

THE CENTRAL GUARDIAN

Fiddlers Contest

Supreme Court

Meeting Of The Lobster Packers And Fishermen

ED'S TAXI day and night service. Phone 687 or 209-J.

RODD'S TAXI SERVICE Empire Hotel, 225 Queen, Phone 443-J.

COME AND SEE the champion step dancer, Robt. Weeks at Vernon River Hall tonight. 513

SEE THE ROGERS Hardware Company's window for bargains in Refrigerators 20 per cent off for cash. 508-7-9-21

SCOTCHFORTH—SCOTCHFORTH Don't forget the date July 21st Have the time of your life! 31

THE ROGERS HARDWARE Company are open Wednesdays and close Saturday 1 p. m. during July and August. 510-7-9-31

ON BAYFIELD CIRCUIT—Rev. A. G. Haberlin, D. D. of Murray Harbor began his gastorate on the Bayfield N.B. Circuit, where he has charge of the United Church, on Sunday 4th inst, and has made an excellent impression.

INDUCTION—Rev. W. Edward Aitken, B. A., of Charlottetown, P. E. Island, was inducted on Friday afternoon by the Truro Presbytery into the Noel Pastoral charge of the United Church of Canada.

FREE CLINICS for Crippled Children will be held by the Red Cross Society in Britannia Hall, Summerside, Wednesday mornings, July 14th, and at 59 Grafton Street, Charlottetown, July 15th. Dr. Acker, orthopedic specialist of Halifax, will make the examinations and give expert advice with regard to treatment. 474-7-8-31.

LEFT BAYFIELD.—The Sackville Post says:—Rev. E. S. Weeks and family left Bayfield, on Wednesday for Salisbury, Mr. Weeks having taken charge of that circuit. Many expressions of regret were heard from the people of Bayfield Circuit at the loss of the Weeks family from the Parsonage. Mr. Weeks held his farewell service on Sunday June 27th, when large congregations assembled to hear his parting message.

CHANGE IN REGULATIONS.—At a meeting of the Plant Registration Committee of the Canadian Horticultural Council, held recently in Ottawa, a slight modification in the regulations governing registration was made. Instead of issuing a certificate of record when a new plant was accepted for recording no certificate will in future be issued until the plant is fully registered. It has been provided, however, that the Council, upon the recommendation of any recognized horticultural organization, will grant an award of merit certificate to any plant recorded at the Plant Registration Bureau. Full details of the method of recording a new plant and of the operation of the Plant Registration Bureau in respect to registration can be obtained on application to the Secretary of the Canadian Horticultural Council at Ottawa.

SOLDIERS' MEMORIAL SERVICE—Much interest is being taken in the Soldiers' Memorial Service, which will be held at the historic old "Geddie Memorial Church" on Sunday afternoon next at 2.30 o'clock. This has been an annual event ever since the Soldiers' monument was unveiled there some years ago and is attended by people from all over the island. All the New London churches join in this service, and this year they are doing the same, the speakers will be Rev. Joseph C. Harrison, pastor of the church, Rev. G. T. Spriggs of the Anglican and Rev. Geo. Ayers of the United churches. All who wish to do so will take flowers which will be placed at the monument. At the close of the service a bugler will sound the Last Post. (Pat please copy.)

HOME ON VISIT.—Mr and Mrs W. C. MacKay and their two children, Gordon and Elinor of Edmonton, Alberta, arrived in the city by the late train last evening, and will be the guest of Major and Mrs C. L. MacKay, 218 Kent Street. Both Mr and Mrs MacKay are natives of this Province, and this is their second visit since moving to the West about twenty years ago. It is fourteen years since their last visit and no doubt they will be greatly impressed with the improvements in our city since then. Mr. MacKay is the head of the Mackay Coal Co., Ltd., in Edmonton, which has extensive coal mining interests in that Province and we are glad to state he is one of the successful Islanders abroad. Both Mr and Mrs MacKay and children will be heartily welcomed by all their relatives and friends to the "Garden of the Gull," their own native home.

Fox Ranchers By special arrangement with Dr. Allen we are to be the headquarters for all of his famous fox remedies.

Dr. Allen who started the first fox re-search in the world has handed to us for distribution all of his favorite formulas.

Now is the time to use Eromeline for ear-mite. Stomach powders for unthrifty foxes also his famous fit cure.

Harold L. Worthy PHONE 271 178 QUEEN STREET

YORK AND MARSHFIELD—Rev. Dr. J. W. McConnell, Superintendent of missions in United Church of Canada will preach Sunday next, Marshfield 11 a.m. Pleasant Grove, 3 p. m. and York at 7 p. m.

NEW PASTORAL CHARGE.—The St. John Telegraph-Journal had the following in a recent issue. On Sunday evening there was a large attendance at the United Church here, when the new Pastor, Rev. E. S. Weeks, M. A., B. D., delivered his initial sermon as pastor of the church, creating a most favorable impression.

ON BUSINESS TRIP.—Mr R. D. Donaldson of New York Vice President of the Maritime Electric Company and Assistant Chief Engineer of the J. G. White Corporation of that city, has arrived in Charlottetown, accompanied by Mr Thomas Coleman of St. Stephen, N. B., General Manager of the Company for the Maritime Provinces. Mr Donaldson is here in connection with the construction in Charlottetown of the modern steam plant, which so far as size is concerned will be second to none in the eastern provinces. It is understood that the company contemplates an expenditure of $100,000 or more. When the present work is completed some time in September the company hope to be able to supply economically and efficiently all the electric requirements of Charlottetown and vicinities.

HOUSTON WEDS NUPTIALS.—A quite happy very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. Robert H. Wayne, Hunter River, on Wednesday evening, June 23rd when his second oldest daughter, Rita Ausline, was united in marriage to Mr. Stanley Henry Houston, of Wheatley River. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. H. Baxter. The bride was given in marriage by her father, and looked very charming in a gown of white satin, trimmed with lace and rhinestones. She wore the bridal veil and carried a bouquet of pale pink roses and maiden-hair-fern. The bride's only attendants were two flower girls, little Miss Catherine Wayne and Ausline Smith, dressed in white silk with pink ribbon trimmings, and carried a daintily trimmed basket of pink and white carnations. The bridal party entered the parlor to the strains of the "Bridal Chorus," beautifully rendered by Miss Fille Smith, cousin of the bride, and took their places under an arch trimmed with ferns and apple blossoms in the centre of which hung a large wedding bell. At the close of the ceremony, Miss Olga Wayne, sister of the bride, sang very sweetly "The Perfect Love." After congratulations all repaired to the dining room, where upwards of forty guests sat down to a sumptuous repast, to which all did ample justice. The bride's suit was of navy point twill with sand colored hat and checked to match. The happy couple were the recipients of a large number of gifts, including cut glass, silver and linen, also a number of substantial cheques. Previous to her marriage the bride was tendered a miscellaneous shower by her many friends. All join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Houston many years of happy wedded life.

PRIZES Old Time Fiddlers— 1st—$25.00 and a Gold Medal 2nd—$15.00 and a Silver Medal 3rd—$10.00 and a Bronze Medal

Step Dance Fiddlers— 1st—$25.00 and a Gold Medal 2nd—$15.00 and a Silver Medal 3rd—$10.00 and a Bronze Medal

STEP DANCING CONTEST Prizes For Men 1st—$15.00 and a Gold Medal 2nd—$10.00 and a Silver Medal 3rd—$5.00 and a Bronze Medal

Prizes For Ladies— 1st—$15.00 and a Gold Medal 2nd—$10.00 and a Silver Medal 3rd—$5.00 and a Bronze Medal

Boys or Girls— (12 years or under) Special Prize

FIDDLERS Neil Charles Todd Peter Chaisson Adolphe Cheverie Norman McBurnie Plus A. Dolron Leon Gallant Adolph Perry Mike McNinis Malcolm H. Gillis John Ross James Condon Danny Cheverie Daniel Cheverie Edward J. Cheverie Robert Weeks Guy W. Boulter Lawrence B. Smith David McEachern Aeneas Bailey Cecil Gallant Frank B. McDonald Neil J. McCormick Ronald C. McPhee Patrick Trainor Hubert J. Arsenault Paul G. Gillis Walter Cheverie James F. Gallant James Doucette D. J. Mullin

DANCERS William Trainor Joseph J. Gallant Marshal Gallant Rudolph Peters Miss Julia Gallant Miss Mary Gallant Miss Margaret Gallant Miss Albina Peters Lawrence Dolron Robert Weeks Bill Weatherbie Joseph T. Gallant Danny Cheverie Leon Gallant Stephen Morrison Leo D. Gallant Albert J. Boyler

PERSONALS Mrs Alice MacKinnon of Tulsa, Oklahoma, arrived in the city last night on a six weeks visit to her parents, Mr and Mrs W. P. Doull, Fitzroy Street.

Messrs. Oliver Campbell of Burlington, and Wilson Adams, of Sea View, motored to Avonmouth the latter part of the week, where they spent, visiting friends.

Minard's Liniment for Sore Feet. PHONE 1072 Dr. W. R. Carson CHIROPRACTOR Three Year Palmer Graduate Office 121 Prince Street (Opposite St. Paul's Church) Hours 2-5 P. M. Evenings by Appointment

Ladies' Bathing Shoes 75c a pair Made of nice fine rubber in the following colours. RED AND WHITE BLAC KAND WHITE GREEN AND WHITE BLUE AND BLACK (Sizes 3 to 7) Misses (sizes 11 to 2.) Colour Red and White. ALLEY & CO. FASHIONABLE FOOTWEAR

"Y" Camp Notes Wednesday was a historic day for the boys in that they will long remember their hike to Victoria in order to attend the Caledonia Club. In all it was a distance of twelve miles in any case they got there, enjoyed the days pleasures and all arrived back in camp by ten o'clock. All footsore and weary. One of the boys said that the next time we hike to Victoria we won't go. Dug up a jumping pit Thursday and having lots of fun in it some of the boys are getting up. Finished up the last of Bill Prowse's oranges last night. When frying ham or bacon always place it in the pan before putting the pan on the fire. It cooks and

Rules and Regulations Governing the Maritime Championships Fiddling and Dancing Contest at Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, Canada, July 12th and 13th, 1926.

(2) A fiddler may enter either for Old Timers Fiddling Contest or Step Dancing Fiddling Contest or both. (3) To qualify for Old Timers fiddling the fiddler must be able to play the old reels, jigs and strathspeys, and must be 50 years of age or over. (4) Old Time Fiddlers will be judged on ability to execute the old jigs, reels and strathspeys, introducing the cuts, slurs, and grace notes, time and fingering will be as well as bowing and general appearance. (5) Step Dancing Fiddlers will be judged on time, fingering, bowing, correct execution of the time and on the general appearance of the performer. (6) Step dancing for both ladies and gentlemen and children will be judged on the number of steps, proper execution of the same with both feet, time and general appearance. (7) No person under the influence of liquor will be permitted on the stage or in the hall. (8) The management reserves the right of limiting the number of performers and to that end may refuse to accept the entry of any applicant. (9) In order to decide the winner in each class the judges will have the privilege of recalling any number of performers they deem necessary and refusal to answer such call will bar each performer from his or her right to a prize. The management does not hold itself responsible for any travelling or hotel expenses which contestants may incur.

At nine o'clock the taxi-horse. At nine o'clock the horse was in the stable. Witness had not tried to get the young men charged with the assault to settle this case. Did say it a pity they had not tried to fix it up. Nothing was mentioned about Doyle or anybody else. Had not stated that he was going to get these young men drunk so entering the yard to see evidence. In the assault upon his teeth had been knocked down his throat. There had been no conversation that evening between him and the young men. He caught McDougal by the coat. Witness indicated on a sketch the location of the sleigh in the yard, in relation to the barn and other buildings. Witness asked the boys what they were doing there. Received no answer, and then he saw three other lads entering the yard. About half way out of the yard, he saw who they were. They ran. Did not know whether the other boys went near the sleigh when his back was turned. Then they landed on him. Put his knuckle out of joint. Then he saw the police officer. Did not know how they did it. Knew nothing about any shooting. Did not know whether shot was intended for Gormley or any one else. Had had information with City Marshal, but did not give the names of four other boys who were summoned for the assault. Dr. R. J. Ledwell, the next witness said he attended P. F. McKenna, on March 12, and found him suffering from very severe contusions and lacerations on the right forehead, and contusions on the head. Three teeth in one part of his mouth were driven out, a severe contusion was over the left ear, and a severely injured bone in the hand. His ribs were injured and his eye blackened. His lips were cut badly. Witness was now partially deaf, and this was a result, in the witness's consideration, of the injury he had received in the assault. McKenna was under his observation ever since the assault.

McKenna and Doyle were standing in the yard then. He went out again by the way he came and after the first keg away. He did not go into McKenna's yard again after that. He did not know anything about an assault. He never laid a finger on McKenna. He saw his brother William shot that night. He was standing then by the sleigh trying to get the second keg. Doyle and McKenna were standing at the end of the gangway and Doyle fired the shot. He first saw the gun then. When the court resumed the noon recess, the witness said on the stand that he had been convicted on Friday of last week for drunkenness. He had been sent to jail for sixty days and had been brought into court in the morning by the police officer. He had been left there and at dinner-time had gone to his home for his dinner. He had seen no papers when taken out of jail. Mr. Bentley called the attention of the court to this irregular procedure and said that the liquor as if the prisoner had been discharged. However he had returned to give his evidence. Cross examined by the Attorney General, witness said he was twenty-two years old. He had been convicted of drunkenness under a boat on the shore. He had found it that way before. He met F. MacDougal at Riley's Corner on March 12th and went over to the Union Hall, then around the street. He couldn't say who proposed to go to McKenna's yard. When they were in the yard and McKenna went out to the street, Doyle was about five yards away from the witness. He didn't know where MacDougal went when witness was taking the keg. McKenna and Doyle were still in the gangway when he went after the second keg. Doyle didn't have the gun the first time he saw him. After the shot was fired he met his brother who said he was hit. He went to get a doctor, and McDougal and the witness took the rum and hid it on one of the wharves. They took some out later but the keg disappeared. He might have been altogether a quarter of an hour on and around McKenna's premises that night. William Gormley, the next witness, said he was a brother of the previous witness. On the night of March 12th, he had been on the street alone until about nine o'clock. He was afterwards in Lambros' pool room on Grafton Street, and later went for a walk with Andrew McLeod. He stood on the corner of Sydney and Queen Streets, about a block from McKenna's. He walked down that way and was standing alongside the gangway, across the street. Witness did not go into the gangway. McKenna and Doyle crossed the street to ask some of the fellows what was going on. He was hit by a charge of shot. He stumbled, got up, and ran in McKenna's yard but didn't have time to go westward direction. He went to

to get the other keg. McKenna and Doyle were standing in the yard then. He went out again by the way he came and after the first keg away. He did not go into McKenna's yard again after that. He did not know anything about an assault. He never laid a finger on McKenna. He saw his brother William shot that night. He was standing then by the sleigh trying to get the second keg. Doyle and McKenna were standing at the end of the gangway and Doyle fired the shot. He first saw the gun then. When the court resumed the noon recess, the witness said on the stand that he had been convicted on Friday of last week for drunkenness. He had been sent to jail for sixty days and had been brought into court in the morning by the police officer. He had been left there and at dinner-time had gone to his home for his dinner. He had seen no papers when taken out of jail. Mr. Bentley called the attention of the court to this irregular procedure and said that the liquor as if the prisoner had been discharged. However he had returned to give his evidence. Cross examined by the Attorney General, witness said he was twenty-two years old. He had been convicted of drunkenness under a boat on the shore. He had found it that way before. He met F. MacDougal at Riley's Corner on March 12th and went over to the Union Hall, then around the street. He couldn't say who proposed to go to McKenna's yard. When they were in the yard and McKenna went out to the street, Doyle was about five yards away from the witness. He didn't know where MacDougal went when witness was taking the keg. McKenna and Doyle were still in the gangway when he went after the second keg. Doyle didn't have the gun the first time he saw him. After the shot was fired he met his brother who said he was hit. He went to get a doctor, and McDougal and the witness took the rum and hid it on one of the wharves. They took some out later but the keg disappeared. He might have been altogether a quarter of an hour on and around McKenna's premises that night. William Gormley, the next witness, said he was a brother of the previous witness. On the night of March 12th, he had been on the street alone until about nine o'clock. He was afterwards in Lambros' pool room on Grafton Street, and later went for a walk with Andrew McLeod. He stood on the corner of Sydney and Queen Streets, about a block from McKenna's. He walked down that way and was standing alongside the gangway, across the street. Witness did not go into the gangway. McKenna and Doyle crossed the street to ask some of the fellows what was going on. He was hit by a charge of shot. He stumbled, got up, and ran in McKenna's yard but didn't have time to go westward direction. He went to his aunt's on King St., and bathed his wounded hand. He then went to Dr. Ledwell's, and was afterwards taken to the Charlottetown Hospital. He was in the hospital for a month. The bone was broken in one of his fingers and had to be amputated. There were eight or nine shots on his hips. He was a week or week and a half in jail and was then bailed out. Cross examined, the witness said he had seen neither his brother or McDougal that night. He had gone past McKenna's to see what was going on, as he saw a crowd of fellows standing around outside. This concluded the case for the defense, and the Attorney General called A. Lincoln Doyle as a witness for the Crown. Mr. Bentley, counsel for the defense, objected to this witness being called on the ground that any evidence he could give that was not new would be beside the issue, as the Crown evidence stated that the witness had not been present at the alleged assault. New evidence could not be submitted as a case for the prosecution was closed. The Attorney General said that the witness was called as a test of the credibility of the witness for the defense. After argument on the point by both sides, the court was adjourned at 4 o'clock, to meet at half past ten this morning.

MIDDLETON SCHOOL EXAMINATION The semi-annual examination of Middleton School was held on Tuesday afternoon, June 29th. A very large number of rate payers and visitors were present which showed the interest that had been taken in the school. The pupils were examined in the various subjects by their teachers, Mr. Leonard Farmer, Principal and Miss Marion Weeks, Assistant, assisted by Mr. Elmer Roberts, and by their prompt and ready answers showed the careful training they had received. Prizes were awarded to each grade in the Primary room for general proficiency and a public school certificate was presented to James Campbell. Speeches were made by a number of the rate payers on the good work that had been done during the last term, and expressed much regret that the teachers were not remaining for another year. Pupils and visitors were then treated to candy after which the Examination closed by singing the National Anthem.

William Gormley, the next witness, said he was a brother of the previous witness. On the night of March 12th, he had been on the street alone until about nine o'clock. He was afterwards in Lambros' pool room on Grafton Street, and later went for a walk with Andrew McLeod. He stood on the corner of Sydney and Queen Streets, about a block from McKenna's. He walked down that way and was standing alongside the gangway, across the street. Witness did not go into the gangway. McKenna and Doyle crossed the street to ask some of the fellows what was going on. He was hit by a charge of shot. He stumbled, got up, and ran in McKenna's yard but didn't have time to go westward direction. He went to

to get the other keg. McKenna and Doyle were standing in the yard then. He went out again by the way he came and after the first keg away. He did not go into McKenna's yard again after that. He did not know anything about an assault. He never laid a finger on McKenna. He saw his brother William shot that night. He was standing then by the sleigh trying to get the second keg. Doyle and McKenna were standing at the end of the gangway and Doyle fired the shot. He first saw the gun then. When the court resumed the noon recess, the witness said on the stand that he had been convicted on Friday of last week for drunkenness. He had been sent to jail for sixty days and had been brought into court in the morning by the police officer. He had been left there and at dinner-time had gone to his home for his dinner. He had seen no papers when taken out of jail. Mr. Bentley called the attention of the court to this irregular procedure and said that the liquor as if the prisoner had been discharged. However he had returned to give his evidence. Cross examined by the Attorney General, witness said he was twenty-two years old. He had been convicted of drunkenness under a boat on the shore. He had found it that way before. He met F. MacDougal at Riley's Corner on March 12th and went over to the Union Hall, then around the street. He couldn't say who proposed to go to McKenna's yard. When they were in the yard and McKenna went out to the street, Doyle was about five yards away from the witness. He didn't know where MacDougal went when witness was taking the keg. McKenna and Doyle were still in the gangway when he went after the second keg. Doyle didn't have the gun the first time he saw him. After the shot was fired he met his brother who said he was hit. He went to get a doctor, and McDougal and the witness took the rum and hid it on one of the wharves. They took some out later but the keg disappeared. He might have been altogether a quarter of an hour on and around McKenna's premises that night. William Gormley, the next witness, said he was a brother of the previous witness. On the night of March 12th, he had been on the street alone until about nine o'clock. He was afterwards in Lambros' pool room on Grafton Street, and later went for a walk with Andrew McLeod. He stood on the corner of Sydney and Queen Streets, about a block from McKenna's. He walked down that way and was standing alongside the gangway, across the street. Witness did not go into the gangway. McKenna and Doyle crossed the street to ask some of the fellows what was going on. He was hit by a charge of shot. He stumbled, got up, and ran in McKenna's yard but didn't have time to go westward direction. He went to

to get the other keg. McKenna and Doyle were standing in the yard then. He went out again by the way he came and after the first keg away. He did not go into McKenna's yard again after that. He did not know anything about an assault. He never laid a finger on McKenna. He saw his brother William shot that night. He was standing then by the sleigh trying to get the second keg. Doyle and McKenna were standing at the end of the gangway and Doyle fired the shot. He first saw the gun then. When the court resumed the noon recess, the witness said on the stand that he had been convicted on Friday of last week for drunkenness. He had been sent to jail for sixty days and had been brought into court in the morning by the police officer. He had been left there and at dinner-time had gone to his home for his dinner. He had seen no papers when taken out of jail. Mr. Bentley called the attention of the court to this irregular procedure and said that the liquor as if the prisoner had been discharged. However he had returned to give his evidence. Cross examined by the Attorney General, witness said he was twenty-two years old. He had been convicted of drunkenness under a boat on the shore. He had found it that way before. He met F. MacDougal at Riley's Corner on March 12th and went over to the Union Hall, then around the street. He couldn't say who proposed to go to McKenna's yard. When they were in the yard and McKenna went out to the street, Doyle was about five yards away from the witness. He didn't know where MacDougal went when witness was taking the keg. McKenna and Doyle were still in the gangway when he went after the second keg. Doyle didn't have the gun the first time he saw him. After the shot was fired he met his brother who said he was hit. He went to get a doctor, and McDougal and the witness took the rum and hid it on one of the wharves. They took some out later but the keg disappeared. He might have been altogether a quarter of an hour on and around McKenna's premises that night. William Gormley, the next witness, said he was a brother of the previous witness. On the night of March 12th, he had been on the street alone until about nine o'clock. He was afterwards in Lambros' pool room on Grafton Street, and later went for a walk with Andrew McLeod. He stood on the corner of Sydney and Queen Streets, about a block from McKenna's. He walked down that way and was standing alongside the gangway, across the street. Witness did not go into the gangway. McKenna and Doyle crossed the street to ask some of the fellows what was going on. He was hit by a charge of shot. He stumbled, got up, and ran in McKenna's yard but didn't have time to go westward direction. He went to

to get the other keg. McKenna and Doyle were standing in the yard then. He went out again by the way he came and after the first keg away. He did not go into McKenna's yard again after that. He did not know anything about an assault. He never laid a finger on McKenna. He saw his brother William shot that night. He was standing then by the sleigh trying to get the second keg. Doyle and McKenna were standing at the end of the gangway and Doyle fired the shot. He first saw the gun then. When the court resumed the noon recess, the witness said on the stand that he had been convicted on Friday of last week for drunkenness. He had been sent to jail for sixty days and had been brought into court in the morning by the police officer. He had been left there and at dinner-time had gone to his home for his dinner. He had seen no papers when taken out of jail. Mr. Bentley called the attention of the court to this irregular procedure and said that the liquor as if the prisoner had been discharged. However he had returned to give his evidence. Cross examined by the Attorney General, witness said he was twenty-two years old. He had been convicted of drunkenness under a boat on the shore. He had found it that way before. He met F. MacDougal at Riley's Corner on March 12th and went over to the Union Hall, then around the street. He couldn't say who proposed to go to McKenna's yard. When they were in the yard and McKenna went out to the street, Doyle was about five yards away from the witness. He didn't know where MacDougal went when witness was taking the keg. McKenna and Doyle were still in the gangway when he went after the second keg. Doyle didn't have the gun the first time he saw him. After the shot was fired he met his brother who said he was hit. He went to get a doctor, and McDougal and the witness took the rum and hid it on one of the wharves. They took some out later but the keg disappeared. He might have been altogether a quarter of an hour on and around McKenna's premises that night. William Gormley, the next witness, said he was a brother of the previous witness. On the night of March 12th, he had been on the street alone until about nine o'clock. He was afterwards in Lambros' pool room on Grafton Street, and later went for a walk with Andrew McLeod. He stood on the corner of Sydney and Queen Streets, about a block from McKenna's. He walked down that way and was standing alongside the gangway, across the street. Witness did not go into the gangway. McKenna and Doyle crossed the street to ask some of the fellows what was going on. He was hit by a charge of shot. He stumbled, got up, and ran in McKenna's yard but didn't have time to go westward direction. He went to

to get the other keg. McKenna and Doyle were standing in the yard then. He went out again by the way he came and after the first keg away. He did not go into McKenna's yard again after that. He did not know anything about an assault. He never laid a finger on McKenna. He saw his brother William shot that night. He was standing then by the sleigh trying to get the second keg. Doyle and McKenna were standing at the end of the gangway and Doyle fired the shot. He first saw the gun then. When the court resumed the noon recess, the witness said on the stand that he had been convicted on Friday of last week for drunkenness. He had been sent to jail for sixty days and had been brought into court in the morning by the police officer. He had been left there and at dinner-time had gone to his home for his dinner. He had seen no papers when taken out of jail. Mr. Bentley called the attention of the court to this irregular procedure and said that the liquor as if the prisoner had been discharged. However he had returned to give his evidence. Cross examined by the Attorney General, witness said he was twenty-two years old. He had been convicted of drunkenness under a boat on the shore. He had found it that way before. He met F. MacDougal at Riley's Corner on March 12th and went over to the Union Hall, then around the street. He couldn't say who proposed to go to McKenna's yard. When they were in the yard and McKenna went out to the street, Doyle was about five yards away from the witness. He didn't know where MacDougal went when witness was taking the keg. McKenna and Doyle were still in the gangway when he went after the second keg. Doyle didn't have the gun the first time he saw him. After the shot was fired he met his brother who said he was hit. He went to get a doctor, and McDougal and the witness took the rum and hid it on one of the wharves. They took some out later but the keg disappeared. He might have been altogether a quarter of an hour on and around McKenna's premises that night. William Gormley, the next witness, said he was a brother of the previous witness. On the night of March 12th, he had been on the street alone until about nine o'clock. He was afterwards in Lambros' pool room on Grafton Street, and later went for a walk with Andrew McLeod. He stood on the corner of Sydney and Queen Streets, about a block from McKenna's. He walked down that way and was standing alongside the gangway, across the street. Witness did not go into the gangway. McKenna and Doyle crossed the street to ask some of the fellows what was going on. He was hit by a charge of shot. He stumbled, got up, and ran in McKenna's yard but didn't have time to go westward direction. He went to

to get the other keg. McKenna and Doyle were standing in the yard then. He went out again by the way he came and after the first keg away. He did not go into McKenna's yard again after that. He did not know anything about an assault. He never laid a finger on McKenna. He saw his brother William shot that night. He was standing then by the sleigh trying to get the second keg. Doyle and McKenna were standing at the end of the gangway and Doyle fired the shot. He first saw the gun then. When the court resumed the noon recess, the witness said on the stand that he had been convicted on Friday of last week for drunkenness. He had been sent to jail for sixty days and had been brought into court in the morning by the police officer. He had been left there and at dinner-time had gone to his home for his dinner. He had seen no papers when taken out of jail. Mr. Bentley called the attention of the court to this irregular procedure and said that the liquor as if the prisoner had been discharged. However he had returned to give his evidence. Cross examined by the Attorney General, witness said he was twenty-two years old. He had been convicted of drunkenness under a boat on the shore. He had found it that way before. He met F. MacDougal at Riley's Corner on March 12th and went over to the Union Hall, then around the street. He couldn't say who proposed to go to McKenna's yard. When they were in the yard and McKenna went out to the street, Doyle was about five yards away from the witness. He didn't know where MacDougal went when witness was taking the keg. McKenna and Doyle were still in the gangway when he went after the second keg. Doyle didn't have the gun the first time he saw him. After the shot was fired he met his brother who said he was hit. He went to get a doctor, and McDougal and the witness took the rum and hid it on one of the wharves. They took some out later but the keg disappeared. He might have been altogether a quarter of an hour on and around McKenna's premises that night. William Gormley, the next witness, said he was a brother of the previous witness. On the night of March 12th, he had been on the street alone until about nine o'clock. He was afterwards in Lambros' pool room on Grafton Street, and later went for a walk with Andrew McLeod. He stood on the corner of Sydney and Queen Streets, about a block from McKenna's. He walked down that way and was standing alongside the gangway, across the street. Witness did not go into the gangway. McKenna and Doyle crossed the street to ask some of the fellows what was going on. He was hit by a charge of shot. He stumbled, got up, and ran in McKenna's yard but didn't have time to go westward direction. He went to

to get the other keg. McKenna and Doyle were standing in the yard then. He went out again by the way he came and after the first keg away. He did not go into McKenna's yard again after that. He did not know anything about an assault. He never laid a finger on McKenna. He saw his brother William shot that night. He was standing then by the sleigh trying to get the second keg. Doyle and McKenna were standing at the end of the gangway and Doyle fired the shot. He first saw the gun then. When the court resumed the noon recess, the witness said on the stand that he had been convicted on Friday of last week for drunkenness. He had been sent to jail for sixty days and had been brought into court in the morning by the police officer. He had been left there and at dinner-time had gone to his home for his dinner. He had seen no papers when taken out of jail. Mr. Bentley called the attention of the court to this irregular procedure and said that the liquor as if the prisoner had been discharged. However he had returned to give his evidence. Cross examined by the Attorney General, witness said he was twenty-two years old. He had been convicted of drunkenness under a boat on the shore. He had found it that way before. He met F. MacDougal at Riley's Corner on March 12th and went over to the Union Hall, then around the street. He couldn't say who proposed to go to McKenna's yard. When they were in the yard and McKenna went out to the street, Doyle was about five yards away from the witness. He didn't know where MacDougal went when witness was taking the keg. McKenna and Doyle were still in the gangway when he went after the second keg. Doyle didn't have the gun the first time he saw him. After the shot was fired he met his brother who said he was hit. He went to get a doctor, and McDougal and the witness took the rum and hid it on one of the wharves. They took some out later but the keg disappeared. He might have been altogether a quarter of an hour on and around McKenna's premises that night. William Gormley, the next witness, said he was a brother of the previous witness. On the night of March 12th, he had been on the street alone until about nine o'clock. He was afterwards in Lambros' pool room on Grafton Street, and later went for a walk with Andrew McLeod. He stood on the corner of Sydney and Queen Streets, about a block from McKenna's. He walked down that way and was standing alongside the gangway, across the street. Witness did not go into the gangway. McKenna and Doyle crossed the street to ask some of the fellows what was going on. He was hit by a charge of shot. He stumbled, got up, and ran in McKenna's yard but didn't have time to go westward direction. He went to

to get the other keg. McKenna and Doyle were standing in the yard then. He went out again by the way he came and after the first keg away. He did not go into McKenna's yard again after that. He did not know anything about an assault. He never laid a finger on McKenna. He saw his brother William shot that night. He was standing then by the sleigh trying to get the second keg. Doyle and McKenna were standing at the end of the gangway and Doyle fired the shot. He first saw the gun then. When the court resumed the noon recess, the witness said on the stand that he had been convicted on Friday of last week for drunkenness. He had been sent to jail for sixty days and had been brought into court in the morning by the police officer. He had been left there and at dinner-time had gone to his home for his dinner. He had seen no papers when taken out of jail. Mr. Bentley called the attention of the court to this irregular procedure and said that the liquor as if the prisoner had been discharged. However he had returned to give his evidence. Cross examined by the Attorney General, witness said he was twenty-two years old. He had been convicted of drunkenness under a boat on the shore. He had found it that way before. He met F. MacDougal at Riley's Corner on March 12th and went over to the Union Hall, then around the street. He couldn't say who proposed to go to McKenna's yard. When they were in the yard and McKenna went out to the street, Doyle was about five yards away from the witness. He didn't know where MacDougal went when witness was taking the keg. McKenna and Doyle were still in the gangway when he went after the second keg. Doyle didn't have the gun the first time he saw him. After the shot was fired he met his brother who said he was hit. He went to get a doctor, and McDougal and the witness took the rum and hid it on one of the wharves. They took some out later but the keg disappeared. He might have been altogether a quarter of an hour on and around McKenna's premises that night. William Gormley, the next witness, said he was a brother of the previous witness. On the night of March 12th, he had been on the street alone until about nine o'clock. He was afterwards in Lambros' pool room on Grafton Street, and later went for a walk with Andrew McLeod. He stood on the corner of Sydney and Queen Streets, about a block from McKenna's. He walked down that way and was standing alongside the gangway, across the street. Witness did not go into the gangway. McKenna and Doyle crossed the street to ask some of the fellows what was going on. He was hit by a charge of shot. He stumbled, got up, and ran in McKenna's yard but didn't have time to go westward direction. He went to

to get the other keg. McKenna and Doyle were standing in the yard then. He went out again by the way he came and after the first keg away. He did not go into McKenna's yard again after that. He did not know anything about an assault. He never laid a finger on McKenna. He saw his brother William shot that night. He was standing then by the sleigh trying to get the second keg. Doyle and McKenna were standing at the end of the gangway and Doyle fired the shot. He first saw the gun then. When the court resumed the noon recess, the witness said on the stand that he had been convicted on Friday of last week for drunkenness. He had been sent to jail for sixty days and had been brought into court in the morning by the police officer. He had been left there and at dinner-time had gone to his home for his dinner. He had seen no papers when taken out of jail. Mr. Bentley called the attention of the court to this irregular procedure and said that the liquor as if the prisoner had been discharged. However he had returned to give his evidence. Cross examined by the Attorney General, witness said he was twenty-two years old. He had been convicted of drunkenness under a boat on the shore. He had found it that way before. He met F. MacDougal at Riley's Corner on March 12th and went over to the Union Hall, then around the street. He couldn't say who proposed to go to McKenna's yard. When they were in the yard and McKenna went out to the street, Doyle was about five yards away from the witness. He didn't know where MacDougal went when witness was taking the keg. McKenna and Doyle were still in the gangway when he went after the second keg. Doyle didn't have the gun the first time he saw him. After the shot was fired he met his brother who said he was hit. He went to get a doctor, and McDougal and the witness took the rum and hid it on one of the wharves. They took some out later but the keg disappeared. He might have been altogether a quarter of an hour on and around McKenna's premises that night. William Gormley, the next witness, said he was a brother of the previous witness. On the night of March 12th, he had been on the street alone until about nine o'clock. He was afterwards in Lambros' pool room on Grafton Street, and later went for a walk with Andrew McLeod. He stood on the corner of Sydney and Queen Streets, about a block from McKenna's. He walked down that way and was standing alongside the gangway, across the street. Witness did not go into the gangway. McKenna and Doyle crossed the street to ask some of the fellows what was going on. He was hit by a charge of shot. He stumbled, got up, and ran in McKenna's yard but didn't have time to go westward direction. He went to

to get the other keg. McKenna and Doyle were standing in the yard then. He went out again by the way he came and after the first keg away. He did not go into McKenna's yard again after that. He did not know anything about an assault. He never laid a finger on McKenna. He saw his brother William shot that night. He was standing then by the sleigh trying to get the second keg. Doyle and McKenna were standing at the end of the gangway and Doyle fired the shot. He first saw the gun then. When the court resumed the noon recess, the witness said on the stand that he had been convicted on Friday of last week for drunkenness. He had been sent to jail for sixty days and had been brought into court in the morning by the police officer. He had been left there and at dinner-time had gone to his home for his dinner. He had seen no papers when taken out of jail. Mr. Bentley called the attention of the court to this irregular procedure and said that the liquor as if the prisoner had been discharged. However he had returned to give his evidence. Cross examined by the Attorney General, witness said he was twenty-two years old. He had been convicted of drunkenness under a boat on the shore. He had found it that way before. He met F. MacDougal at Riley's Corner on March 12th and went over to the Union Hall, then around the street. He couldn