like to talk about in Demerara, rather than the production of bauxite -- aluminum ore -- and greenheart timber, the stuff that is so tough marine parasites can't chew it. On the strength of re-arrangement programs, production for both for the first quarter of 1937 is more than for all of last year. That flying boat veering south likely ties up to a greenheart bauxite in its home port. It's a bet bauxite derivatives are in the strength and lightness of its wings.

GUANA GLORIES IN ITS SEAWALL MOLASSES BUILT

GEORGETOWN, British Guiana, June 21.—(CP)—They call it Demerara. It's a rum, a river and a county, and through habit and use has become a designation, almost official, for the whole of British Guiana. Mention in Trinidad that you are going over to British Guiana tomorrow and they say: "Oh, you're visiting Demerara." Currency notes issued by Barclay's Bank bear the printed word Demerara above British Guiana.

But actually it is just a county through which the River Demerara flows to the salt-laden sea at Georgetown, Essiquibo and Berbice. Consider themselves quite as important. In fact, Berbicians call their county "the ancient country". They were not conquered when the British were warring with the Dutch more than 100 years ago. Hence capitulation on terms, and still worries about those terms.

when any question of constitutional changes comes up. However, the whole country is Demerara to the outsider -- the seaman loafing along Main Street Avenue, the coffee planter flying south by Pan American Airways, the adventurer reaching the interior by virtue of flyer Art Williams, and the tourist who gets taken to look at a seawall made of rock and molasses and to hear a band that couldn't be abolished by a governor.

The band was slated to go in an economy drive, but this particular band is the pride of the colony. It made a hit on an English tour. "Better than anything in the West Indies," they tell you. Public opinion was too strong. Wednesday and Saturday nights you can hear it playing by the rock and molasses seawall that keeps out the Atlantic. They say the band will last as long as the wall, built by slave labor in the Dutch days, which couldn't be duplicated today at any imaginable cost. That is the sort of thing they
