

DAILY SELECTIONS FOR GUARDIAN READERS

Furnished by W. S. Louson.

DON'T RUSH THINGS.

We are saturated with the desire for rush and speed, and we place laurels upon the brows of men who respond to this immature desire on our part. A constructor's advertisement boasts that he has put up a mammoth building in three hundred days; a locomotive concerns glories in the achievement of building ten locomotives a day; automobile advertisements fairly groan with the capacity of their factories and the speed of their cars—how fast it can go determines the merit of an automobile for us; we insist upon twenty-four hour trains from New York to Chicago, and five-day steamers across the Atlantic. If we plan to go abroad the first question is: "How long will it take to see France?" If we decide to build a house the leading question is: "How long will it take to finish it?" "for quick effect." If we decide to send a boy to college, even, the first question is: "How many years will it take him to get through?" It is always how fast, how quick, but never how thorough! The result, of course, are inevitable and visible on every hand; early repairs and greater cost in the long run. We read with horror of disasters to the trains which we insist shall be speedy; we gasp when the Titanic goes down with hundreds of souls, and then calmly blame the captain because he was striving for the record which he would have applauded had he brought his vessel safely through. It is all the fault of immaturity: of it is young country. But how long are we going to remain young? This lack of thoroughness is no less the basic fault in our public-school system. We jam our children through, and turn out young men and young women who cannot spell correctly, speak grammatically or write a good letter. What should be the cardinal virtue of a people is our cardinal fault.

To Grow Hair on A Bald Head

By a Specialist.

Thousands of people suffer from baldness and falling hair, who have tried nearly every advertised hair tonic, and hair-grower without results, have resigned themselves to baldness and its attendant discomfort. Yet their case is not hopeless; the following simple home prescription has made hair grow after years of baldness, and is also unequalled for restoring hair to its original color, stopping hair from falling out, and destroying the dandruff germ. It will not make the hair greasy, and can be put up by any druggist: Bay Rum, 6 ounces; Lavona de Compose, 2 ounces; Menthol Crystals, one-half dram. If you wish it perfumed, add half to one teaspoonful of To-Kalon Perfume, which unites perfectly with the other ingredients. This preparation is highly recommended by physicians and specialists, and is absolutely harmless, as it contains none of the poisonous wood alcohol so frequently found in hair tonics.

FUNNIOSITIES

A Big Waist!

In Water street the other day a two-horse dray was passing with a load of bags of flour, one of which had burst and was distributing its contents liberally along the street. A man watching from the pavement remarked to his companion, "What a big waste!" A very stout lady, standing near by, took the remark as personal, and retorted indignantly, "Mind your own business!"

Appearances Are Deceiving.

The youngster was in a hurry, and of course the boot lace would not draw, so with an extra tug, and an extra pull, the lace snapped, his hat flew up, his mouth intercepted, and to add insult to injury, people say some other fellow's hat did the damage.

The Point of View.

At one of our city schools a few days ago a teacher was explaining to the class the meaning of culpable homicide. "If I were out in a small boat," he said, "and the owner knew it was leaking and I got drowned, what would that be?"

After a few minutes silence, a little boy stood up and said: "A holiday, sir!"

The Militiaman and His Duty.

As a brave Artilleryman of this city was on his way home from drill the other night he saw a thick cloud of smoke coming from a yard in the street ahead. "Visions of a dreadful conflagration arose in his brain, and he promptly dashed towards the spot, determined to do credit to the uniform he wore. But he could see no signs of the fire he expected to find. Still he was bent on investigating, against the advice of a companion.

"I wear the King's uniform," said he, with as much pride as he could muster, and attempting to swell a non-existent chest, "and I would not be discharging my duty if I did not probe this matter to my satisfaction." But he thought better of the matter when his companion retorted by pointing out that the breach of the regulations he was then committing—riding his bicycle without a light—was hardly in keeping with the sentiments he had so loudly expressed.

Letting Him Have It.

In a local hotel the other day a would-be humorist called loudly to a friend who was in the act of leaving the room, and then whispered to him:—"How far would you have got if I had not called you back?"

The other straightening himself up replied in a tone loud enough for all to hear: "No, sir! I won't lend you ten dollars. I haven't got it on me, and if I had, I wouldn't let you have it until you paid us what you borrowed two months ago."

His friend will never call him back again.

The Real Reason.

The milk boy was late, and moreover the milk was a good deal less than the proper quantity. The reply to the indignant housekeeper's queries took the form of a suggestion that not only was her clock hours too fast, but also that her standard of measurement was hopeless. So she had to put that in her pipe and smoke it. Which would hardly have been the case had she been the spectator of an interesting little incident that had occurred in Kent street not many hours before in which the delivery boy in question played an important part. The milk can was on the pavement, left very much to its own devices, while the boy was in the thick of a wrestling match with two or three companions. A kicking limb was thrust out of a bundle of mixed up humanity, the milk can was in the way, there was a sharp contact between the foot and the can; by the laws of nature the lesser force suffered, the top of the can came off, and the earth received some rich irrigation in the shape of a liberal flow of the delicious white milk.

"How the Yankees Do It." A youth who went to New York and speedily returned to the land of his birth got a job in a Georgetown shop. He soon made himself very objectionable to his fellow-clerks by constantly remarking, "Oh, that's how they say it in America," or "Oh, that's how the Yankees do it." One day the boss gave him a column of figures to total up and the youth went wrong in his arithmetic. Calling him to his desk, the boss inquired, "Is this how they do it in America?" The incident has got known to the other clerks, and they have so worried their colleague about it that it is understood that he contemplates looking out a new place of employment.

Served Him Right.

A love-sick individual of this city confided to a friend on Saturday the fact that he was in love with a girl who works in a large establishment in Charlottetown; that his intentions were honorable and so on, but, and here was the hitch—Could his friend advise him as to the young lady's antecedents? Was she modest? Did she possess a nice mother? Was her brother above reproach? That his friend sent him to a hot place where the wicked never cease from troubling need cause no surprise.

Where Shall I Invest My Money?

One of the first things a man thinks of in this world, is, how to get rich, how to provide for independence. Men who are born rich and have wealth left them do not find it hard to answer this question.

They Invest Their Money

Some in business, some in real estate, some in stocks and bonds.

BUT

The majority of the public were not born rich and have only their small savings to invest. It is not possible to invest in business, stocks and bonds which pay a large dividend are prohibitive in price. The banks don't pay anything worth while.
