A large number of persons were killed and wounded in the west end of London in the Zeppelin raid on May 31," declared H. D. Watson, representative of a New York automobile company, who returned on the American liner St. Paul today. "The Zeppelins passed over South Kennington. I went there the next morning. The porter of an hotel told me he had assisted in filling two trams full of dead and wounded. How many were killed and injured I do not know."

CENSOR SUPPRESSED STORIES.

The London papers sent proofs of long accounts of the raid, together with many photographs of the havoc wrought, to the official censor, but they never returned. Instead an official statement was issued by the Government for publication in the issues of June 1, briefly announcing that there had been a raid, and the papers were warned against publishing anything additional. The statement was "amplified" by another one, for publication on June 2, in which it was stated that four were dead, a number injured, and that several fires had followed the dropping of the bombs. The following is an account of the scenes in the east end of London the morning following the raid and the stories of the raid itself.

All the people were bright and cheerful. One girl, the daughter of the keeper of a public house, told how when a bomb dropped on the roof of the hostelry she gathered up her pet dog and the day's receipts and succeeded in making her escape. Flames were all about her before she got away, but she saved the money and the dog, as well as her own life.

Samuel Reuben, a little boy of nine years, of 15 Cannon street road, Commercial road east, was killed while playing in Christian street. His body was taken to London Hospital, where eleven of the injured were also taken. Seven bombs were dropped in White chapel and Shoreditch. A woman, Mrs. McGuinness, was passing up the stairs of her apartment when a bomb struck the building.

BOY A MASS OF FLAMES.

At that moment her little son rushed out a mass of flames. A bomb dropped at the home of W. R. Stevens, 3 Kingsland road. The family was at supper and did not know that their home had been struck until a policeman rushed in. The bomb had struck a bedroom of the house.

A bomb fell in St. Mary's Church, Whitechapel, causing one of the beams to fall and damaging the interior of the church.

Another, more destructive and apparently of different make, dropped in Stoke Newington, Hoxton, and besides killing a boy of fourteen severely injured six other persons.

APPROACHED FROM HOXLEY.

The raiders approached the city from across Hoxley. Starting from this central point, they reached the railway yards, where a number of bombs were dropped without, however, causing much damage. Then they spied some lumber yards and dropped inflammable bombs into them. Many fires were started, and the engines were hurrying in all directions. Next they crossed and following the road in a southerly direction. They dropped three bombs in another street, and a number of houses were wrecked.

In Whitechapel Cemetery two bombs were picked up, and close by in Union street was a third, weighing twenty pounds. They were among many found which had not exploded. Bombs dropped in dozens of places throughout Whitechapel. Half a dozen descended upon Colgrave road and created the most intense excitement. The police were unable to pacify the excited throngs, and the East Ham section of the Athletic Volunteer Force was called out to assist them.

NEAR THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

How many persons were killed and injured is unknown. In the hospitals were 70 seriously hurt, and many of the injured were treated in their homes. One of the air raiders was within a mile of the Bank of England and less than three minutes from Buckingham Palace, Westminster Abbey, the Parliament Houses and other Government buildings.

HIGH PRAISE FOR CANADIANS FROM GERMAN JOURNALIST.

LONDON, June 25.—The war correspondent of the Cologne Gazette, writing to his paper, concerning poison gas and its results at Langemarck, pays tribute to the valor of the Canadians on that terrible day. Describing the wounded sons of the Dominion of Canada, in a German hospital, after the battle he says:—"Opposite to a wounded Senegalese by a window lay three Canadian soldiers. The Canadian division are some of the finest troops in the English army, and I have heard on all sides from my own people nothing but the highest praise for the military character of these men as well for their courage and their tenacity as for their discipline. For honesty, our officers, like our men, recognize the good points of the enemy."

"As it was important for the enemy to retake the heavy guns which had been captured from the English in the woods, west of St. John, the Canadians were sent on the errand and they did succeed in getting them back, but the brave troops did not desist until they were almost entirely cut up."

HAD FOOTBALL MEDAL.

The Canadian who lay in the hospital was a splendid looking fellow, with his broad chest, his strong neck, his strong, thick, faxen hair, his youthful, open countenance, and muscular arms. He showed me a football medal he wore on his breast with his recognition badge, and a religious medallion.

"Are you a Catholic?" I asked. "No," he replied laughing. It was only an amulet that the sister, that is to say the nurse, had hung around him. He was not wounded but suffering from the effects of gas, although he was now apparently on the road to recovery. He lay quite quietly, and cheerfully in bed, as if he had nothing more than a match which had gone against him, and, therefore, must put up with it, and make the best of it.

HAD PNEUMONIA.

"His neighbor suffered more. He was a tall, thin man, showing a hectic flush, but quite as gentle and composed. He declared he was suffering from pneumonia, from the gas, but looked as if he must have had it before. The third was a small, dark man, and came from Quebec. He spoke French, and showed in his lively character, the French-Canadian stock."

WANTED ABDUL'S SON AS REGENT

PARIS, June 25.—Information has been received from Constantinople, says a Havas Agency despatch from Athens, to the effect that after it had become apparent last week that the illness of the Sultan was of a serious nature the Royal Princes met, and decided that Yussef Izzedin, eldest son of the late Sultan Abdul Hamid, should assume the regency. This proposal was vigorously opposed by the Committee of Union and progress, resulting in a deadlock, the solution of which has not yet been found.
