"OLD SCHOOL TIE" PUBLICITY COUNTS

LONDON —(CP)— Increased wages and publicity given "old school tie" schools have been given as the reasons for a 25 per cent jump in registrations for entry to Britain's large public schools.

"Politicians and others lashed out at the 'old school tie' and for the first time many parents considered public schools seriously," it was explained at a Headmasters' Conference in London. "They studied both sides- -ours and that put up by those who want state control of public schools. They decided that there is a lot to be said for the 'old school tie' after all."

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. MARTIN MULLIGAN

The death of Mrs. Martin Mulligan of Kinkora which occurred on the seventeenth of December, removes from this life one who was universally and deservedly respected for her many noble qualities of mind and heart.

Some months ago her health began to break down but she did not complain on the contrary, every feeling of pain and regret was accepted with submission to the great ruler of all. Her pleasing manner and kind disposition won for her a host of friends by whom she will be sadly missed, but most of all in the home where her kind and gentle manner was always present. Conscious to the very last her faith in the principles of her religion was strong and beautiful and afforded her great consolation, her death being one of perfect faith and sublime trust. She was the daughter of the late Ritchard Johnston and lived all her life in her native parish of Kinkora. Her husband predeceased her several years ago and left her with a large family of small children to face the troubles and hardships of this world. Through her vigilance, industry and perseverance, she had the consolation of seeing this large family grow to maturity under her tuition and companionship and then of seeing them all settled in prosperous homes of their own. Her funeral the largest seen in Kinkora for a long time was held Sunday the 19th, from her late home to the Church at Kinkora, the services in the church and at the grave were conducted by her beloved pastor Father Murphy. The profuse display of Mass Cards, wreaths and letters of sympathy bore eloquent testimony to the popularity of the deceased.

She leaves to mourn four daughters and four sons Katie, Mrs. Damien Duffy, Kinkora, Mrs. Leo Hughes, Kensington; Mrs. Jas. Burnett, U.S.A.; Marion Sister Carolinda, Minneapolis, U. S. A. A daughter Mary, Mrs. Leonard Murphy died a few years ago. The sons are Earnest in Detroit, Martin in U.S.A., Harold on the homestead and Peter of Kinkora. The pallbearers were: Messrs Damien Duffy, Hugh J. McIver, Leo Hughes, James McCardle, Bert McCardle, Leonard Murphy.

The sympathy of a large circle of friends goes out to the bereaved family.

Charges U. S. Senate Bill Aids Profiteers

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 7 —(AP)— Treasury counsel Randolph Paul charged tonight that the $2,000,000,000-plus tax bill scheduled to come before the Senate next week started out to be a revenue measure but "is now in large part a measure to appropriate public funds for 'relief' of war profiteers and others."

Paul said in an address prepared for delivery to the Indiana State Bar Association that the measure as it stands is "a tragic failure" because, he argued:

1. It does not raise enough revenue. (The treasury asked for $10,500,000,000.)

2. It fails to reduce inflationary pressure.

3. "It denies to more than 50,000,000 taxpayers the simplification of tax law to which they are entitled."

4. "The bill, particularly the Senate Finance Committee version makes a dead letter" of the contract renegotiation act designed to prevent exorbitant war profits.

Of the measure's revenue yield, Paul argued that the house bill would raise about $2,100,000,000 a year but that the bar to the automatic rise in social security levies would reduce prospective receipts by $1,400,000,000.

This arithmetic is at variance with the Senate Finance Committee It estimated new revenue in its measure at $2,284,000,000 without regard to social security levies. Paul's text did not elaborate on his figures.

Australian Meat Rationing Based On Canadian Plan

SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA, Jan. 7—(CP CABLE) — Australia's meat rationing plan, which goes into effect Jan. 17, is based on the Canadian system, giving different coupon values to different grades of meat.

Details of the plan, announced today, show that it is on a more liberal scale than Canada's, providing 1½ to four pounds of meat weekly, according to the type bought, for all persons nine years old and up.

As in Britain, sausages, sausage meat, all offal meats like kidney, liver, tripe, tongue, brains and sweetbreads, as well as rabbit, canned meats, ham and bacon, will not require coupons. As a result of rationing, however, authorities predict these will be much more diffucult to obtain normally.

The plan will not apply to a small section of people living in some remote areas, Keane said consideration would be given to cases of hardship among certain groups of heavy workers.

Children under nine years of age will receive half the regular ration allowance.

Textile Workers to Reorganize

MANCHESTER, England —(CP) — A committee of United Textile Factory Workers Association which has been studying the question 18 months has recommended socialization of the Lancashire cotton industry and drastic reorganization to meet post-war foreign competition and provide security of employment.

Women have assumed new responsibilities today and they look forward to a share in the new freedoms of tomorrow.

Already, in many parts of the world, women are increasingly conscious of the need for improvement in their legal status. British feminists are up in arms over a recent decision of an English court denying the right of a married woman to keep for herself any money she might save from her household allowance or from lodgers in her home.

They were also stirred over another ruling by an English judge asserting that a husband as master of his house has the right to decide who shall cross its threshold and to deny his wife the privilege of guests of whom he does not approve, even though they be her relatives. In Canada, the Provincial Council of Women at Toronto recently decided to make a study of the law of 1872 covering the financial status of married women, with a view of having it amended to suit present conditions.

Australian women are considering an appeal to their government for a weekly endowment for wives on the ground that economic independence promotes better citizen-ship, while a dependent economic status denies liberty, opportunity and justice to the homemaker.

In the United States, the Equal Rights Amendment is before Congress and women in many States still seek removal of legal restrictions.

But no freedom comes just for the asking. It has to be won. Women must be prepared for these new responsibilities that they aspire to assume. They must learn not to demand equality on the one hand and to take advantage of their sex for special privileges on the other. But these war years have seen proof of the progress of women and an increased confidence in their capabilities. The right reward will follow.

NURSE DESCRIBES LIFE IN AFRICA

A CANADIAN ARMY HOSPITAL SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Jan. 9—(CP)— Nursing Sister Frances Tetlow of Welland, Ont., doesn't look on frontline nursing as either adventurous or dangerous, even if her tropical experiences have landed her in hospital.

Jaundice and a form of arthritis that crippled her knee brought her back to England but she limps cheerfully around the hospital on crutches thinking longingly of her life in a tent hospital on the African desert.

"It took them a long time to convince me I should come back to England," she said. "Maybe they're right- -but I would like to have stayed in North Africa. It wasn't exactly exciting- -and there was nothing dangerous about it."

Miss Tetlow was with a Canadian General Hospital that moved to Africa in July. There were no buildings, so they set up their hospital under canvas on baked earth that turned to gumbo everytime it rained.

It was so hot in the daytime the nurses wore khaki uniforms of light drill, and so cold at night they were heavy battledress.

"It didn't take us long to get used to the life," she said. "The food was good. And we didn't see any activity- -only a few planes at the time of the invasion of Sicily.

"Wounded Canadian boys coming back from the field were glad to have Canadian nurses. They said we talked their language."

Beside her bed was a beaming rubber "Ferdinand the Bull"- -"He goes everywhere with me, ever since I left Canada," she said.

"You know- -the more I see of the world, the better I like Canada. Africa is interesting, but it isn't as romantic as we thought it would be - -it's mostly smelly Arab towns."

Miss Tetlow, who trained in Toronto General Hospital came to England with the first group of Canadian nurses in June, 1940.

Inspector J. Fripps is Promoted

(Vancouver Exchange)

Inspector James Fripps, R. C. M. P., was among those to whom New Year's orders brings promotion and further honors. The veteran police officer was promoted to superintendent, and named head of the Criminal Investigation Branch of the force in British Columbia.

Superintendent Fripps is especially well-known in this province, where he has served for many years. He made a very splendid record, first as a member and later as head of the famous narcotics squad of the R. C. M. P. Hundreds of traffickers and scores of smuggling channels have been stopped by the activities of the force under "Jim" Fripps.

JOINED IN 1909.

He is a native of Nova Scotia, and joined the force at Regina in 1909

Since then, with exception of a period overseas during the last war, he has served Canada with the mounted force. He came to Vancouver first in 1919 and remained here until January, 1932, at which time he was sent to the eastern seaboard with especial interest in smuggling. At that time he was promoted to detective-inspector.

CONGRATULATIONS

In 1938 he was transferred back to Vancouver from Charlottetown, P. E. Island, in charge of C.I.B., which office he will continue to administer.

Congratulations of a very wide circle of friends on this coast are today interfering somewhat with the ordinary routine procedure of business in the new superintendent's office.

Friendship Ties Are Strengthened

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4 —(CP)— A number of outstanding events, climaxed by the exchange of ambassadors in early November, made 1943, a banner year in the progress of Canadian-American relations.

Not the least of these events and probably the most spectacular was the visit of President Roosevelt to Ottawa in August, after his conference at Quebec with Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

This was the fulfillment of a long standing promise the president had made to himself and to Prime Minister Mackenzie King on each of the latter's frequent visits to the White House in the war years.

Of course Mr. Roosevelt was no stranger to Canada, having spent his holidays since childhood at the Roosevelt summer place in New Brunswick. He had visited Canada on several occasions since assuming office. Only last summer, just prior to the Quebec conference, he had a fishing holiday at Manitoulin Island.

But the August visit to Ottawa was the highlight of all his Canadian visits—his first to the capital—and Ottawa gave him an ovation long to be remembered.

Increasing Solidarity

But there have been more tangible evidences of increasing solidarity between the two nations in 1943, some of them new and some a continuation of relations begun earlier in the war.

One was the election of Agriculture Minister Gardiner to represent Canada on the combined foods board with the United States and the United Kingdom, which brought Canada closer within the councils of both countries.

Another was the election of L. B. Pearson, minister-counsellor at the Canadian Legation in Washington, as chairman of the all-important standing committee on supplies to advise the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration which will be conducted from Washington under direction of Herbert H. Lehman, former governor of New York.

Less spectacularly, but none the less effectively, numerous interchanges of thoughts and plans are being carried forward every day with Canadian cabinet ministers and heads of branches visiting Washington regularly and American departmental and board heads going to Ottawa.

Last Nov. 11 there was a simultaneous announcement in Ottawa and Washington that the two countries would exchange ambassadors.

This meant that the Canadian legation in Washington and the American legation in Ottawa, after about 16 years of operation, would become embassies.

Ray Atherton, distinguished career diplomat who had gone to Ottawa only a short time before as American minister, was at once nominated by President Roosevelt as first United States ambassador to Canada and the senate confirmed the appointment without question

Ambassador to U. S.

Hon. Leighton McCarthy, former Toronto business man and onetime member of parliament who came out of retirement at 71 to become Canadian minister to the United States on Feb. 27, 1941, was given credentials as the King's ambassador for Canada in the United States, but actual presentation of his credentials was long delayed by the absence of President Roosevelt at the Cairo and Teheran conferences.

The year brought further additions to the rapidly growing Canadian representation in Washington, crowding the legation building on Massachusetts Ave. and the annex at the rear, an old apartment building facing on "N" street N. W.

A short distance away, at 1205 15th street, another four storey apartment house have been transformed into an office building for Canada. There J. B. "Jack" Carswell, Munition Minister Howe's chief representative in Washington acts for Canada in the numerous procurement and distribution activities involving both countries.

There too the Washington branch of the Wartime Information Board functions under direction of J. Hugh Campbell, on loan from the Canadian Pacific Railway publicity branch, to see that Americans learn all they desire to know about Canada.

Many other Canadian officials are scattered throughout the capital serving on various standing committees and boards in which the two countries are engaged in joint war efforts.
