Dorothy Dix Says—

PHILANDERING SPOUSE A CAD

Wife Should Announce Secret Marriage To Stop Mate's Playing Around

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: My girl friend is married to her boss. This is a secret unknown to the girls under him with whom she works. He is so madly in love with her that he fools around with all the other girls to make her jealous and to keep himself in a romantic mood. She sees all of this and naturally objects to it, but he refuses to stop his philandering. Worry over it is ruining her health, yet he will not give her up.

I think he is a heel. What do you think of him?

FRIEND

ANSWER: I quite agree with you that the man is the lowest type of a heel, but if your friend falls for his flimsy alibi that the reason he has affairs with other girl is to keep himself in a romantic mood for her, she must be not only the world's greatest easy mark, but lacks the backbone and the spunk that God promised a worm.

THE GREAT LOVER

Doubtless the contemptible cad considers himself a great lover and thinks he has to keep up his technique by practicing it on every girl with whom he is thrown in contact, but that is cold comfort for his wife who naturally expects him to concentrate his affections on her, and who takes no pride in his skill as a lady-killer.

The young man seems to have no reason for keeping his marriage a secret except that it leaves him freer to carry on flirtations with other young women. And what his wife should do is to call his bluff about being single, though married. Without his knowledge or consent she should announce the marriage publicly, which will probably make him furious, but will put a crimp in his romantic tendencies.

If he really loved his wife or had any sense of decency, he would not have forced her into a secret marriage. He would have been proud to have acknowledged her as his wife before everyone. He would not have put her in the position of having everyone suspect her of being one of his many mistresses.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: I am a girl of 22 and live at home with my parents. I am neither married nor engaged. My home life has always been very pleasant, but I now find myself taking world conditions very much to heart and worrying about the safety of my friends and my own future. But when I claim to have the blues my family exclaim: "What have you got to worry about? You are only 22."

Don't you think we of the younger generation have plenty to worry about? I think our concern for our future is well-founded.

S. G.

ANSWER: All of us, young and old, have plenty to worry about in these times, and we might well put in our days worrying and having the blues if it did any good. But it doesn't. Worrying gets us nowhere and having the blues only sinks us further down into the depths of despair. So why do it?

If your boy friends are in the service, worrying over their danger will not decrease it. Worrying over the possibility of being an old maid because of the lack of eligible men after the war will not bring you a husband. Worrying over the chance of losing your job when the soldiers come back looking for employment will not make you safe in it.

The truth is that nobody has the faintest idea of what conditions are going to be in the future, so there is no sense in borrowing trouble by conjuring up possible disasters that may never happen. We can only trust in God and keep our powder dry, and meet whatever comes with courage and the determination to make the best of things.

DEAR MISS DIX: We are a group of servicemen who have been in the jungles so long we feel we won't know how to act once we get back to civilization. Can you send us a refresher course on behavior?

BILL

ANSWER: Just act like the gentlemen you are. That code of behavior never changes.

CHAPTER 34

Keith Bryant was proceeding dauntlessly with his argument.

"Gentlemen you have heard the testimony. You have seen many witness on the stand and you have seen the master mind of this Nazi propaganda machine, Max Lentz, the false prophet of his false god in Berlin. He has been a busy missionary in our midst, sowing the seeds of poison in this country. He has employed this defendant as one of his minions in the office of one of our own legislators, whose slavery is paid by the American people."

"Where did the money come from that enabled this sixty-dollar a week clerk to buy and to order 625,000 reprints from the Congressional Record in less than a year?

Where did the money come from that enabled her to employ hundreds of girls to address these envelopes and send them out?

"Look at the record gentlemen. Here is the registration statement of Lentz, filed with our own Department of State revealing that he received $25,000 from one Nazi Information Bureau, alone, including reimbursements for expenses.

"That is where the money came from.

"This girl who is now on trial was not getting money out of her own pocket. She was in a big game for profit and she was in the employ of Lentz, the man who received a total of $70,000 from various Axis institutions in less than a year and a half."

Relief

That is where the money had come from for Jennes to buy fur coats, Daniel said to himself, four coats and ice-blue evening dresses and lace bedspreads and fragile crystal ornaments and strawberries in January.

That is where the money had come from for a stylized apartment with a balcony in a showy apartment house. A wave of involuntary relief of which he was instantly ashamed swept over Daniel as he realized this.

Loper began his closing argument by calling for quiet and by snarling at Keith Bryant with unprecedented animosity. His own thanks to the Court and the jury for their patience were interrupted by his call for quiet and after that he did not seem to collect himself instantly.

"Any conviction," Mr. Loper announced, "will of course mean to this lovely young lady, Miss Jeness Farman, the loss of her treasured standing in the community and the loss of the position on which she depends for her bare livelihood, disgrace and jail for herself, disgrace and deprivation for the fine family from which she comes and which is so nobly represented in this courtroom by her stricken father and mother."

As Loper pronounced his final words, he turned slowly but completely around, so that instead of facing the judge, he ended by facing Daniel and Serena. To the unhappy New Englanders th's movement of Loper's seemed to give the signal for a similar movement on the part of everyone else in the courtroom. The deep flush which came so rarely and so intensely burned Daniel's face and neck with intolerable fire.

"The court will tell you about the presumption of innocence." Mr. Loper continued. "It is important. Of course the indictment, as the court here will remind you, was only a charge. In itself it proves nothing. It is a complaint made against a man or a woman and until the very moment when you come to a conclusion in the jury room, the presumption of innocence clings to a man or a wo-

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

When we retired last night after company, that included Jamie, had gone down the lane, James said: "Ellen, don't forget to waken me early. Tomorrow is going to be a busy day." Now that it comes back to me, I was surprised and rather pained to discover certain new traits in Jamie. Not that such perverse ways are new to mankind but I confess in this age I expected something different from Jamie. It was last evening when Judy and some of the visitors in the quietness of a Sunday evening in the country, begged me to "play something." I had only begun to accompany the singers, when Jamie, who had been amusing himself by adding grace notes on the instrument, had a sudden inspiration. He dropped to the floor to hold the centre pedal, at once putting an end to all our music. My entreaties and his mother's threats were alike to Jamie. In fact they only served to make him cling more tightly. James made light of the incident. "He's a plucky young fellow" he said, admiration in every tone. His grandfather is pleased to find this characteristic in Jamie. I mean not his lack of consideration for others, but this ability to persevere until a work is completed. However I find myself wishing that Jamie's ways will lean a little more to "virtues side."

* * *

It was indeed a busy day for James. Jock was away early to haul feed from the station. Breakfast was barely over in this house when Karolyn 'phoned to say: "Jamie wishes his grandfather to take the new mare." It was the new mare, James presently hitched to a sleigh and went away in the road to Rob's. Karolyn and Rob were going to town to-day. Jamie was coming to spend the day at Alderlea. Judy swept the kitchen floor. "I'll not get a chance later" she explained, then she went at the weekly-wash. It is remarkable how quickly the articles dried when spread in to-day's sun and breeze. More than the women at Alderlea took advantage of its sunny hours. "I think everyone in town and country did their washing this morning" Karolyn said to-night. "You never saw such lines of wash." She spoke a little regretfully, thinking she had lost something in her going. But there will be other Mondays for washing. This was the best of days for a trip to the city.

* * *

Jamie came with James. He brought a box of toys, his handsled and snow-shovel, and immediately began to clear the snow from the front-verandah. I was obliged to nod encouragingly from a kitchen-window. When he tired of this entertainment, he came indoors to other interests. He divided his time between a food-grinder and an old coffee-mill. This coffee mill belongs to past generations. It was brought with other household goods, from a place near the border in the old country, by some of Jamie's forbears. It has been an unfailing source of delight to small boys through the years, and many a lad entrusted to my care has forgotten temporary partings by becoming taken up with its workings. Tear-dimmed eyes brightened, trembling lips curved upwards in a smile, when the old coffee-mill was taken from its shelf behind the stove. "Mine" ground numberless grists there. Others now grown and scattered to the four corners of the earth crushed many a mealy mixture in its grindings. To-day Jamie used it mainly for storing his feed." The ingredients for his hog-ration were first ground in the food-chopper. It began with bread. And then Judy fearing for our present limited supply fetched a turnip from the cellar. When she pared it, she nibbled at its sweetness, bite about with Jamie. Cut in pieces convenient for handling, it proved to be a happy selection, keeping him Jamie contented and busy for hours during his stay.

* * *

We took him home in the early evening. James was anxious to have at least some of their chores done before his parents returned from the city. We followed at them —Jamie and I, for I could find no other course open. We held the light, while noisy mother-pigs "leaning on the old top-rail" impatiently awaited their meal. We preceded James when he carried food or bedding to animals in the stables. We began it when the afterglow was still above the horizon. We held the lantern when the heavens were filled with stars, and planes like coloured ones unmoored took their way high above us. Once Jamie said as if to himself "What's keeping them?" It was a small boy, tired and sleepy, wishing for his parent's return.

* * *

Lights twinkled from houses where farm-folk were snug beside warm fires, their busy work over for the day, when we came out the road. Judy has gone to her diary. James is waiting for a news cast and as he waits he asks: "Could we have a cup of tea and a bite of—well—of anything?" It is a long time since James supped so.

Until tomorrow — Diary—Goodnight.

HOW CAN I!!

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I make china cement?

A. Stir from freshly slaked lime into the white of an egg until it becomes the consistency of paste. Apply this to the broken edges of the china to be mended; then let dry for three or four days. This cement may also be used on glass and marble.

Q. How can I tighten the cane seat of a chair?

A. If the seat of a cane chair sags, turn the chair upside down and soak the seat thoroughly with soapy water. When it dries it will stiffen and stretch to its original shape.

Q. How can I keep an omelet from collapsing?

A. An omelet will not collapse if a pinch of powdered sugar and a pinch of corn starch are beaten in with the yolks of the eggs.

Living & Leisure

THE WOMAN'S REALM

So let me live that I may die eagerly passing over from the entanglement of life, to the adventure of death, in eagerness turning to death as I turn to beauty to the breath, that is, of new beauty unfolding in death.

—D. H. Lawrence.

Many young birds leave their nests before they can fly, but their parents continue to bring them food and often to fight for them against their natural enemies.

White-skinned peanuts developed by selection at the Georgia Experimental Station may be ground and used for making peanut butter without the removal of the skin and hearts, which contain more vitamin B than the meat of the peanut.

HINTS ON ETIQUETTE

At an informal dinner with no maid service, food may be passed either to the right or the left. It makes no difference.

Non-flying insects used in laboratory experiments will not escape if the edges of the wood tray containing them and the feeding plants are surrounded with two narrow metal strips charged with low voltage electricity.

The superfine structure of a highly polished metal surface is studied through the electron microscope by making a plastic replica about one thousandth as thick as the Cellophane wrapper on a cigarette package.

Nylon rope used to pick up and tow glitters, behind airplanes, can stretch nearly a third without breaking.

Yellow is to be seen everywhere at Southern resorts. Sure to be popular next summer.

A pet fox kept chained to a dog kennel and fed bread and milk soon neglected this food but remained in good condition; later it was found that he used the bread and milk as bait to attract barnyard chickens, whose feathers he n.d in the kennel.

TIMELY TIPS

Not dry-cleanable— Nowadays when something terrible happens to your clothes when they are dry-cleaned . . . if they shrink skin-tight, or the seams pull out or the belt falls to pieces . . . it's a tragedy, especially since the Prices Board tells us the need for clothing conservation will be more urgent in 1945.

So avoid these when you are buying clothes:

Glued-together belts which are hard, if not impossible to clean. Fabric, leather or imitation leather pasted on buckles or backs of belts may come loose or fray in cleaning. Or softened glue or stiffening may discolour the belt.

Narrow seam allowances are no insurance against strain, so watch for generous seam allowances, especially in loosely woven crepes and other rayons, velvets and velveteens.

BABY'S CRY

When Laurence E McCann, of Indianapolis, and his buddy started into a Japanese shelter where they saw a woman with a crying infant in her arms, they were attacked by an enemy soldier. McCann's companion was cut on the hand with a saber. After the Americans ran from the shelter McCann was about to hurl a grenade when the baby cried again. "I can't do it," he said and an interpreter was summoned. Two Japanese soldiers two women and the infant were persuaded to become prisoners rather than be killed.

TUNIC COATS SPRING FAVORITES

NEW YORK—Tunic coats worn with matching suit skirts, or over a print dress or odd skirt appear now for southern wear, and promise to be one of the most important coats for spring. White coats and flower-like pastels are more numerous in tunic coats are the more conventional town colors of black, navy, and brown. Indicative of the versatile ways in which this fashion is shown are tunic coats in striped surah. Belted, these coats flare gracefully above slim dark dresses —unbelted they hand in loose folds from the shoulder, presenting a new and important coat silhouette.

Sailors are worn forward on the head. Most of them are medium-sized with rather large crowns, many with rather straight, stiff crown and brim.

GLOUCESTER, England — (CP) — Two men were killed and 11 injured in an explosion at the Rotal airscrew factory here.

LONDON — (CP) — The British Sailors' Society has presented the United Kingdom Chamber of Shipping with a copy of its specially-compiled book of prayers and Bible in a water-proof case, of the type issued to seafarers.

COOK'S CORNER

MAPLE NUT SPONGE

1¼ tablespoons gelatine
¼ cup cold water
2 egg yolks slightly beaten
1½ cups hot milk
1 cup maple syrup
¼ teaspoon salt
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten
½ teaspoon vanilla
¾ cup chopped nuts

Method: Place the cold water in a bowl and sprinkle the gelatine over it. Allow to stand for 5 minutes. Stir the hot milk into the slightly beaten egg yolks and then cook over boiling water, stirring constantly, until the mixture thickens slightly. Dissolve the gelatine in the hot custard mixture. Strain this,and then cool it.

When the mixture is cold, stir in the maple syrup and the salt, then chill, with occasional stirrings, until the mixture is the consistency of strained honey. Now beat until frothy. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites, then add the vanilla and the chopped nuts.

Pile into serving glasses that have been rinsed with cold water and chill until firm. Serve garnished with finely chopped nuts if desired.

MODERN EDIQUETTE

By Roberta Lee

Q. What is the proper way for a woman to issue invitations to several friends for a luncheon?

A. She may write at the top of her visiting card — Thursday, March 1—Luncheon at 1 o'clock. Then write R.s.v.p. in lower left-hand corner.

Q. What fee should be given to the clergyman, if a baby is to be christened at home?

A. This depends entirely upon the means of the parents; it may be $5, $10, $50, or more.

Q. Is it proper for a woman to wear a hat to an evening reception?

A. No, and regardless of whether the reception is in a home or a hotel.

How to Make Whitewash

Fill a bucket half full of lime and cover it about 2 inches with water. Let it stand 24 hours to slake, or until it is the consistency of paste. Dip out a portion of this slcaked lime into another bucket and thin with water to desired consistency. Add 1 teaspoonful bluing to ½ bucket whitewash and ½ pint salt to make it stick.

Oatmeal Soap

Oatmeal soap for the bath can be made by melting a larger bar of white soap and adding 2 cups of oatmeal and 2 teaspoons of borax. Spread out in baking tins and when cool cut into cakes.

Pumpkin Pie

Always prepare pumpkin the day before making the pies. It has a chance to drain and makes much better pies.
