—By KIRKE L. SIMPSON. Associated Press Staff Writer. WASHINGTON, Aug. 15. (AP)—The uncertainty about the Battle of Britain, after two months of Nazi air attack culminating in a week of mass bombings of unpopulated areas, is growing back defiantly.

—The Nazi victory schedule, it is expected, will be broken by the triumphal entry into London. The time table is definitely disarranged.

—Mid-August is here. The 14th was marked by a curious lull in Nazi air attacks, after two months of mass bombings of unpopulated areas, is growing back defiantly.

—The Berlin explanation that bad weather caused the brief breathing spell, does not sound very convincing. It is not verified by any weather stories from Britain's Channel coast. Certainly flying conditions were not such as to prevent British bombers from surging across the Channel to storm in the night at Nazi bases along a hundred-mile front.

—Whatever the real reason however, the German bad weather recalls that within another six weeks or less, bad weather will be the rule in the North Sea and English Channel, not the exception.

—Must achieve, then, that Germany must achieve a victory, whether by invasion or by utterly devastating bomb attack, before then the British results of the Nazis air blitzkrieg lead up to now indicate that prospects of a quick victory have brightened for Hitler in the nearly two months the fight has raged.

—NATIVES AS GUARDS. CAPE TOWN.—(CP)—The government has decided to recruit 4,000 natives to assist in guarding vital installations and essential services within the Union. The natives have exhibited a steady patriotism and sense of duty.

Several of our male citizens received quite a thrill early Wednesday morning while waiting for transportation to their work at the St. Eleanor's Airport, when a Massachusetts auto coming up the highway from Charlottetown to catch the first boat from Borden, ran off it in flames. One of the spectators immediately halted the car with a few wild flourishes of his hat and all went to work with a will to at least save the car, a couple of grips and a duster which was lashed to the running board, and were in flames caused by what all considered a cigarette butt thrown out of the machine while it was in motion, was quickly pulled from the running board and the fire extinguished. A considerable amount of clothing etc. were badly damaged and will no doubt, have to be replaced by their owners, the car however, except for a few blisters was not damaged. The occupants who were unaware of what was taking place were loud in their thanks to the local fire-enters, for no doubt if the fire had continued considerable damage would have been done to the car. Thus it does pay to be careful when discarding cigarette butts, etc.

Greek Cruiser Torpedoed By Unidentified Sub

ATHENS, Greece, Aug. 15.—(AP)—The 2,115-ton Greek cruiser Helle was sent burning today to the bottom of the Aegean Sea—sunk, said the government, by an unidentified submarine—a few hours later telephonic communication with Rome was cut off, a strict censorship was imposed on all outgoing calls and Greek shipping was forbidden to leave port.

Premier John Metaxas, already making preparations regarded by foreign observers here as designed to set up Greek defenses against a possible Italian attack from Albania, summoned his military and naval chiefs into urgent conference.

The action in regard to shipping was taken as an indication of the seriousness with which the government views the tension of its relations with Italy. Some sources said the sinking of the Helle was an attempt to make Greece do something which would change her position of neutrality.

An unstarred number of civilians were injured on the quay at Tinos Island when two of the submarine's torpedoes exploded against it.

The Helle, small as it was, was substantially half of this pro-British kingdom's first navy; it was one of two Greek vessels which were above the destroyer category, the other being the 9,450-ton cruiser Averoff.

The vessel went down as she lay at anchor about a half mile outside the quay at Tinos Island harbor, about 100 miles southeast of Athens. A Greek communique declared that three torpedoes were fired at the Helle, one landing amidships and the others exploding on the quarterdeck.

It bounded 100 feet and broke in two, the parts falling flaming into the water. They sent up a geyser 100 feet high.

While German fighters engaged the British Hurricane and Spitfire patrols from 12,000 to 15,000 feet in the sky, the bombers crossed the coast in close formation and screamed on inland.

I saw two of the barrage balloons which guard the coast come down in flames and smoke.

Reports from other parts of the coast indicated that this was not the only hot spot today; that waves of equal strength were going over the Thames estuary to Land's End.

A town southwest of here saw British guns and fighters shoot down five out of 30 attackers in a half-hour battle in which the sky seemed to be raining cannon shells, shrapnel and machine-gun bullets.

The anti-aircraft gunners held their fire until the Nazis were in dead range; then let go with a terrific din.

Four of the planes fell into the sea just off the town jetty, and fishermen sped out to rescue the survivors, despite the tumult overhead. Another bomber staggered down, stumbled across three houses and burst into flames.

When they dug into the debris they found one of the crew of four, burned to death, in a kneeling position.

Another, fleeing, with a bullet in his head, was captured by two townsfolk in a nearby house.

This evening, there is a year of big motors high in the sky—a kite-bait, as if they are going home.

Refugee Child Is Seasoned Traveller

By GLADYS ARNOLD
Canadian Press Correspondent

LONDON, Aug. 15.—(CP)—Margaret Seagrave, a fair-haired sprig of seven, was one of the evicted members of a group of 400 children who left London for Canada under the children's overseas reception scheme. She is a seasoned traveller for her age.

"Yes, indeed, I've been to Canada twice," she said in a composed manner, when newspapermen met her before the departure. But one eye was wide to see if the proper effect of a "travellers for the first time."

"I'm a very good sailor, too, by my step-brother, Roydon—He's 14 knows nothing about travelling," Margaret said. "This is his first trip."

Uncle George and Aunt Winnie and a little cousin, Barbara, will be waiting for Margaret in Toronto but she couldn't remember Aunt Winnie's last name—It's 14 Margaret said. "This is his first trip."

At train time, Margaret was spreading invitations generously among her friends, invitations to come home with her to Auntie's if you haven't anywhere to go when you get to Canada.

Most disappointed boy in the group was Gerald Jarman, 10, of Southampton, who had expected to go to his aunt, Mrs. A. G. Carby at East Kilbride, Man. Sister Audrey, 11, could not pass the medical test at the last moment, and her mother would not let her go without the other.

"It's a blow to me," he said manfully, struggling to keep back his tears. "I've had my valise packed for two days, I mean, she just would have something the matter. But maybe it's no matter."

Green Scudder, 10, is a pianist. Until a few days before train time she was busy practicing at the piano. The Maple Leaf Forerunner was the music.

She is going to Mr. and Mrs. Davey, of Toronto, along with her small brother, Jimmie.
