You can't have HEALTHY TEETH in UNHEALTHY GUMS

EVERYONE knows about pyorrhea. But it is often regarded as a distant danger which may come at 40 or older. The trouble is you may have it now and not recognize it. Five or ten years may pass before a single tooth goes. Then how long will you keep the remainder?

Don't let pyorrhea get you. You can't have healthy teeth for long in unhealthy gums. Give your dentist a chance to prevent pyorrhea—see him twice a year. Keep your teeth clean and shining—but consider the gums too. Forhan's Toothpaste does both halves of the job.

DIVINE DISCONTENT

By Anne M. Robinson
How blessed is dissatisfaction,
Urging my slow thoughts to run
Beyond the snare of this inaction
Dull content has spun.

Urging onward, upward, questing
After That I may not name;
Rising step by step and lifting
Mortal weakness in the flame.

On and on to new horizons,
Visioning one vast desire
For life's glorious diaphanous—
Beauty's star-reach, Heaven's choir.

"LITTLE WOMEN" FROCKS

Louisa M. Alcott, 50 years after her death, has set a new line in fashion, since the success of the film of "Little Women" it is said to have inspired mid-Victorian frocks. Tight bodices, light elbow sleeves, and a skirt shirred at the waist and hanging in stiff folds to sweep the ground all round—this surely copies the dresses of one's Victorian grand-mamma?

AN OLD-WORLD NAME

such old-time favorite names as Penelope and Caroline have recently seen a revival. No great preference has been evidenced for the old-fashioned name Joanna.

Joanna has now been chosen by Captain and Mrs. S. S. Bonham Carter as one of the names which their infant daughter will bear.

Ever is the other name bestowed upon the baby.

VELVET HATS FOR AUTUMN

Fashionable women will go through the autumn crowned with velvet, if fashion experts are to be believed. Enormous berets of velvet nearly a yard across, are being ordered by leading fashion houses.

This same material will fashion formal evening gowns, bags and shoes, for the latter new velvet will be used. British products which will be seen a great deal at the Paris opening next month.

PETICOATS AGAIN

Peticoats will rustle gaily next winter. Not the infinitesimal scraps of silk and lace that women of today know as petticoats. These will be long and ample, rivaling in the amount of material the red flannel contraptions our great-grandmothers wore. The rustle will come from the taffeta that will be used for making the 1934-35 petticoat. It will be lace-trimmed, too. Slashed skirts of hobble-tightness will give onlookers an enchanting glimpse of this undergarment. I wonder what women will think of this?

FOLLOWING FATHER

The Earl of Macduff, the only son of Prince and Princess Arthur of Connaught, is becoming an off-cadet—in the Royal Scots Greys. The Earl, who is a good horseman, was twenty on August 9. Prince Arthur is Colonel-in-Chief of the Royal Scots Greys, and was an active regimental officer until 1919, when he undertook the command of the regiment in South Africa. It is understood that the Earl of Macduff will obtain leave from his regimental duties to attend the Royal Braemar Gathering.

FINEST ORGAN IN THE WORLD

It is claimed for the organ which has now been rebuilt for the Albert Hall, London, that it is the finest of its class in the world. The rebuilding of the old instrument began eleven years ago, has been carried out on the most lavish scale.

COLLECTING OF BUTTERFLIES

The collecting of butterflies and moths is an absorbing hobby. Of all insects these are, by their distinctive coloration, both the easiest to name by the amateur and the most attractive in collective appearances. The equipment necessary need not be expensive. A sharp knife and a pocket lens are indispensable, while a glass slide is often handy on which to place some small specimen for examination through the lens.

When a specimen is caught, it should be transferred immediately into a wide mouthed jar so that specimens can be removed easily. The jar must be tight fitting. There are many killing agents in use, and

HER REAL NEED

An elderly negress had sustained injuries in an accident and the claim agent was having difficulty in getting her to come around to his way of thinking in the matter of a settlement. "Surely, Mandy," he said soothingly, "you wouldn't think of suing us for damages, after what I have offered you?" "Damages, white man!" she replied scornfully. "Ah already gotten moh damages than Ah wants. What Ah craves now is repairs."

SURE, LET'S GO!

She was watching the troops practising musketry. A volley rang out. With a cry of fright the sweet, young thing fell back into the arms of a soldier. She recovered quickly. "Oh," she exclaimed, "I beg your pardon." "Don't mention it, Miss," replied the gallant fellow. "Let's take a walk over an' watch the artillery."

several excellent types of bottles on the market. In all cases a close-fitting perforated stopper should be fitted to the bottle to keep captures from actual contact with the killing agent.

On the return from an expedition, captures should be removed from the killing bottle and stretched on a stretching board. This is best made of soft wood, and should be cut into a rectangular shape of convenient size. Down the centre a narrow groove should be run. When stretching, lay the insect on the board with its abdomen along the groove. The fore wing should be brought in front of the hind wings, and flaps of paper pinned over them to keep them flat.

THE CAMERON CLAN

Camerons all over the world will be interested in the call for a revival in modern form of the glories of the clan spirit, issued by a London Scot, Captain Evan P. Cameron, commander of the Oriental liner Orana. The captain Cameron would have all bearers of this Highland name enrolled as paying members of the clan duly certified by Lochiel himself, the subscriptions to go to the Cameron Societies in London. He envisages a world-wide union of Camerons for mutual pledged benefits. Their chief and looking to Achnacary as their gathering place.

No. They idle and loaf, and demand to be sent to college and to have fine clothes, and they let the poor old work horses toil on, and they feel themselves terribly ill-used because Sam and Susan don't make more money.

Why, I know one man who supported a pack of relatives for twenty years, and when he finally told them that they would have to look out for themselves because he was going to get married, they were perfectly outraged.

There's No Reward For the Generous! Bewails Ingratitude Of Those Helped

Virtue is its Own Penalty, Cries Dorothy Dix; You do a Favor for a Friend and the Next One He Asks for is Twice as Large—You Ask Your Relatives on a Visit and They Stay a Lifetime!

The reason there are not more kind, generous, sympathetic people in the world is because you can't be kind, generous and sympathetic to anybody once, and then be done with it. You have to make a continuous performance of it. The minute you begin to help an individual he gets out his marking iron and brands you as his goat. Lend your automobile to a friend one time, and ever after he feels privileged to use it when he wants it, and he soon considers that you are imposing upon him when you use the car yourself.

Donate $50 to a charity, and they assess you a hundred dollars for it the next time they make up their budget.

It is things like these that turn the milk of human kindness in our breasts into ice cream, and that makes us dare not extend a helping hand to those in trouble for fear they will turn into old men of the sea who will climb on our backs and of whom we cannot rid ourselves.

It would seem that gratitude would make those to whom we have been kind show their appreciation by forbearing to trouble us further and make them mark some other individual for their victim the next time they were staging a hold-up. Not at all, however. Not at all so. The very fact that we have shown ourselves easy marks makes us their perpetual target.

You pay a poor widow's rent for her for a few months. She doesn't say, "Mr. A has been so kind and generous to me that I will not impose upon his liberality any farther. I will hustle around and try to get the money myself, and, if I can't, I will ask somebody else to help me out."

Oh, no. Having once paid her rent, the poor widow not only expects you to do it until the end of the chapter, but soon begins to complain because the house isn't in a better neighborhood, and has not pink bathtubs.

There is no truer saying than that if you lend a friend money you lose your friend and your money to it, and that is what makes many of us who would like to help a friend over a hard place snap about the padlock on our pocketbooks.

For well we know that when the time comes to pay John won't think how good and kind we were to lend him the money. He will think what shynocks we are to make him return it. And with interests, too!

In fact, lending is so often a boomerang that flies back and annihilates the poor, kind-hearted sinner of a lender, who was trying to help out some needy individual, that it is no longer indulged in by prudent people. Only the other day a friend of mine said to me: "I know a poor young couple of newweds who are just starting to keep house. They have scarcely a stick of furniture, and I would just love to lend them enough to make them comfortable, but I dare not do it because I tried that once, and it made me mortal enemies."

"I was going to Europe and I lent a friend who had no furniture all of my old mahogany and my Oriental rugs. She used them for three years, and when I came home and took back my things instead of appreciating what I had done for her she reproached me with having stripped her house and left it bare, and to this day she feels that I have robbed and defrauded her, and she has never forgiven me for it."

It is the same way about taking anybody into your house. If you live in the South, you can't ask poor old Aunt Sally, who has a weak throat, to come and spend the Winter with you in a mild climate. She won't thank you for giving her a nice Winter and go north with the birds in the Spring. She is camped in your spare bedroom for the balance of her life.

If you live in a city you dare not ask your country cousins to come and make you a little visit at a certain specified time because if once they get their feet in the door you will do nothing thereafter but run a free hotel. For they will descend on you bag and baggage every time they want to have their admirals out for shopping or see a new play or have a little change that won't cost them anything.

And, having once established the precedent of taking care of your family, you are sold into slavery for the balance of your days. When Father dies or turns quitter and the support of the family falls on the oldest son or daughter, do the younger children say: "We must hurry up and study hard and fit ourselves to become self-sustaining so that we can take the burden off poor, generous Sam or patient Susan?"

No. They idle and loaf, and demand to be sent to college and to have fine clothes, and they let the poor old work horses toil on, and they feel themselves terribly ill-used because Sam and Susan don't make more money.

Why, I know one man who supported a pack of relatives for twenty years, and when he finally told them that they would have to look out for themselves because he was going to get married, they were perfectly outraged.

Assyrians Going To British Guiana

(C. P. Cable)

(By Guardian's Special Wire) GEORGETOWN, British Guiana, Sept. 25—Twenty thousand Assyrians, anxious to leave Iraq because of religious persecution, may find a haven in British Guiana.

On behalf of the League of Nations, the United Kingdom government asked the British Guiana government to consider a colonization scheme for the Assyrians, and the Legislature today decided to offer to them for settlement an area called Emigres in the Hinterland.

The area selected is slightly larger than Wales. About three times the size of Jamaica. It is in the Rupununi highlands, a beautiful, healthy country including 1,100 square miles of rolling savannahs and 700 square miles of forest.

est," according to acting colonial secretary Percy King, who moved a resolution favoring the scheme in the Legislature.

Acting Governor Sir Crawford Douglas Jones said the Assyrians probably would make good agricultural settlers. The original intention of the League was to settle the Assyrians in Brazil but new lands were sought after an immigration barrier was raised in the South American Republic.

For the first 37 weeks of 1934, ending September 13, the number of hogs graded in Canada was 2,085,499. In the corresponding period of 1933, the number was 2,210,670.

Opportunity For Farmers Is Stressed

SAINT JOHN, N. B., Sept. 24.—(C.P.)—"Never had the Maritimes an opportunity so wonderful and so hopeful for the settlement of their lands by a particularly fine, tried and tested type of people."

F. H. Sclanders, commissioner of the Saint John Board of Trade, declared in a memorandum to directors of the board and officials of the province and Dominion.

Western farmers are gazing eastward with longing eyes," he said, remarking that wheat's reign as a sole crop has ended. The favorable opportunity awaiting these farmers was allied to the feasibility of getting good agriculturists from overseas to settle in the Maritime Provinces.

The natural exodus of young people from Maritime land had been augmented by the "exodus" of western Canada "when wheat was gold," and by industrial development in Canada and the United States the memorandum contained.

"We didn't even attempt to hold our rural population," Mr. Sclanders stated. "We permitted the Prairie voices to plead that our 'farm folk go West, and, without demur, we watched them go. Those who remained were permitted to form drab and depressing conclusions as to the agricultural possibilities of their own province, and glowing reports of western successes but served to accentuate the unfairly negative nature of such conclusions."

On the subject of immigration the memorandum expressed opposition to "pap-fed" settlement and stressed self-dependence as "the priceless asset of the immigrant which pap-feddling policies mostly destroy."

Immigration to New Brunswick, continued the memorandum, "should be confined to bona fide farmers with sufficient means to enable a hopeful start. If possible, or vacant farms should be expropriated by the government, listed, classified and thereafter opened for homesteading, much along the lines adopted in the West. In other words, the land should be practically given away to the right kind of immigrants possessed of sufficient money to make a hopeful start."

Farmers from Great Britain and the United States should receive a particularly warm welcome, said Mr. Sclanders. "It was to secure the advantage of British preferential tariffs that the United States branch factories established in Canada. The same inducement should apply to United States farmers—a circumstance which we appear to have overlooked."

Dealing next with population, the commissioner said: "It is not generally realized that most of our serious problems are due to our small population. Had the Maritimes a population of three millions instead of merely one, most of our problems would cease to be. With say, three million or more people, we would be able to maintain a well diversified and successful industrial life, and there would be business for our ports every day of the year. Today, New Brunswick offers the bona fide agriculturist the most attractive proposition in all the world. It offers him a market for from seven to ten million dollars worth of farm products and the "entirement" of this Dominion and brought in over long and costly rail hauls."

All agricultural produce brought into New Brunswick could be raised in this province, he said. It would first be necessary, however, to get outside markets in order to stabilize prices and avoid glutting the local market.

The memorandum expressed an opinion "That as New Brunswick paid its share of the cost of western settlement and, in addition, contributed much man-power, the time has come when she is entitled to federal aid, financial and otherwise, toward more of the right kind of people on her own lands."

COBALT, Sept. 25—Ground staked as silver claims in Cobalt's pioneer days was sold for 25 cents an acre, at an adjourned tax sale held here yesterday by W. M. Shepley, clerk of the township of Cobalt man, and acting for that municipality.

W. E. Harrison bought 40 acres of land for $10, against which Thomas Shannon owed $332.72 in arrears and costs, and T. E. McEwen paid $5 for 20 acres, held by P. H. Whelan, and against which there has accumulated $126.94.

Mr. McEwen offered $5 for a further 20 acres assessed to J. C. Walters, who owes $145.01. But County clerk William Martin, asking for the township, bid in the property for the taxes.

FRANKLY...I WANT A Schoolgirl Complexion ALL OVER

After all, who should know more about complexion care than a beauty expert? And when 20,000 of these experts say there's nothing like Palmolive for keeping a girl's skin fresh and young... why, I believe it!

I have no use for beauty claims that have no reason why! Palmolive tells me exactly why it's better for my skin... because it's made from olive and palm oils, scientifically blended. Just knowing that gives me a lot of confidence.

It's wonderful, the difference Palmolive has made in my skin! Twice each day I work that rich, velvety lather into my pores, then with warm water, then cold. And Palmolive baths keep all my skin soft, smooth and lovely!
