Happenings of The Week

The Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose were thrilled when they were taken to see a crater made by a bomb which had fallen near their country home...

Many delightful reunions took place this week with families and loved ones together for the Christmas season which was so happily celebrated here amid sunshine and good wishes.

The Duchess of Gloucester had a happy birthday quietly enjoyed with her immediate family on Christmas Day.

Master William H. Hurdidge, who is attending Trinity College School, Port Hope, is spending the Christmas holidays with his aunt, Mrs. I. R. McLachlin in Ottawa.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Howard of Sherbrooke, Quebec, arrived last evening to spend New Year's with Mrs. Howard's parents, Mayor B. Roy H. Man and Mrs. Holman.

Miss Edith Ings, who is on military duty in Halifax, is home on a month's leave, the guest of her father, Col. A. E. Ings.

Mrs. O. C. Craswell who has been ill for several weeks, is now making a good recovery and it is hoped she will soon enjoy her usual good health.

Mrs. J. S. Jenkins has returned to Ottawa from New York, to join her husband, Col. Jenkins, at the Roxborough.

Mr. and Mrs. Alan MacMillan are leaving this afternoon by Trans-Canada Airways on their way to Montreal having arrived Tuesday to spend Christmas in this city with their parents.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Hyndman have their son Mr. Charles Hyndman home from Queens University Kingston, Ont., for the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Brodie of Montreal arrived Christmas eve on their annual visit to their daughter, Mrs. Lantz and Dr. J. P. Lantz, Brighton Road.

Senator J. E. Sinclair, Emerald, was receiving the congratulations of his friends Tuesday on the occasion of his 61st birthday.

Mr. Harvey Thorne left by plane Tuesday to spend the holiday season with his wife and family in Halifax.

Mrs. W. E. Hyndman is being welcomed home from Three Rivers, Quebec, accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Dabson whose husband is on military duty with the R.C.A.F.

Miss Annie Watson is the guest of relatives and friends in Summerside this week.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. B. Longworth, and Miss Nora Longworth, spent Christmas in Halifax with Comd. G. H. Buntain and Mrs. Buntain, whose little son was visited for the first time by his grandparents.

Miss Beryl DeBolis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Noel DeBolis, left yesterday for Montreal to join her friend, Miss Lois Neill on a skiing party up North for the New Year festivities.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Scott and young daughter, Janet, spent Christmas at the Charlottetown. Mr. Scott was recalled to Halifax Thursday morning but Mrs. Scott remained over to be with her father who is seriously ill.

Mr. and Mrs. John Howatt, East Royalty celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary on Christmas Day at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Gordon Macmunn of Cornwall, four generations being represented. Fifty years ago on Christmas Day they were married in Tryon Methodist Church now the Tryon United Church. Their many friends in Tryon where they lived almost all of their married life sent them letters of congratulations and best wishes.

Miss Linnie Aitken left Monday for her brother, Rev. Melville Aitken and Mrs. Aitken in Edmundston, N. M.

Miss Armitage of Halifax is the house guest for the Christmas season of Rev. A. LeDrew Gardner and Mrs. Gardner at St. Paul's Rectory.

Miss Thelma Peppin who has just completed her nursing studies in Hotel Dieu Hospital Kingston, Ont., is home for a holiday visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Peppin, Upper Prince Street.

Miss Constance Thorne and Miss Betty Gilbert entertained jointly at a delightfully arranged novelty shower at Miss Gilbert's home, Lewin Residential Park, West Saint John, on a recent evening in honor of Miss Catherine Ramsay, a bride-elect who has a host of friends in Charlottetown. During the evening refreshments were served when the table was covered with a handsome lace cloth, and adorned with a Christmas centerpiece of holly and red candles in silver candlesticks. Mrs. F. H. Ramsay, mother of the honor guest presided over the tea cups. Miss Ramsay was made the recipient of many dainty gifts by her friends.

The Emma Jettie Club of Southport were the guests of Miss Eva Beer for their bridge game on Thursday evening and as they are indefatigable Orphanage and Red Cross workers, they played under the shadow of the handsome Orphanage Christmas tree with exceptionally good scores. One member, in Southport for the holiday, sent her regrets in verse which caused much laughter at the dainty midnight supper was served.

Crown Prince Olaf and Princess Martha of Norway sat down to a typical American Christmas dinner in Washington on Wednesday and ate turkey cured by their host, President Roosevelt. The royal refugees and their three children—Harold, three, Randolph, 10, and Astor, eight—last minute guests at the White House. Princess Martha and the youngsters have been living on a nearby Maryland estate since they came to this country after the German invasion of their homeland. UNDER PRESSURE

By GEORGE AGNEW CHAMBERLAIN

George Agnew Chamberlain WNU Service

He proceeded to call up the needs of the three banks in town, leaving Mr. Bradley, known to have been Cutler Sewell's good friend to the last.

"The first two made no bones about answering since their information was in the hands of the bank, they had paid out no money as a loan or otherwise to Joyce Sewell. But when it came to the president of the City National, the reply was decidedly evasive.

"Let me get this straight, he said," said Mr. Bradley after a pause. "Have you taken out papers as Miss Joyce Sewell's guardian?"

"No," said Blackadder, controlling his temper with difficulty, "but her attorney, Mr. Bradley after a pause, said, 'I'll take your word for it. Now just what is it you want to know, Heim?'"

"Did you or anybody else in your organization loan or give any funds to Joyce Sewell?"

"The answer is no, he said," declared Mr. Bradley after a pause. "Blackadder turned round on the telephone with a scowl. 'Bradley knows where Joyce got the money,' he announced. 'He's a liar, but he didn't give or loan it to her, but he knows where she got it and he won't tell.'

Never since college days had Blackadder bowed to authority. But he was now momentarily confused, conscious he had just made a major capitulation. What did it matter how it had come about? Without the fuss and the fuss of former days, he and Irma Sewell were headed for the altar.

Realization brought him no regret, but as no one else was present, he and Irma Sewell were headed for the altar. By nine o'clock that night Blackadder was in Washington and by eleven the next morning, arriving in Halifax with a telegram money order, he succeeded in reaching the secretary of state.

The secretary knew nothing of Cutler Sewell or La Barranca but he had read plenty about Joyce. As a consequence he succumbed to Dirlik's action with the result that a few hours later, just as Dirk Van Suitart had finished changing into polo togs, a messenger arrived summoning him to the embassy.

"Sorry to break up your game, Dirk," was the ambassador's greeting. "You're in charge of the rat code, aren't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Cast your eye over that," said the ambassador, tossing him a flimsy. "I haven't seen a code message for so long I was beginning to think they were abolished. Do your best and bring me the reading as soon as it's done."

It was almost a week before Van Suitart, his face drawn either from exhaustion or anxiety, reappeared. "Here you are."

Dirk cleared his throat before obeying. "Confidential Miss Joyce Dewey, department of state, has eight nine six seven two five three reported in Mexico City stop at request of her prospective husband, Mr. E. B. Blackadder of Elm-sinboro New York who will meet all expenses you are instructed to locate her with the necessary murmur and every attention including provision of funds and guard without annoying her pending his arrival."

"Quite a mouthful," murmured the ambassador. "What do you think I am—a runshoe expert?" He frowned. "By the way, isn't that the first time you've been talking about for the last three nights?"

"The radio!" exclaimed Dirk, startled. "I don't know, sir. I haven't a radio."

"One of those kidnaping scares," explained the ambassador. "Excuse me, sir. May I express an opinion?"

"Certainly, if you're sure you have one."

"I believe we can crack that bubble in no time," said Dirk. "Miss Sewell was at the chancellery five days ago, I know that because she was in the office of people she's going about with."

"Good boy!" exclaimed the ambassador. "Dirk, you've bought something. Get out and go to work. Take a holiday. I leave the entire matter in your hands."

CHAPTER VI

Dirk climbed into his sports roadster and drove to the hotel Joyce had given as her address. He found the car parked within half an hour of leaving the chancellery. There was no information as to whence she had come or where she had gone.

The face of the woman who had been with her at El Tenebroso was unforgettable, but unfortunately he had failed to establish her identity at the time. General Onelia he knew, officially as well as by sight and reputation, and his address from the telephone directory he drove to his residence and succeeded in penetrating to the party where he was to wait. Presently he heard the car of the general's voice.

"Say I'm not at home. Say I'm out."

Dirk sat down on the bench between two young soldiers and lit a cigarette. When the messenger came back he looked up at him smilingly and spoke loudly in fair Spanish. "I mean, the general is under a misapprehension. If my business were official I would of course have called on him by appointment at the war office. But it isn't. It's personal, as between one gentleman and another. I shall sit here until he sees me unless he wishes to assume the responsibility of having me thrown out."

Onelia came stumbling around the radio of the radio. "We have then, someone, what is it—as one gentleman to another?"

Dorothy Dix Says

PURPOSELESS CHILDREN BANE OF EVERY FAMILY

Drastic Remedies Are Often Necessary To Force Young Men And Women Out Into World To Make Their Own Living

Dear Dorothy Dix—I married a widower with three nearly grown children. I was good to them and they love me. So well that they are not willing to leave Mother and her cooking. The two girls married soon after leaving college and they chose fine, sensible, well-educated young men, but it was not easy to get them out of the house? I should say not. They never would have gone if I had not kept moving into smaller and smaller apartments. Because they can't come home, where there is no room for them, they have settled down to a solitary routine of cooking and house-keeping and baby-rearing. Now the problem is the boy. He is now 21. Won't go to school. Won't take the slightest physical or mental exertion. Sits at home and does nothing but play solitaire and read newspapers and detective stories and smokes. How can I get him out of the nest in a manner beneficial to him? MRS. R. J. H.

Answer—Get the boy a job and tell him that henceforth he is his own meat ticket and that if he is not willing to work, then go to live for the time being in one room in a hotel so there will be no place for him. Evidently he is one of the birds that will never leave the warm home nest of his own accord. He will not only have to be pushed out of it, but you also will have to destroy the nest so he cannot return to it.

There is no problem that parents have to face that is more difficult than that of what to do with their lazy, purposeless children who grow up on mother and father to be supported, and who refuse to make the slightest effort to provide for themselves.

It is a problem so complicated with a false idea of parental duty, and so mixed up with manifold emotion, that most fathers and mothers lack the nerve and backbone to solve it in the only rational way, which is by turning the youngsters out on their own and locking the door behind them.

Apply Drastic Remedy But few parents have the hardihood to apply such a drastic remedy, although they know it is the only cure. They can't bear to think that Mamma may be having to cook a poor meal over a gas jet, or that she may have no nice, comfortable bed to sleep in. So they let Mamma and Sammy sit around idle for days, until they are so fed up and play cool or pool or follow some sort of temperamental occupation which brings in no pay envelope.

All of us know dozens of cases like these. We know plenty of homes in which there are husky young men and women who are energetic in amusing themselves, who positively refuse to leave home long years after they should have been out of it and about their own business.

Sometimes they stay until they are old birds themselves, and finally they are forced to scratch around and feed them as long as they live, and they die wondering what will become of poor, middle-aged Mamma and Sammy.

Teach Self-Reliance This tenderness on the parents' part that encourages normally healthy and sensible children in a perpetual babyhood does as much harm as any other one thing in the world. It ruins its thousands of men and women who should be breadwinners instead of coddled, and who only need some compelling necessity to make them do their duty in the world.

It is the knowledge that there is always home to slip in and that square meals a day that is responsible for nine-tenths of the no-account loafers that cumber the earth.

It is the boys and girls who know that they can always go back home and be taken care of who are the quitters and shirkers, who throw up a job the first time they get a hard seeding and there are disagreeable boys to be contended with.

Why Boys Succeed

See you out to success. So the parents who are afflicted with parasite children who refuse to take an education or hold on to a job do their youngsters the greatest kindness they can possibly perform when they follow the example of the birds and push them out of their home nest and make them try their own wings.

WHEN LIFE LETS HERSELF SLUMP

Dear Miss Dix—Three years ago I married a very intelligent, high-looking girl who held an important position and was admired by every one who knew her. Now that she has married and does not go to business, she has slumped. So I read a book. "Pays no attention to the government or large organizations, lawyers, educators, builders are especially favored this generous day. Romance rates, too."

Answer— I should think that she would brace up and get busy trying to do the things she is capable of. You mean to leave her unless she begins cutting back once more.

Another lover of warmth and sun is the Christmas cactus, but best to give your rosy-blossomed azalea a coolish spot.

Then, with a little care during their rest seasons, a spell in your garden, all three plants will bloom again for your next year.

But don't forget plants you can still enjoy this winter. For instance, amaryllis will bloom gorgeously when you know its ways, fragrant narcissus will flower in a few weeks from bulbs started in January. And there are always foliage plants to cheer your rooms with their greenery.

Is your home as lovely as plants can make it? Our 32-page booklet helps you raise foliage and flowering plants, bulbs, vines and ferns. It shows you how to pot, water and rest your plants—also how to grow plants, bulbs in water.

THE COOK'S CORNER

VANILLA CARAMELS

1 cup white sugar 1 cup light corn syrup 1-2 teaspoon salt 1 cup light cream 1-2 teaspoons butter 1 teaspoon vanilla 3-4 cup chopped nuts

METHOD: Place the sugar, corn syrup, cream, butter and salt in a saucepan over low heat and stir this until the sugar is dissolved. Now increase the heat and cook, stirring from the bottom occasionally to prevent sticking. Cook until it reaches the firm ball stage when tested in cold water or until it reaches 240 to 250 deg. F. on a candy thermometer. Remove from the heat and add the vanilla and the nuts. Pour into a lightly greased pan and allow to become cool. Now cut into squares and wrap these immediately in small pieces of wax paper.

CHOCOLATE FUDGE 3 cups sugar 3-4 cup milk 2 squares (2 oz.) unsweetened chocolate 2 tablespoons corn syrup 2 tablespoons butter 1-2 teaspoon vanilla 1 cup walnuts

METHOD: Combine the sugar, milk, and corn syrup in a pan. Then add the unsweetened chocolate, which has been finely grated. Heat to the boiling point, stirring constantly, until both the sugar and the chocolate are thoroughly dissolved. Then boil fairly rapidly, stirring up from the bottom only occasionally to make sure that it isn't sticking to the pan. Cook the mixture until it reaches the soft stage on 236 deg. F. on a candy thermometer.

Remove from the fire when sufficiently cooked, and add the butter and the vanilla. Then allow the candy to cool until it is only lukewarm. Now tilt the pan and pour the mixture into a greased pan. When the candy has become thoroughly cold, cut into squares and remove from the pans when it is thoroughly set.

Activities of a lighter nature take second place in importance. JANUARY 22 to FEBRUARY 20 (Aquarius) — Your stars are unusually favorable today. You can easily top past efforts in business and other essential matters. A well-planned program will expedite work and yield some time for recreation.

FEBRUARY 21 to MARCH 20 (Pisces) — All that is favorable for Aquarians, Capricornians and Librans is likewise on your sponsored list this benefic day. You can accomplish in great measure and be happy in the effort.

A CHILD BORN ON THIS DAY will be sparklingly intelligent. A powerful personality, skillful with his hands (especially in building, mechanics). This individual will require tender care from rearing because it can be too sensitive and stubborn unless directed otherwise. A bright future, with God's help, awaits it.

Keep Plants Blooming With This Simple Care

Have Home Cheery All Winter

Glorious red poinsettias—don't let them die! Like other beauties of the season, they'll flower for weeks with very little care.

Just keep your poinsettia in a warmish room, say 70 degrees during the day and 65 degrees at night. Protect from drafts and give about two drinks a day of water of room temperature. But don't let the soil get soggy! Your poinsettia will appreciate, too, a daily syringing.

Another lover of warmth and sun is the Christmas cactus, but best to give your rosy-blossomed azalea a coolish spot.

Then, with a little care during their rest seasons, a spell in your garden, all three plants will bloom again for your next year.

But don't forget plants you can still enjoy this winter. For instance, amaryllis will bloom gorgeously when you know its ways, fragrant narcissus will flower in a few weeks from bulbs started in January. And there are always foliage plants to cheer your rooms with their greenery.

The Woman's Realm

A child's kiss, Set on thy sighing lips, shall make thee glad; A poor man served by thee shall make thee rich; A sick man helped by thee shall make thee strong; These shall be served thyself by every sense Of service which thou renderest. —Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

Every duty that is hidden to wait comes back with seven fresh duties at its back. — Kingsley.

Leaky Gutters MAY CAUSE MUCH DAMAGE Leaky and corroded gutters and downspouts often cause serious building damage. They may result in ruined and unsightly walls and ceilings as well as cause considerable deterioration of exterior materials.

Experienced workmen can easily and quickly repair or install new flashing over door and window openings and roof intersections and around the chimney, pipe vents and other openings and projections. At the same time they can clean gutters and downspouts of dirt and litter and repair them or install new ones if necessary.

Education Needed Education of the public is necessary for the control of cancer. Every one should know the early symptoms of cancer and when these are indicated, medical advice should be sought immediately. It is wise to know the truth, and knowing that cancer exists, do not hesitate to take such treatment as is advised by your physician.

In ancient times a king's glove was a guarantee of safe conduct through his realm.

THE SNEEZE AND THE WHEEZE I shot a sneeze into the air, It fell to earth, I know not where; But a long after, I am told That twenty others had my cold.

Those twenty others sneezed a sneeze Or coughed a cough or wheezed a wheeze, Until the whole town, young and old, Had been laid up with my cold.

COOLING THE EARTH The earth is cooling off, but heat is not being lost through the solid crust. Hot springs, geysers, and volcanoes are responsible for the cooling, geologists say.
