NEBOGATOFF'S SURRENDER CONTEMPTIBLE SPECTACLE

Says a Correspondent who was an Eye Witness of the Battle—Sights Sickening and Beyond the Power of Description—St. Petersburg Public Given some Relief by Story of Shortage of Ammunition.

LONDON, June 4.—(Special).—The Tokio correspondent of The Daily Telegraph again today sends interesting additional details of the naval battle received from Moki, Sasebo, and other points. It is stated that when Rear Admiral Nebogatoff surrendered the Russians, hoisted red flags on their masts with Russian flags below them. The crews were drawn up in parade order on the decks and some of the sailors were waving white flags.

"The whole affair," the despatch says, "was a contemptible spectacle." The correspondent of the paper who witnessed the battle says that towards sundown when the fighting was most fierce there were some sickening sights beyond power of description. St. Petersburg, June 4.—(Special).—The statement that the ammunition on board Rear Admiral Nebogatoff's ships was exhausted when he surrendered was received with some relief, this being one of the conditions under, according to the Russian naval regulations, which a commander is allowed to surrender, the other conditions being when the crew of a vessel is so depleted as to be unable to manage her and work her guns and when the ship is burned to the water's edge and about to sink.

MANILA, June 4.—(Special).—The Russian cruisers Aurora and Oleg put into port today in a damaged condition and will be given time to repair.

ALEXIEFFS WORDS WERE GIVEN IN VAIN

St. Petersburg, June 3.—In connection with Admiral Alexieff's audience of the Emperor, Wednesday, an interesting correspondence is published showing how Alexieff, beginning in January, 1904, warned his Majesty that the Japs were preparing to occupy Korea, that they had a whole fleet and army ready, constituting a grave danger for Russia, that the Japs would thereby ruin all Russia's plans and force her to centralize any eventual operation northward of Yalu River and leave Port Arthur to its fate. Alexieff also pointed out that a Japanese occupation of Korea even with small numbers of troops would place Russia in a bad strategic position, and he therefore urged mobilization in the far eastern districts, and other warlike preparation including the occupation of the mouth of the Yalu as being absolutely important. Emperor telegraphed authorizing these general preparations for war with the exception of the occupation of the mouth of the Yalu, which his Majesty considered as being undesirable except as a last resort.

In the middle of January Alexieff again warned the Emperor that owing to Japan's provocative attitude the negotiation would probably end in rupture. In view of the Japs surprise at Port Arthur the following two telegrams from the Emperor to Alexieff will be of considerable interest. Jan. 25 (Old Style).—Seeing that diplomatic relations with Japan have been broken off, you can prevent, if you consider it necessary, a Japanese descent on Korea. JAN. 26. (Old Style).—It is desirable that the Japanese not the Russians should commenced hostilities. If they begin the war you should not prevent their descent on Southern Korea or near Gensan but if their fleet with or without invasion passes the 38th parallel you have the right to attack it without waiting for the first shot. I place my trust in you. May GOD help you."
