MISS BROWN OF X. Y. O.

By E. Phillips Oppenheim (Copyright 1927 by E. Phillips Oppenheim)

The trades unions were to be defied, the new party—as they called themselves—of the people, were to issue the challenge and their leaders were already loud-voiced in their confident predictions of success. It was all generalization, of course, but Miss Brown wished very much that she had some one to explain the whole thing to her.

She turned to the personal column, knowing full well, however, that it was too soon to expect her message. Afterward, still searching for any mention of the tragedy of Lomberton Square, she came upon an item which she read curiously from beginning to end. It was headed: Man Found Shot in Lomberton Square

Early this morning the police constable on duty in Lomberton Square discovered the body of a man lying against the railings of the gardens, shot through the forehead. He was apparently middle-aged foreigner, without papers or any marks of identification, nor was there any trace of a weapon in the neighborhood. The body was removed to the nearest mortuary pending identification.

Miss Brown shivered a little, but passed on in her eager yet apprehensive search Square, she came at last what she had been looking for in a remote corner there was a paragraph consisting of four lines: We regret to announce the death at his residence in Lomberton Square, of Colonel Desitter, D. S. Q., the well-known traveler.

There was not another line, no obituary notice, no journalistic acknowledgment of the fact that a famous man had given his life for his country. There were long paragraphs about people of whom she had never heard. A rich tradesman's gifts to charity were expatiated upon at length, but the man who had saved his country at least two wars and given his life in the struggle to avert still greater disaster was dismissed in those two scanty lines. She threw the newspaper down indignantly.

An Imposter The woman to whom the house belonged, a shadowy sort of person, seldom seen or heard, made a hurried appearance. "A young gentleman has called twice to see you from some newspaper," she announced. "Some newspaper?" Miss Brown repeated. "The woman looked over her shoulder. "He is here again. I thought I'd let you know."

A young man with his hat in his hand stood upon the threshold and bowed. He was a very handsome-looking person indeed, and a charming stranger to Miss Brown. He wore old-fashioned, gold-tipped spectacles, carried the familiar notebook, and his manner was not only apologetic but a little nervous. "Could you favor me with five minutes' interview, Miss Brown?" he begged.

"I think that there must be some mistake," she said. The young man ventured to take a step forward. He pushed the door to behind him but did not close it. "I am sorry I have been misinformed," he began. "My people hear that you had been doing work for Colonel Desitter, who died in the night. We understand that you were there only yesterday. He was engaged, as is everywhere known, upon a book of memoirs. My editor would be greatly obliged if you would give us any information."

al we can use. We will pay you very highly indeed for any notes which Colonel Desitter may have given you during the last few days. "The Daily Dispatch, you said your paper was," she murmured, after a moment's silence. The young man inclined his head. Miss Brown took up the telephone book. A telephone was the one joint extravagance which she and her friend permitted themselves, and this cost them little, as it was taken over from a previous tenant. She turned over the pages, at last unhooking the receiver, asked for a number. "May I ask to whom you are telephoning?" the young man ventured. "I am telephoning to the office of the Daily Dispatch," Miss Brown replied. "You have no card, and I wish to be sure of your bonides before I enter into conversation with you."

He smiled. It was meant to be a pleasant smile, but somehow or other there was a sour little twist at the corners of the lips. "Don't forget my name," he begged—"Philip Jackson."

business you will either change your mind or regret it bitterly. She made no reply, content to be rid of him. He let himself out of the front door, closing it carefully behind him. She watched him thread his way among the people in the crooked little street until he disappeared in the alley. No more harmless-looking person could be imagined, yet somehow or other as she looked after him she gave a shiver. There was something about the very restraint of his manner, the morose lack of emotion in his tone, even the way he walked, which seemed to her sinister. When at last he had disappeared she went over to had disappeared at her own reflection; she hated to admit that fancies were creeping into her life. (To Be Continued.)

Quarterly Meeting Of Grand Division

The quarterly meeting of the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance was held in Springfield on January 18, 1928, with a good representation of delegates from the various subordinate Divisions. The following candidates were initiated as members of the Grand Division: Miss Irene Weeks, Fredericton; Miss Theresa Woodside, Springfield; and Reuben Large, Wilmet Valley. Much discussion ensued as to ways and means of organizing more subordinate divisions, and a campaign is now under way whereby each subordinate Division now operating is to be responsible for the organization of one or more new Divisions in the next few months. It is hoped this campaign will be productive of much good, and all loyal Temperance workers are called on to get behind the Divisions in the work they are doing.

A very enthusiastic public meeting was held in the evening despite the somewhat heavy roads and stormy evening. Springfield Division had a splendid program, which was listened to with great interest and consisted of solos, choruses, readings, etc. The address of the evening by the G. W. P. Rev. A. A. MacLeod, was worth going a long distance to hear; also the address by Rev. R. H. Stavert contained many valuable suggestions. The following resolution was read by Rev. R. H. Stavert, on behalf of Committee on Resolutions: "Resolved, that the people of Springfield be tendered our hearty vote of thanks for so ably entertaining the delegates."

"That we place on record our appreciation of the good work being done by the Temperance Alliance Bulletin, and also that we recommend that the resolution passed this afternoon to ask the Temperance Bulletin for the use of one of its columns for the purpose of bringing the work of the Sons of Temperance before the public, be adopted."

"That in view of the fact that the coming promised plebiscite is only about eighteen months away, we urge upon all of our Temperance people throughout the Island the need of being actively engaged from now on in making public sentiment so strong that never again would the advocates of Government Control attempt to introduce such a law."

"That we call upon our Government and ask them that, at the earliest possible date they secure for the public schools of our province a good book setting forth the evils of intemperance, a book of a much better type than is at present in use."

"That we call upon all of our clergymen, our public school teachers, to become leaders in carrying on a campaign of education among the people, especially among the young people of our province through the pulpits, Sunday schools, Bands of Hope, in the public schools, and in the prohibition law of our Statute Books in the near future will be a thing impossible."

Mr. Otto Doull, Chelton was a visitor to Carleton Sliding on Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Wright, North Carleton paid a flying visit to Summerside on Tuesday.

Notice to Farmers

It is our intention, providing that we are assured of work enough to make it a success financially, to put in our Mills at Wood Islands a Seed Wheat Cleaning Outfit that will remove all chaff, barley, and weed stems, as well as cockle, wild buckwheat, mouse pea, and other small seeds from the wheat. The outfit to consist of Milling Separator, Grader, and Carter Disc Separator, a combination that cannot be beat for cleaning wheat for seed. It will not injure the wheat, for there is no scouring action. We will take wheat by train from any part of the island, but will not pay freight. We will, however, pay truckage from and to the station. The charge per bushel for cleaning will be 20 cents or one bushel out of ten toll. All screenings will be returned. Farmers who are interested in having good clean seed, please drop us a card stating the amount you would send for cleaning. This is necessary so that we may know whether it would pay us to install the plant, or not. No order will be considered too small, or any wheat too dirty to make seed with this machine, providing there is no Wild Vetch in it. It will not remove the Vetch Seed, or at least not all of them.

COUGHS AND COLDS DREADED BY MOTHERS

What a weight of responsibility rests on the mother of the family during the cold weather season. In every cough and cold she seems to hear the warning of serious developments. She dreads croup, bronchitis, pneumonia and consumption and realizes that these are the natural results of neglected colds, asthma and all forms of throat. But Dr. Chase has provided a prompt relief for coughs and colds and a preventive of more serious ailments of throat and lungs, in his Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. This medicine is so well-known that only a reminder is necessary to most people to recall its effectiveness in relieving croup, bronchitis, and all forms of throat. DR.
