JUST A GIRL

BY JANE PHELPS

ZENA QUESTIONS HERSELF.

Chapter 124
In the days and weeks which followed my talk with Jennie Wilcox I saved Mr. Betts in every way possible. And I also never failed to say something nice about Jennie when he was within hearing, even if I said it to the office boy. I had learned to like her, although we never could be intimates. She was a better educated girl than Mary, of a fairly well-to-do family in a small town near Chicago, but she had none of Mary's delightful personality, her wonderful intuition, and sense of humor that had kept me from giving up in those dark days when I first came to Chicago.

To my delight I thought I saw signs of renewed interest in her on Mr. Betts' part. One day I said something to Mr. Claxton about Jennie. He replied:
"There was a time I feared I should lose her as well as Miss Baker. Betts seemed very much impressed. I think she would make him a very good wife. She is a thoroughly good girl, and is fond of him, I am sure."

I longed to tell him what I knew of Jennie, but of course I did not. I only said:
"She is in love with him, I think. He hasn't annoyed you with his attentions lately, has he?"
The question came as a surprise. I flushed, then replied:
"No, he has not annoyed me. I did not add 'because' I would not allow him to." But I was sure Mr. Claxton sensed there had been something because he turned away, and spoke sharply:
"Please take this letter!"
These sudden changes, which occurred seldom, always rather fussed me. I didn't understand them. But I had learned that an office girl has no right to question the moods of even the most thoughtful of employers. So I picked up my pad and waited.

The letter finished, he reverted again to the subject.
"Mr. Betts hasn't tried to make love to you—Miss Stewart, has he? Please be honest with me. If he has and it is agreeable to you, that is your affair and his. But if he tries to force his attentions upon you please let me know."
"I surely will!" I looked him squarely in the eyes. I did not call Mr. Betts peculiar proposal "love-making" in any sense of the term. It had been a cold-blooded affair, and was ended for all time. There was no need to confide to him what I felt might hurt Jennie in some way! What might either cause Mr. Betts to lose his position, or be angry, and perhaps "take it out on her," as Mary always said.

"Thank you!" In his usual tone. After he left the room I wondered just why he took such an interest in me. I knew I did my work well, but so did his other employees. A hot flush spread over my face as Mary's insistent declaration that he cared for me other than as an office girl came into my mind. Could it be possible that the wealthy, cultured broker really cared for me? Yet his secretary? It was absurd. Yet the thought would not leave me. I had a slight embarrassment several times because of a certain something in Mr. Claxton's manner; but today when speaking of Betts there had been a difference. It was almost as if he were jealous of my position of simply trying to save me annoyance.

I tried to reason with myself that such a thing was impossible, and because I knew that were it so I would have to find another position I succeeded. It WAS absurd, I would think of it no more. But when I determined to be more distant when with him, not to talk of anything but business, I did not realize how the occasional little friendly chats had made my position not only bearable, but attractive. He had talked with me once in a while as the men I had known in what now seemed almost like a former existence had talked. I often felt that I had lived in one world, had died, and then come to life in another world. These chats with Mr. Claxton, and my mother's letters were all that I had to remind me of that world in which I had lived when dad was with us, and I was the petted child of a supposedly millionaire. It would be hard to give up these talks, but I mustn't let him hold me cheap; neither must I let him be so foolish as to fall in love with me.

I blushed at the thought. Then visualized Kenneth Lawrence as being in his place. Would I be so careful that he did not care for me?

Letter of Sympathy.
The following letter of sympathy has been sent to Mr. and Mrs. William H. Mayne, his sisters and Mrs. Rebecca Mayne from the members of the Summerfield Auxiliary of the Women's Mission Society:
We, the members of Summerfield Auxiliary of the W. M. S., wish to tender to you our heartfelt sympathy in this, your hour of great sorrow. We realize, as a society, we have lost one of our valued members; one who while health permitted, rarely ever was absent from our meetings. We understand in some measure the great loss you have sustained in the passing away of your dear mother, whom you looked to for council and comfort through all your lives until the present time. We commend you to our Heavenly Father who saith: "Grieve not, for all ye who are weary and heavily laden and I will give you rest."
Signed on behalf of all the members per Mrs. H. A. Stewart, Secretary.

The "MEN'S STORE" on the main floor is crammed with new arrivals for men and boys. This is comparatively speaking, the new department of this great store but it has already attained very large proportions and is growing faster every season. Men's suits and overcoats—Men's Hats and Caps—Men's Furnishings, Boys' clothing of every kind is on exhibit here.

THE FAMOUS DAYLIGHT LINEN ROOM
This is a section that, owing to some farsighted buying from 1914 on has been the best stocked linen department in the Province. Linens that even the foremost factory in the old country was unable to supply were in stock on shelves here. The opening day display was worthy of the great range carried and the aggressive policy of the department.

THE SHOWING OF SILKS AND DRESS GOODS
The lines of this department are largely the result of a careful personal searching of the markets by Mr. Drew. The new fixtures make it possible to show to good advantage the enormous stock of new silks for day and evening wear carried by this house—probably the largest range in the Province. The new dress goods and suitings are shown in great range at the front of the main store.

THE SUITS, COATS, FURS.
Mr. McLeod and Miss Foster were carefully through all the leading clothing centres, personally inspecting and choosing the new goods that are shown here in such abundance. One of the salient features of this fall's showing is the real moderation of price. For example, a wonderfully attractive line of worm coats is shown at Nineteen Dollars! The furs as always are wonderfully attractive—including samples of wolf, beaver, fox, raccoon, sable and a host of others.

Notable Showing of New Millinery and Wearables

The great MOORE & McLEOD Limited establishment was in gala attire yesterday, the occasion being the fall opening and exhibit of new millinery—wearables and so on. The four large windows were beautifully decorated for the occasion, and the department displayed a great gathering of the new things.

A STORE MADE NEW

The main floor of this great store has been really "made new" during the past few months. Wall fixtures of mahogany and plate glass—carefully planned to show the greatest possible amount of goods—and to enable the salespeople to attend to customers swiftly and efficiently, have been installed. The result has been to make this probably the finest store in P. E. Island.

MILLINERY, THE CENTRE OF INTEREST

Naturally at this season, the most interesting portion of the store is the section devoted to the new hats for women and children. Beautifully adorned with potted plants, ferns, etc. and showing in every portion samples of the new designs, this department presented a beautiful appearance. The head milliner, Miss MacLellan, spent some weeks going through the various millinery markets, particularly New York, where she gathered up probably the finest material. The result ever shown in this Province. New hats—trimmed and untrimmed—new trimming materials, new juvenile millinery vie with each other for space to present their charms.

THE DRAPERY OPENING

A scene of beauty reveals itself as one turns from the millinery department into the House Furnishings section, where Mr. Heartz and his assistants have a grand display of wall papers, chintzes, curtains, and all such furnishings as help to make home more attractive. This is a feature that no visitor should miss.

NOVEL STAGE EFFECTS Used by the Urban Stock Co. in their Opening Play Monday Night.

One of the most novel stage effects yet devised for present day drama is the final scene of "The Woman in Room 13" which comes to the Prince Edward next week. You will find from the program that the scene is taking place in a corridor of the Criminal Courts Building in New York City, but by the skillful use of scrim and shifting lights the audience is shown by flashes what is happening in both corridor and court room making a continuity that holds interest tense and leaves nothing to the imagination. It is easy to know where this bit of stage craft originated for Max Marcin who is a specialist in this line is one of the authors of "The Woman in Room 13." The situation evolved is but the final one of many that run through the play. Seats now on sale at the Theatre, secure your seats now!

Hints for the Motorist

BY ALBERT L. CLOUGH

For The Sake Of Their Tires Wheels Should Run True.
When both wheels are jacked up it is a good time to see if they run true. If the wheel itself wobbles, it is because the axle shaft is bent (in all constructions in which the wheel is keyed onto the shaft), and a new shaft is usually the best way out of this difficulty, although straightening is possible. If the demountable-rim and tire only wobble, it is probably because the rim has been improperly put on—a condition which can be set right by loosening at the lugs and partially tightening first those which are at the points of the rim that are least completely on the felloe. Then the lugs opposite these should be drawn up and the rest of them to operate first on those located at points, if any, where the rim stands out too far. When the rim runs true, a final tightening should be given all the lugs. A wheel that wobbles from any cause wears its tire tread rapidly, by scuffing it sideways and one that is not uniformly seated on the felloe is likely to squeak noticeably. While looking after wheels, it is well to jack up both front ends and see that the rims run true and that there is no more than a just perceptible "shake" of each wheel on its bearing. If there is much more than this its bearings are too loose, they will be subjected to blowlike shocks and will wear out rapidly. On the other hand, if a wheel is not free enough so that the weight of the valve stem will readily cause it to turn the bearings are too tight or lubrication is not perfect.

Questions of general interest to motorists will be answered this column, space permitting. If an immediate answer is desired, enclose self-addressed, stamped envelope. Address Albert L. Clough, care of our office.

country which has been so effective in producing these wonderful results. They have met our men in public life and have been impressed with their great grasp of national conditions, and the high order of efficient statesmanship directing Canadian affairs. And with a clear full view of all this they tell us in convincing language that the super-structure MUST BE THE WORK OF THE SAME ARCHITECTS. The Government and party which gave to us the National Policy, which constructed the Canadian Pacific Railway, whose hands are now busily creating a Mercantile Marine to connect us with the markets of the world, and under whose policy prosperity has swiftly followed our every movement, is the architect of the super-structure to whom we must entrust its completion and from the reception our young Prime Minister is receiving in all parts of Canada, and as further evidenced in the enormous plurality of votes cast for his Government in the recent bye-elections, there is little room to doubt that this is also the opinion and will be the verdict of all the people when appealed to.

ISLAND OFFICER RECRUITING FOR AERIAL SERVICE.

HALIFAX, September 21.—Lieut. H.R. Stewart, Maritime provinces secretary of the Canadian Air Force Association, was at the Charlottetown Hotel last evening, stopping off here on his way from his home in Charlottetown, P.E.I., to the Great War Veterans' Association convention at Digby.
Lieut. Stewart said he would be at the Charlottetown on Thursday of this week, after the convention, and will be glad to give everybody desiring to enroll in the new Canadian Air Force all information desired, also to enroll those ready to join.
Tremendous interest is being shown in the new training regula-

The Gamest of all Game Birds
Partridge in the east, willow grouse in the west—but correctly known as the ruffed grouse—this bird is found throughout the breadth of Canada. Three or four sub-species are found in various parts of the country—the Canada ruffed grouse in the east and Manitoba, as well as in the thickly-wooded sections of Keewatin and British Columbia, the grey ruffed grouse in the drier wooded portions of the interior and the Oregon ruffed or willow grouse of the Pacific coast.
The ruffed grouse has many enemies—feathered, furred and human—yet it survives and is one of Canada's most splendid offerings to the sportsman. Grouse should always be shot on the wing and their wariness and cunning make it necessary to select ammunition that is fast and patterns well.
DOMINION Shot Shells
with No. 6 or 7 shot, in all gauges, are considered by many sportsmen the best loads for grouse. Canuck, Regal and Sovereign Shells are dependable under all conditions, water-proofed, steel reinforced and positive as to pattern.
Many sportsmen prefer the 22 rifle for grouse when the cover is thick. In such cases Dominion 22's—short, long or long rifle, smokeless or "teasmok"—are undoubtedly the best. Look for the "D" on all boxes.
Our new game book, "The Call of Canada" with illustrations of Canadian game birds and animals reproduced in full colors, contains valuable information that will interest you. Every sportsman should have a copy of this beautiful book in his library.
