Dear Katie,
We your friends thought it an opportune time to gather together then flap it over. Loosen the other side in the same way. If you attempt, rough-shod, to turn the pancake, you will make a mess of it. The pancake baked on the aluminum griddle is more fit for the stomach than the grease-soaked, usual flap-jack. It is also more dry and needs more butter and syrup to make it satisfactory. Remember, whenever the griddle gets mussy in the baking process, you can clean it easily with the salt rubbed on with a tough paper.

THE MODERN HOME

Poets are prone to laud the old fashioned home, and because we hear so much about it, we are likely to think the homes of other days were better than those of today. However well those homes of yesterday might have served their own generation, they would not be sufficient today.

What we need in this age is the home adjusted to the needs of the present. It must have better facilities for personal cleanliness, since the moderns could not go back to tubless days. It must be better equipped for efficient, in this strenuous age. It must provide modern agencies of entertainment and intelligence, else its occupants would be away behind the times. In short it must meet modern needs as the old-fashioned home could not do.

One special need of the modern home—and a strong point of the homes of our ancestors—is spiritual influence. In this day, the members of the family are so much abroad, they are constantly played upon by the evil influence of the outside, and the home should be especially equipped to hold them to the higher ideals of life.
